"EASY RESTS THE HEAD THAT WEARS THIS CROWN!"

On the next page you'll see why Mr. M-G-M Exhibitor enjoys sweet dreams. Variety's Survey, which it states has been "checked and double-checked" is further incontestible evidence of M-G-M Leadership. There are constant and understandably sincere claims of leadership in the industry, but to showmen all that matters is the final accounting at the end of each year—year after year! M-G-M's Friendly Customers know the score from their own records, now verified by Variety's report. We list on the next page some of the M-G-M Top Hits of the Future. Stick with M-G-M and rest easy!

Time For Strike Action

From an observation point 3,000 miles or so from the strike mess in Hollywood, it appears that the most sensible method of dealing with the dispute is for all the studios to shut down until the warring unions settle the matter among themselves.

We believe it was Herbert Yates who made this suggestion originally during the strike last year and at that time we thought it was a swell idea. Now it sounds even more sensible when you read what is going on out there and the grave possibilities for more rough-house and blood-shed.

Obviously, the situation cannot continue indefinitely. It is not only getting tougher to continue production but, undoubtedly, threatens to inflate already high costs to astronomical figures. Therefore, it may be better and cheaper all around for the lots to close down and throw the whole mess right into the laps of the workers and wage earners who may decide they are suffering for the dispute in which they have had no hand and no voice.

With the current backlog of product available by practically every company, there is no reason to believe that the flow of pictures to the nation's theatres will be impaired for a long time to come.

An Amazing Gross

No less an honorable person than Al Wilkie of Paramount is responsible for the information that "Two Years Before The Mast" racked up the amazing total of over $84,000 for its first six and a half days at the Rivoli Theatre, New York.

Since it is no secret that even the Paramount high command did not consider this production to be anything resembling a record breaker, the picture's box-office performance is all the more surprising and if its present pulling power is any criterion, exhibitors playing "Two Years Before The Mast" can set their sights for exceptional business.

Speaking Of Admission Prices

Those critics of admission prices at the Times Square first runs are cordially invited to stroll over to Madison Square Garden and take a gander at the box-office scale for a good (we hope) old-fashioned (we're sure) Rodeo.

Here's the same old hoopla western clambake that used to rate a two-bit to six-bit admission price and most of the time wasn't worth much more even when it turned out to be good.

You boys throughout the country may not believe it—and we wouldn't blame you—but the box-office top is six bucks (not six-bits) with no reduction for the kids except for the mid-week matinees when they let the youngsters in for half price. But in your wildest imagination did you ever expect to pay even half of five or six bucks to take the kids to see a wild west shindig? We didn't.

Not that the current rodeo is original in setting such fantastic admission scales. The circus this past spring charged about the same scale.

Obviously, it is not rustics but rather the big city slickers who are the suckers. And all the time we thought it was just the other way round.

The Right Spirit

W. W. Hinegardener, doorman of a Harrisonburg (Va.) theatre believes in backing up his ideals to the nth degree.

He heard the story of the Variety Clubs and became so excited over the magnificent work being done by the Clubs that he carried on a one-man campaign for Washington's Tent 11 charity subscription activities.

In addition to selling more than fourteen books for the Tent, he bought some subscriptions himself, and, instead of writing his own name on the stubs, he wrote in the Boys' Ranch of Amarillo, Texas, so that fine effort would benefit should any of his tickets turn up as winners.

Then to cap the climax, he told his boss he had some seventy-eight acres of land which he would be happy to deed to any activity that would be helpful in solving the juvenile delinquency problem.

We must add that the inspiration for all this was when he first saw a screening of MGM's "Boys' Ranch" and later heard the story of the Variety Clubs. Here, he decided, was something worth working for and, forthwith, he drove around the country on his own time and at his own expense to help a most worthy cause.

Both Tent 11 in Washington, and the man he works for, should be proud of this great guy. It would be a nicer world and a nicer business if there were more like him.

We tip our hats to Mr. Hinegardener and we think you should, too.

Feature Backlog Estimated at 227

Thirteen distributing companies appear to have a backlog of 227 pictures either in the process of being edited, nearing completion before the camera or stored in the vaults, according to the booking guide records of Showman's Trade Review.

The estimated features which could be released regularly were production stopped by causes such as strikes, follows:

Columbia 19, Eagle Lion 8, MGM 26, Monogram 6, Paramount 31, PRC 4, RKO 28, Republic 20, Screen Guild 4, 20th Century-Fox 16, United Artists 26, Universal 18, Warner Bros. 21.

Paramount Plans to Release 22 Features in 9 Months

Balaban Says Product Must Move Into Theatres Despite Court Plan Difficulties

Announcement that Paramount had a tentative schedule of 22 pictures for the nine month nine day period between Nov. 22, 1945 and Sept. 1, 1946, and a warning that distributors must keep product moving despite the difficulties they might have to surmount under the forthcoming decree, were voiced in New York this week by Paramount Distribution Vice-President Charles M. Reagan and President Barney Balaban respectively.

Reagan made his product announcement together with a pledge that Paramount would release as many pictures as it could successfully handle and the market could absorb at a district and branch managers meeting.

Balaban said there was an audience of 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 waiting to see pitcures and that the exploitation men would have to bring them into the theatres to help meet the anticipated added costs due to new court ordered methods of selling.

(In Boston, Balaban told an STR reporter that experience showed the economic prosperity of the industry followed the general prosperity of the country and that business prospects were very bright and likely to continue so. The motion picture industry is in the consumer goods field and with a low price per unit which caused him to believe, Balaban continued, that business would continue good for some time to come. He refused to express an opinion on the prospects of larger Paramount dividends though he said the outlook for his company in the current quarter was as good, if not better, than at any time in its history.)

Reagan's announcement of Paramount's tentative product program follows:

"Two Years Before the Mast" with Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy, William Bendix, Howard da Silva, Barry Fitzgerald, for general release Nov. 22 as a Thanksgiving picture. "Blue Skies" with Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire, Joan Caulfield, Dec. 27, for Christmas and the New Year.

Pine-Thomas' "I Cover Big Town," with Philip Reed, Hillary Brooke, Robert Lowery and Robert Shayne; "Cross My Heart," with Betty Hutton and Sonny Tufts; Hal Wallis' "The Perfect Marriage," with Loretta Young and David Niven; "California" in Technicolor, with Ray Milland, Barbara Stanwyck, Barry Fitzgerald; Pine-Thomas' "Seven Were Saved," Catherine Craig, Russell Hayden.

"Dear Ruth," with Joan Caulfield, William Holden, Edward Arnold; "Ladies' Man," with Eddie Bracken, Cass Daley, Virginia Welles, Virginia Field. Also Pine-Thomas' "Danger Street," with Jane Withers, Robert Lowery, Bill Edwards.

Hope Enterprises' "My Favorite Brunette," with Bop Hope, Dorothy Lamour; "The Trouble With Women," with Ray Milland, Teresa Wright, Brian Donlevy; "Calcutta," with Alan Ladd, William Bendix, Gail Russell.

"Easy Come, Easy Go," produced by Kenneth Macgowan, directed by John Farrow, with Sonny Tufts, Diana Lynn, Barry Fitzgerald, Dick Foran; 'Welcome Stranger," directed by Elliott Nugent, with Bing Crosby, Barry Fitzgerald, Joan Caulfield; "Perils of Pauline," in Technicolor, with Betty Hutton, John Lund, Constance Collier, Billy DeWolfe, Bill Demarest; Pine-Thomas' "Jungle Flight," with Robert Lowery, Ann Savage.

"The Imperfect Lady," with Teresa Wright, Ray Milland, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Anthony Quinn, Reginald Owen; Hal Wallis' "Desert Town," with John Hodiak, Lizabeth Scott, Burt Lancaster, Mary Astor.

Columbia Net $3,450,489.94

Columbia's net earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, after authorized deductions amounted to $3,450,489.94 in comparison to a net for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945 of $1,945,167.67.

Pickets, Police Clash; Studio Strike May Spread

Clubs, rocks and bottles went flying this week as the worst fight in the current Conference of Studio Union-called strike against Paramount, RKO, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Warners' and MGM, broke out before the MGM studios in Culver City.

The strike, a result of a jurisdictional fight on set erection (Showmen's Trade Review, Sept. 28, p. 4) between the CSU United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, threatened to spread to the presently uninvolved studios of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, an organization of some 20 units the majority of which distribute through United Artists. Both unions involved are members of the American Federation of Labor.

The CSU called a strike when its painters and carpenters were reported ejected from the studios for refusing to work IATSE sets. The IATSE reportedly has demanded that CSU members be ejected from all studios, including those of the SIMP and CSU anticipating an acceptance, was preparing to extend its picket lines.

Two SIMP members—Hal Roach and Sam Goldwyn—reportedly discharged CSU carpenters and painters for refusing to touch IATSE sets. A third SIMP studio, Vanguard, stopped work on "Little Women" and "The Paradine Case" in order to maintain a "neutral" position in the strike. The Vanguard statement pointed out that AFL President William Green has termed the jurisdictional and that during the past strike Vanguard had stopped work on "Duel in the Sun" in order not to conflict with

Auctions Can't Be Worse; Try 'Em Says Exhibitor

Declaring that he did not see how film buying conditions could be any worse for him under the forthcoming court decree than they are at present, A. E. Landieth, owner of the 600 seat Lyric Theatre for Negroes at Portsmouth, Va., this week declared himself emphatically in favor of giving auction selling a trial.

Landieth's views, a surprise after the general exhibitor reaction against auction selling, are probably the first expression of exhibitor opinion in favor of auction selling. There is no indication as to whether or not his views represent those of an inarticulate minority of small house operators.

The exhibitor said that he had lost second run in his territory to two chain operated oppositions and that under the auction plan he might have at least a chance to bid for a run.

Asked if he did not fear that bidding would run his rentals up, he replied that he had considered that but that he would be willing to take on added costs for a better run.

"Anyway," he added, "if my opposition outbid me, I'd know they were actually paying more than I am. Right now I'm not so sure that I'm not paying more for pictures third run than they are for prior runs. The way I feel about it, we can't do any worse than we are doing now."

To Ted Gamble, board chairman of the American Theatres Association, who had polled him for his opinion on intervention against auction selling, Landieth wrote:

"I'm not in favor of ATA or anyone else opposing auction selling of pictures. . . . Everything has been all right with you and the whole crowd as long as it did not affect your business. Now that the court says the picture will be bid theatre by theatre, etc., and that is the only fair method . . . you want to throw the whole thing out and go back to the regular way of doing business. I'd like to have you explain to me how we are going to be helped until we have some radical changes?"

Exhibitors Favor ATA Intervention by Majority

Exhibitors apparently were overwhelmingly in favor of the move made by the American Theatres Association to intervene against auction selling in the anti-trust suit.

The ATA, which polled both members and non-members, for their opinion, found strong support for its action, it said, though it was noticed in New York that RKO theatres had withdrawn from the ATA. The RKO move was said to be temporary due to the fact that the theatre circuit's parent company is a defendant in the suit in which ATA seeks to intervene.

The ATA poll, which ATA officials said came largely from non-members, showed incomplete returns 3,599 theatres approving the ATA move to intervene in the suit and 176 not approving.

Strike Strikes Box Office

A strike of street car and bus operators, in effect since Tuesday, cut materially into attendance at downtown theatres of Columbus, Ohio. The carmen are asking shorter hours and more pay and are conferring at present with the company.

Wants Trade Practice Writs Instead of Auction, Divorce

MPTOA Files Suggestions To Justice Dept. Hearings Start Oct. 21 in N. Y.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, this week formally asked the Department of Justice to appeal all phases of whatever decree may be issued by the statutory court in New York and to seek injunctions prohibiting such trade practices to which the Government objects instead of trying to establish auction selling or theatre divorcement.

Other suggestions made by the MPTOA, which is acting only in behalf of its unaffiliated membership, as contained in a letter from General Counsel Herman Levy to Special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright, are:

A provision against over buying and a guarantee of "some run." (Levy contends that a financially powerful exhibitor can rid himself of competition under auction bidding by either overbuying or by overbidding until he has ruined his competitor.)

That arbitrators, if used, be men possessing "active industry background and experience."

A 20 per cent cancellation clause if more than one picture at a time is licensed, the cancellation to be effective for 10 days "from the time the picture has been made available for booking and from the time of bidding."

A system of bid inspection, in event auction selling is established, whereby the highest bid be open for inspection to other bidding exhibitors and the consideration of an exhibitor's reputation, his theatre, etc., in deciding the award.

Lawyers, this week, of the defendants and the would-be intervenors were working on drafts for their briefs in anticipation of the hearings before the three judge court which start in New York on Oct. 21.

All the defendants except Columbia are expected to file briefs. Columbia has indicated that it will stand on its original memorandum which denies any monopoly or undue restraint of trade and seeks to have the court outlaw buying combines.

Scheduled to be heard first are the two intervenors—the American Theatres Association and some 30 exhibitors of the Confederacy of Southern Associations, who claim they will be affected by the forthcoming decree and who attack its proposed provisions on auction selling, on the ground that they will either legalize monopoly

U Joins Columbia In Motion To Stop Buying Outfits; Refuses N. O. Firm

Universal had joined Columbia this week in seeking to have buying combines declared illegal by the forthcoming statutory court's anti-trust decree.

The Universal move followed rumors throughout the country which appear to have been verified only in New Orleans, that the film company would refuse to sell such outfits.

A check by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW failed to reveal any action taken by Universal to stop selling such buyers, excepting one instance where the Independent Booking Company produced correspondence from a former Universal district manager stating that it felt the forthcoming decree would not permit Universal to deal with buying outfits.

In the findings of fact which it submitted last week to the court, Universal leveled the charge that buying combines were "unduly restrictive of interstate trade and commerce . . . and therefore illegal." The papers submitted also asked the court to dismiss the complaint against Universal, asserting that it had not been guilty of conspiracy to restrain or monopolize trade.

Universal's "findings of fact" asserts, among other things, that there is no evidence to prove that: (1) Universal conditioned sale of one picture upon another; (2) refused to sell part of its product to an exhibitor who did not want all of it or charged him "disproportionate rentals" for what he wanted; (3) licensed first or prior runs to theatres which would not ordinarily have been selected by any unaffiliated distributor or acted "concertedly with any other defendant or with any exhibitor to unreasonably restrain the trade of any subsequent run theatre through the fixing of clearance for prior run theatres."

The "findings of fact" further assert that Universal did not at the time own, lease or

MPTOA Poll Continues

The percentage of exhibitors against auction selling, arbitration on "bids, clearances, runs," etc., use of non-industry arbitrators, increased slightly this week, while that in favor of theatre divorcement took an almost imperceptible decrease in the latest figures of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America's poll of exhibitor views on certain phases of the anti-trust suit opinion.

The latest returns:

Auction selling—19 in favor, 268 against.

Arbitration on "bids, clearances, runs"—62 in favor, 212 against.

Use of non-industry arbitrators—39 in favor, 242 against.

Theatre divorcement 178 in favor, 106 against.

The poll, which to date covers 917 theatres in the District of Columbia and 42 states, closes Oct. 4.

PICTURE PEOPLE

Some top flight film men made quite a get together for Arthur Krim last Friday as they gathered at the 21 in New York to take part in National Screen's dinner of tribute to Krim, a former treasurer, general counsel and director of the company. The event was to celebrate his presidency of Eagle Lion pictures. He was presented with a gold watch.

Francis (Off Record) Harmon, vice-president of the Motion Picture Association, was host at a luncheon given by the Motion Picture Export Association in honor of H. L. Woltersom, who heads the Rotterdamsche Bank, which is not profanity but an outfit which is filing a bid for the Asta Theatre on behalf of a Dutch-American syndicate now being organized.

United Artists Producer Andrew Stone, whose "Bachelor's Daughters" opens on Oct. 5 at the Gotham Theatre, came in from Hollywood to be present at the occasion. Another UA producer, Burgess Meredith, arrived earlier on business.

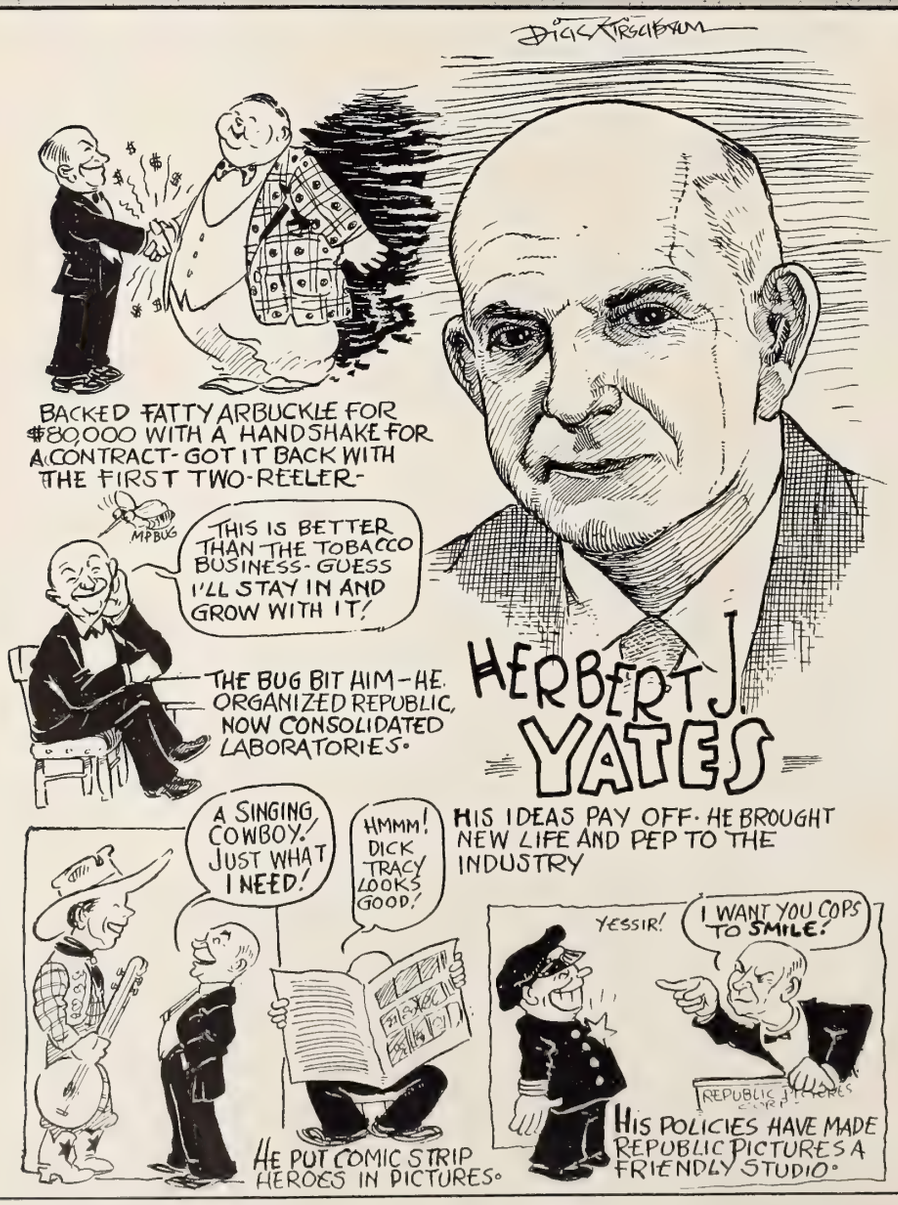
John Monohan, whose "The Upturned Glass" is the latest James Mason vehicle, is also finishing a biography on the actor which will be published by World Film Publications, Ltd.

Edward L. Hyman, Paramount Theatres Service Corp. vice-president, is touring the country on inspection.

Tom Duane joined Vanguard Films this week as New England and Canadian sales representative. Duane, who will headquarter in Boston is scheduled to start a tour of key cities in connection with "Duel in the Sun."

Columbia has set the premiere of "Gallant Journey" in New York for Oct. 9 at the Criterion.



Warner Bros. Australian Managing Director Stanley Higginson is due in New York Oct. 7.

M. J. Weisfeldt, president of Criterion Picture Corp., is fathering an idea to make motion picture shorts of the annual reports of corporations. The plan is to show them in schools, colleges, brokerage offices and the like.

Suzanne Warner who beats the drum for Hughes productions, was off to England this week to handle exploitation for "The Outlaw" there.

M. A. J. Tim Healy has been appointed mid eastern manager for the Motion Picture Association and will headquarter in Cairo where he will spread the Johnston gospel.

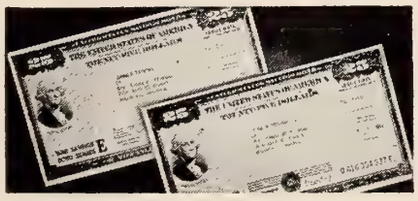
Save the Booze

Press agents taking news reporters or photographers out on stories to which their editors have assigned them do not need to entertain "with liquor" Joe Costa, president of the National Press Photographers Association of America told the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their first winter season luncheon in New York Friday.

Costa said he appeared as a speaker before the AMPA, among other reasons, to make correct this misapprehension. He also said photographers were open to suggestions on pictures but press agents should not take it to heart if it developed that a photographer might like to try ideas of his own. He added he was president of an organization that was seeking to have producers portray newsmen realistically without creating an impression that a glass of liquor was standard equipment for the press.

America finds a new, easy way to save



OUT of the war has come one blessing—a lesson in thrift for millions of those who never before had learned to save.

Enrolled under the Payroll Savings Plan in thousands of factories, offices, and stores, over 27 million American wage earners were purchasing "E" Bonds alone at the rate of about 6 billion dollars worth a year by the time V-J Day arrived.

With War Bond Savings automatically deducted from their wages every week, thrift was "painless" to these wage earners. At the end of the war, many who never before had bank accounts could scarcely believe the savings they held.

The moral was plain to most. Here was a new, easy way to save; one as well suited to the future as to the past. Result: Today, millions of Americans are continuing to buy, through their Payroll Savings Plan, not War Bonds, but their peacetime equivalent—U. S. Savings Bonds.

From war to peace! War Bonds are now known as U. S. Savings Bonds, bring the same high return—$25 for every $18.75 at maturity.

Out of pay—into nest eggs! A wage earner can choose his own figure, have it deducted regularly from earnings under Payroll Savings Plan.

New homes to own! Thousands of new homes, like this, will be partially paid for through Bonds wisely accumulated during the next five to ten years.

Keeping cost of living in check! Buying only needed plentiful goods and saving the money which would bid up prices of scarce goods keeps your cost of living from rising. Save automatically—regularly.

Weekly Savings	SAVINGS AND INTEREST ACCUMULATED In 1 Year	In 10 Years
$ 3.75	$195.00	$2,163.45

Says U. S. Films Fail In Foreign Relations Job

American motion pictures are failing to present a correct picture of American life and thought to France and other European nations, "March of Time" Producer Richard de Rochemont said in New York Monday upon his return from abroad.

Richard de Rochemont

De Rochemont said it was vitally important for world peace and harmony for nations who had elected to live under a democratic capitalist system such as ours and who depended in great extent upon us, should get a correct picture and not gain the impression that we are a nation living in "luxury, opulence and frivolity."

"The films," he said, "aren't doing the job they could do at the present time," adding that a large number of exportations to Europe create the impression "that Americans are rich, agreeable, half wits who don't know what the score is."

"In a way," he continued, "I feel a little guilty about the 'March of Time.' We made and distributed in Europe a picture called 'Night Club Boom.' There was a great deal of entertainment in it but if it appeared on a program with a musical, you can imagine what an impression it would create about America."

De Rochemont suggested that American producers exercise greater selectivity in the features they send abroad, claiming they would suffer no loss thereby since not all their product could enter the majority of European situations anyway. Objectionable features in others could be eliminated through editing, a system particularly adaptable to France where, he said, American features ran longer than the exhibitors preferred anyway.

The importance of the film, he continued, lies in the fact that it is the only means of communicating ideas which is almost certain to reach the public in the same form as it left America, while news reports can be distorted through twisting or editing. Newsreels consist largely of local material with American clips.

Move 20th-Fox Ad Meet From Oct. 15 to Dec. 28

Postponement of the 20th Century-Fox four-day national advertising meeting of field, home office and studio representatives from Oct. 15 to Dec. 28 in order to permit those who would attend to work out pre-release advertising plans on forthcoming product, was announced in New York Wednesday by Ad and Publicity Chief Charles Schlaifer.

Schlaifer said he would visit several key cities to discuss exploitation with exhibitors and to localize campaigns on several pictures including "My Darling Clementine," which is to have its world premiere at the San Francisco Fox on Oct. 16, prior to opening in 100 situations.

Appointed 20th-Fox Counsel

Otto E. Koegel of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey, has been appointed chief counsel for 20th Century-Fox, President Spyros Skouras announced Wednesday.

Liquor, Smokes Lead Amusements

Liquor and smokes led amusements in the latest tax return report from the Collector of Internal Revenue in which all three showed almost fantastic increases for the two-month period of July-August, 1946, over the same two-month period in 1945.

The collectors figures follow:

Source of Revenue	Receipts from July 1, 1945 to Aug. 31, 1945	Receipts from July 1, 1946 to Aug. 31, 1946	Increase
Amusements	$66,621,959.71	$79,785,022.70	$13,164,062.99
Tobacco	$192,129,642.49	$205,880,718.89	$13,751,255.40
Liquor	$396,956,109.16	$475,027,756.17	$78,071,647.01

Columbus, Overseated, Faces Further Increase

Columbus, Ohio, which has a reputation now of being one of the most overseated cities of the nation bids fair to step up a place or so next year when no less than 13,642 seats will have been added to the present total of 36,243.

The added seats will be provided by six new large suburban theatres and by at least three new drive-ins.

Greater Columbus at present has 51 theatres, including two drive-ins. The added houses will boost the already high average of one seat for every 11 persons to one seat for every eight persons in the area.

Youngstein Named Eagle Lion Ad Head

Max E. Youngstein this week was appointed director of advertising and publicity for the American Eagle Lion Films, according to an announcement from Vice-President and General Sales Manager A. W. Schwalberg.

Youngstein, formerly assistant director of advertising, publicity and exploitation with 20th Century-Fox and publicity director for the Motion Picture and special event section of the War Finance Division, United States Treasury Department, during World War II, has also been associated with Story Productions and the public relations firm of Richard Condon.

$1,000?—No Objection To This Auction Sale

What is believed to be an all time high for a pair of world series tickets went toward the Jewish Appeal Fund in Boston this week when John Ford of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatre circuit bid $1,000 in a form of auction selling to which no exhibitor present objected.

Ford's bid came when Sam Pinanski offered to auction a pair of the series tickets he had. The occasion raised more than $150,000 of the $250,000 Boston goal.

Republic Sells '46-47 Program to Famous

Republic this week closed a deal in Toronto for its 1946-47 program to play the 130 theatres of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Vice-President and General Sales Manager James R. Grainger announced in New York. Grainger flew to Canada to sit in on the deal with A. W. Perry, president of Empire Films, Republic distributors in Canada.

Pioneer Dinner Nov. 20

The Annual Harvest Dinner of the Picture Pioneers will be held Wednesday evening, November 20th, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York.

May By-Pass Exhibitor Units for Dimes Drive

That a collection drive for the 1947 March of Dimes might by-pass such exhibitor organizations as the American Theatres Association, national Allied, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and the Conference of Independent Exhibitors Associations (all of which are opposed to collections for any single charity), seemed possible in New York this week as plans for a March of Dimes collection campaign appeared to be quietly progressing.

Official sources would not comment and the replies to the wires in which Loew's Inc., President Nicholas Schenck asked chairmen of former infantile paralysis drives, their opinion of a 1947 drive, were unobtainable due to Shenck's absence from his office Wednesday.

In some exhibitor circles it was believed that if Shenck's former chairmen believe that there should be a March of Dimes collection, plans to hold the drive at its usual time will be carried out, without necessarily consulting exhibitor organizations committed to other policies.

This view gained some ground when it was learned that the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis appeared to be discussing its drive directly with industry leaders and that no further conversations seemed to have been held with exhibitor organizations.

Pa. Cities May Seek Admission Taxes

That Pennsylvania municipalities would seek an act by the State Legislature authorizing them to establish an amusement admission tax seemed likely this week as the matter was discussed by the League of Third Class Cities in Harrisburg.

One proposal would be for a minimum tax of one cent and a maximum of five cents. The reason for studying these taxes was said to be with a view of meeting wage increases for city employes and increased municipal governmental costs.

Print Shortage on Reissues

Print shortages on reissues apparently are holding up playing time in some spots of the Chicago territory, Paramount Exchange Manager Hal Stephens said last week. Stephens declared that the demand to run "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Jungle Love" is so heavy that he is running short of prints.

Will Fight Fraud Suit

Van A. Nomikos this week said in Chicago that he would fight the suits preferred against him and his companies charging fraudulent returns on percentage pictures. The Chicago exhibitor denied any fraudulent returns were made.

have interests in any theatre.

Universal, however, the petition says did in some instances encourage exhibitors to open theatres to run Universal product and would give such enterprises franchises. It further states that in some 41 out of 92 key cities Universal had to sell to affiliated theatres to get first runs, but that in the remainder in some instances licensed product to independent first runs and where it did not it was because the independent would not offer terms equivalent to the affiliated theatre.

Reports that Universal had refused to sell buying combines recently had been spreading throughout the country. No evidence was found to support this excepting from New Orleans, where Ernest Landaiche, head of the Independent Booking Company, a buying oufit linked with the Joy Houck interests, told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW that Universal had reufsed to do business with him.

In support of his statement, Landaiche made public a letter sent him by Harry Graham, at the time southern district manager for Universal but at present no longer connected with the company.

The letter dated Aug. 9, is addressed to Landaiche. It reads:

"Dear Ernest:—I note your letter to Mr. O'Neill (E. L. O'Neill, Universal New Orleans exchange manager) of Aug. 5, regarding a new theatre being constructed in Thibodaux, La.

"According to our interpretation of the pending consent decree, we are not permitted to negotiate with an agent if that agent repreesnts more than one owner.

"Under the circumstances, we are not in a position to discuss product with you for this situation."

Landaiche also made public a letter from the New Orleans exchange to what he said was one of his clients, Joe D. Lyons of the Ritz Theatre at Lucedale, Miss. Signed by O'Neill, it is dated Aug. 9 and reads:

"With reference to your letter of June 4, advising that the Independent Booking Company will handle the buying of pictures for you—kindly be advised that our interpretation of the consent decree makes it impossible for us to do business with any booking agency which represents more than one owner."

Thomas Bragg Dead

Thomas J. Bragg, president of the General Theatre Investments Company, Ltd., vice-president of Odeon Theatres, secretary-treasurer of General Theatres, treasurer of Empire-Universal Films, as well as a director of Theatre Properties—all of Canada—died at his home in Toronto Sunday. With the late N. L. Nathanson, he had helped develop the Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Seek Jersey Censorship

The New Jersey Methodist Conference this week was on record as approving a request to the state legislature that a censor board be established. In a resolution passed by its 110th annual session, the Conference, said to represent 88,000 Methodists, declared that "recent motion pictures shown in New Jersey have been of an immoral nature." In presenting the resolution, the Rev. G. S. McCleave of Medford, N. J., said he was acting in accordance with a suggestion of Bishop Fred P. Corson of Philadelphia.

Boston Bans 'The Outlaw'; 3-House Showing for N. Y.

Boston this week banned "The Outlaw" from the Hub City while in New York Howard Hughes said he would open the feature for a three theatre day and date run on Oct. 26.

Almost simultaneously the Motion Picture Association amended its answers in federal court at New York to the $5,000,000 suit Hughes has against it seeking to get an injunction to compel the producer to remove the MPA Production Seal of approval from the film. The MPA contends that the picture is still showing in several locations with the code, and also asks for an injunction to prevent distribution of prints with the seal while the suit pends.

The amended action additionally asks for dismissal of the Hughes suit.

The New York houses which Hughes said would play the film were the Gotham, the Republic and the Rialto.

In Boston City Censor Samuel Nesson took a look at "The Outlaw" and declaring that it "glorifies crime and immoral actions and would be against public morality and decency," prohibited its showing.

Ohio Appoints Board To Help Censors

Ohio's Gov. Frank J. Laushe this week was taking steps to appoint a three member advisory board to assist the state censors with recommendations when controversies arise over questionable films. Named to the board are: Mrs. Lester M. Merrit, president of the Women's State Committee of Women's Organization; Dr. Anne B. Whitmer, instructor in English at Ohio State University, and Rabbi Samuel M. Gup of Bryden Road Temple.

French 'Suspend' Quota

Under pressure from the U. S. State Department and American pix companies, the French Government has "temporarily suspended" the application of an administrative regulation which would have curbed sharply the showing of American and other films by permitting distributors to sell more than six films to any single exhibitor during a six-month period.

Buys New Jersey Circuit

Purchase of the St. Cloud Amusement Corporation's stock for $450,000 was announced Tuesday by Harvey B. Newins head of the Intercountry Circuit, Inc. The deal involves the stock and 30-year leases on 15 theatres in northwestern New Jersey.

or add costs to the exhibition business.

Possibly next to be heard will be the Big 5—Paramount, MGM, Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox and RKO—who are to present their ideas of what should be in the decree formally.

The Little 3—Columbia, United Artists and Universal—are not expected to present a united front since United Artists has already asked for a dismissal on the grounds that it does not sell by blocks, condition pictures of fix prices. Columbia and Universal, who due to past policies of selling by block, have similar problems, will probably use similar strategy.

The Government also is reported to oppose the ATA and CSA intervention. Commenting upon this, ATA counsel Thurman Arnold said in Washington:

"As a matter of fact, the Government is apparently worried that there will be a mass meeting of exhibitors and groups waiting to intervene directly with the result that the Department will lose control of the case. The Government, however cannot have a valid objection to our intervention."

Both ATA and CSA have indicated that if the statutory court will not permit their intervention, they will appeal "on their rights" to the United States Supreme Court for permission to intervene.

The Conference of Independent Exhibitors Association closed a meeting in Washington Wednesday under the presidency of Jesse Stern. Allied Counsel General Meyers, who is a CIEA official, declared that the CIEA had a "workable" plan for the court opinion but that it was not frozen and CIEA stood ready to change tactics depending upon the briefs filed by the major defendants.

CIEA presumably will try to work through the Department of Justice. Its plans are understood to center around a previously settled Allied program for theatre divorcement and a possible compromise on a court order against cross licensing.

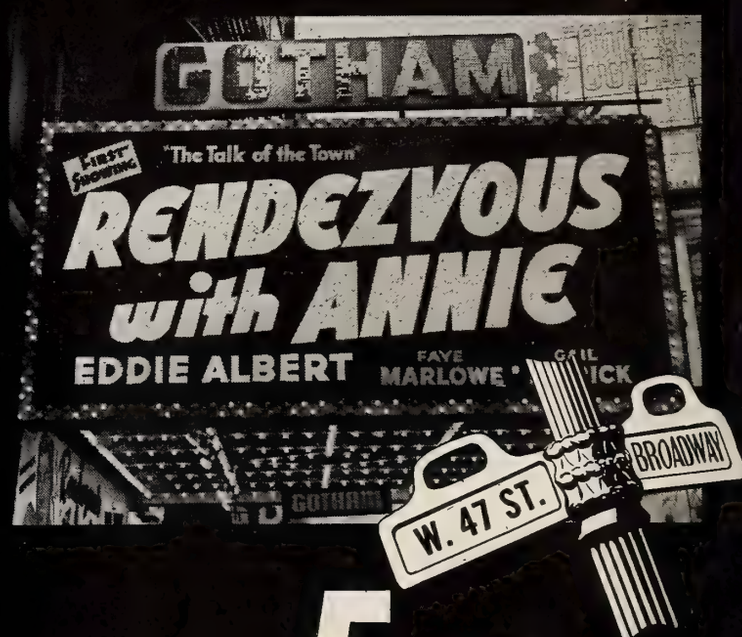
The fight which broke out bfore MGM Tuesday is the worst of the current strike. Witnesses said it started when deputies attempted to clear pickets from a gateway. In the resulting turmoil one deputy was knocked down and had to be rescued at pistol point as almost 1,000 people consisting of pickets and sympathizers, many of whom appeared to be veterans, became involved. Thirty-nine were injured, 13 arrested. An earlier fight before Warners' studios had resulted in overturned automobiles and other damage.



The CSU has filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board charging the seven producers against whom it is presently striking—all members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, affiliated with Eric Johnston's Motion Picture Association—has refused to bargain collectively with its unions and that they have conspired with the IATSE to deprive CSU-members union of their "legal rights" (See p. 40).

Actors, writers and musicians, meanwhile, who are under contract, are crossing picket lines.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Know City Officials and Editors, PAR Advocates

Many thousands of words have been written in manuals, in this publication and in bulletins from zone and district managers to their theatre heads on the subject of fostering close personal relationships with newspaper editors and with civic officials. Not only is this relationship good business for publicity purposes but it very often pays off in the form of favorable legislation and, on the other hand, in preventing unfavorable legislation from becoming law.

Two cases in point have been reported by PAR, a publication of Fox West Coast Theatres, the first of which was about Grafton Roderick, manager of the Towne Theatre in Bell, California. Roderick recently experienced a real kick when he found himself the subject of one of the Bell newspapers editorials. That Roderick stands well with the editor is evidenced by this comment, on the editorial page:

"Folks, if you haven't met G. H. Roderick, I'm sorry for you. He can clown and laugh away more of your heartaches in five minutes than the average psychiatrist can do in a week's time. He's been manager of the Towne Theatre on Eastern Avenue for the past two years, and many's the time I've bought a ticket to see Abbott and Costello or some likely comedian, and left my seat and raced to the lobby to pass the time of day with 'Happy,' a nickname he well deserves. Honestly, he's one of those people you can sincerely say it's a pleasure to know."

Then PAR tells about the instance in Manhattan Beach, California, when Manager Charley Long attended a meeting of his local Chamber of Commerce as a matter of routine. To his surprise a theatre admission tax was recommended for submission to the city council.

City manager Dudley Winscott, District Manager Brown and Mike Sword of the legal department accompanied Long to a meeting with the city council and through their close association with the city fathers were given much better than an even break in presenting their case against the impending tax, resulting in the council canceling the proposal.

This can happen in any town, anywhere. By knowing the city officials well, Long this time was able to make his proclivity for friendship "pay off."

Kids Keep Up With Movies Via Wilson Plan

With a poliomyelitis epidemic in Colorado preventing children from attending the Fox Theatre at La Junta, Manager Bob Wilson has announced a plan to make it possible for the youngsters to catch up with their motion picture fare. When health officials give the "all clear," Wilson will start a series of special student matinee programs, bringing back the good shows the kids under 18 have missed.

Wilson, it is said, has been especially conscientious about the theatre ban on children under 18. Young boys who come to the box-office and declare that they are 18 are asked for their draft registration cards. No card, no admittance.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

GRIM GAME? SURE! BUT IMPORTANT

By Jack Jackson

Let's pretend that you're going to have a fire in your theatre tonight!

I know that it's not a nice game to play and mighty unpleasant to think about, but this business of theatre fires is so all-important that a little time spent on the subject may do us all a lot of good—and may keep us out of that mental hell which is peopled by the innocent but not blameless accessories of the Grim Reaper.

Let's figure it this way.

The very fact that we are in the theatre business and marketing a type of merchandise that is in itself conducive to the abandonment of care and worry on the part of the purchaser kinda puts us on a spot. Our customers—responding to the implications in our ads and the general atmosphere we purposely create—take it for granted that they and their families are 100 per cent safe in our theatres. They buy admission tickets and enter our portals in blind confidence that the management has taken every precaution to guard their safety and that they can enjoy a period of complete relaxation. Mr. and Mrs. Ticket Buyer have the utmost faith in the implied and often advertised security of the theatre; the (supposedly) carefully trained and (supposedly) well-rehearsed efficiency of the theatre service staff; the (supposedly) regular testing of (supposedly) flaw-proof emergency equipment; and the (supposedly) perfect precautions in the way of preventative measures that (supposedly) have been taken by the management to guarantee against hazard of the most horrible of all menace, Fire.

Aren't We Disregarding Our Obligation to Public?

Are we being fair to our customers; to the industry; to our jobs; to our trust; to ourselves if we fail to live up to the expectancy standard? Aren't one heck of a lot of us disregarding our obligation to the public? Aren't we accepting undeserved credit for things we don't do—for precautions we don't take and measures we actually neglect—and in doing so aren't we guilty of taking money from our customers under false pretenses?

Maybe that's not a nice way to put it but I honestly hope that the bluntness will dent the head deep enough to awaken all those who neglect conditions around their theatre.

But let's get back to our game of "Let's pretend you're going to have a fire."

Just how ready are you to cope with the tidal wave of terror that will sweep your customer-packed theatre when the red-tinted, yellow pryotechnics that herald the coming inferno begin darting from behind your screen; from under the stage; the projection booth or some less expected nook or cranny?

How well is your staff trained to evidence the calm and confidence so needed to direct orderly dispatch of the crowd?

How long is it since you had a fire drill for employes?

How many of your employes are capable of directing patrons to the nearest exit—or did you forget to tell the new staff acquisitions about the location of fire escapes and emergency exits?

In what condition are your fire extinguishers?

How long since the hose on the standpipes was tested? Are the panic bolts on the exit doors working? Are the areaways from the theatre clear of rubbish and other obstructions? Are there any gates at the end of those passages where lives may be lost because they cannot be opened easily? What is the condition of the fire escapes? Are they clear of refuse, no broken steps, oiled recently to insure ease and certainly of downward movement? Are the escape landings cluttered? Are measures taken in winter

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Shows for Students Held Advantageous to Theatre

Few exhibitors have tied up with schools and reaped the benefits. Perhaps there is some hesitation on the theatreman's part because the results are not always readily apparent—especially in dollars and cents. Yet tieups with educational institutions can build goodwill, and in the long run that is more important than instant gains.

In a west coast community a few years ago there was a theatreman who believed that there are excellent goodwill-building possibilities in contacting history students and getting them to attend his theatre. Because the City Board of Education firmly believed in visual education, it was easy for the manager to persuade them to underwrite the cost of a series of ten Saturday morning shows.

History students in the sixth, eighth and eleventh grades were admitted free to the shows, all others paid ten cents. Special tickets were obtainable only from teachers.

The showings were really classes, and students had to attend. At the end of the series, examinations were taken and grades made on the strength of the showing made in the examinations.

Dealt with American History

In selecting features and short subjects for the programs, the management made sure that each dealt with a period in American history or with some famous historical character. Furthermore, a department of the local school board directed the publicity of the programs throughout the schools, the PTA, civic groups and newspapers.

While the plan was essentially a goodwill producer, an ample number of additional patrons attended each week to also make it profitable. That it worked to the advantage of the industry there can be little doubt, for it taught children to appreciate motion pictures and had the endorsement of all adult groups.

With the school season now underway in most localities, other exhibitors would do well to grab this idea and put it into effect.

Do Some Eavesdropping

If you want to get an idea of what people think of your theatre, wander through the lobby and lounges, or stand out in front. You'll beam with pride at their remarks, provided they're complimentary. And you'll blush if they're otherwise. But then, maybe you'll learn what's wrong, if anything is, and set about to correct it.

Check on White Streaks

If there are white streaks running either up or down when titles are flashed on the screen, better have your projectionist regulate the speed of the shutter. Either yourself or a member of the house staff should be on duty at every performance to inspect the projection and report any faults to the projectionist.

One Who Will Succeed

The exhibitor who pays as much attention to the physical appearance of his theatre, the quality of his projection, and the comfort of his patrons as he does to the merchandising of attractions he plays is the exhibitor who will succeed.

Patrons Choose Suitable Name

Some time ago this department opined that too little imagination was shown in the naming of theatres—there were too many Ritzes, Strands and Bijous. We suggested then that more attention be given to local names of some historical significance. Now comes a communication from Plainfield, Ill. to the effect that the Anderson circuit wanted to change the name of their Esquire Theatre—there are getting to be too many Esquires, too—so they decided to leave it up to the patrons through a popular voting contest.

You can usually leave it safely up to the public, for the people of Plainfield came up with the name 'The Plains." This, in our estimation, is ideal. It identifies the theatre with the town, has local background, and is short enough for easy use. Above all, it stands out from the usual run of theatre names.

Turner Welcomes Teachers Back to Old Schoolhouse via Letter, Tickets

The job of creating—and keeping—goodwill for a theatre is a never-ending one, for the simple reason that there are so many angles. The women's clubs must be seen to, the parents' associations, the city government, and just folks in the neighborhood. So it is interesting to see how one man works in this respect.

That man is our old friend, Arthur Turner of the H. J. Griffith Theatres in Parsons, Kan. What do you think Turner has been up to now? He has welcomed the teachers back to their work. That's going some—a film theatre welcoming the teachers back to the job at the old schoolhouse.

All the teachers we know are not exactly crazy to get back to the old schoolhouse after a couple of months vacation wherein they could do pretty much as they pleased. But you may be sure that Turner's pleasant letter to the 336 teachers in the Parsons vicinity was much appreciated.

Very few persons can withstand flattery, and that is what Turner threw at them in large doses. Among other things he wrote was the following:

"Welcome home, dear teacher. To those of you who were here last year, we've missed you and are glad you are back. To those of you who have recently returned from the services of our armed forces and others who did their bit in munition factories and other essential war industries, we'd like to extend a special commendation for a job well done and attach special emphasis on the words 'welcome back.' Our hats are off to all teachers for the splendid manner in which you met the world crises during the emergency war years."

He didn't leave anybody out, did he?

The next couple of paragraphs are employed by Turner in telling the teachers how important they are, like this: "for yours is the responsibility of instructing America's youth, moulding them into future guardians of peace. Thus guaranteeing a lasting peace for all the troubletorn world."

That's a big order, and there must be a deal of truth in it, too. The point is that Turner brought home to them things they sincerely believe themselves, but don't always get a chance to hear somebody else say. Finally, the letter concludes with an offer to help the teachers in whatever way possible, and a couple of complimentary tickets are enclosed.

That's Turner's idea of how to get goodwill from the teachers. Do you think he'll get it? You bet your sweet life he will.

Marquee Crash Kills!

That passersby can be killed or injured by a marquee crashing to the street was demonstrated tragically recently when one person was killed and three injured in such an accident affecting the Fox Hippodrome, Sacramento, Calif. The theatre was closed following the accident and further inspection was ordered by the city building inspector before permitting the house to re-open.

Fox leases the Hippodrome from the Briggs estates through the Express Theatres Corporation and has a $200,000 building program awaiting materials. Planned improvements include the marquee and lobby.

Things to Consider If People Cross the Street

If moviegoers attend the house across the street, perhaps it's because your projection is poor, or the seats are hard, or the temperature is poorly regulated, or the rest rooms are unsanitary, or the ushers are discourteous, or the cashier is busy polishing her fingernails, reading a book or talking to a friend.

We could continue to cite reasons, but you should be enterprising enough to conduct an investigation and find out for yourself. Of course, if the quality of your entertainment does not compare with that of your competitor, you can still make your theatre attractive and inviting enough to cause people to want to attend because of the comfortable atmosphere.

Just Look Around You

While doing your best to keep your theatre attractive and inviting, don't overlook your office. There are many unattractive, disarranged offices in otherwise beautiful theatres. What must visitors think? Get busy now and see that your inner sanctum is clean and neat at all times.

Inspection of Prints

Does your projectionist inspect prints before they are used for the regular performances? This should be a ritual in every theatre, and where the attraction is first run you should make certain that the print is in first class condition. In case you run a picture longer than a week, it would be wise to replace the old print with a new one.

SELLING THE PICTURE

time to keep them clear of snow, ice and sleet? Are all your exit lights burning with globes cleaned regularly? Are the ornamental drapes on the exit doors attached to rings so they can be easily shoved aside or are they in fixed position which will present hazard to the mass movement of panic-ridden patrons? Are the set pieces and other displays on the stairs, landings, lobby and foyer so constructed and so placed that they can be easily moved aside where they will not impede the reckless race of terror-driven masses?

I could go on to greater lengths mentioning the possibility of torn carpets, loose bannisters, poorly lighted crossovers and stair landings, the frayed electrical connections to floor lamps, the loose wall sockets, exposed electrical wiring along the floors, poorly laid and stretched stair carpets and no end of other details that would prove a serious hazard to your performing your obligation of caring for the safety of your customers in case of fire.

Haven't Gone Near Booth

If you were to start right now checking on the items mentioned here I venture it would be a month or more before you could honestly claim all details to be in order—and it is safe to say that you would encounter at least another three or four dozen units needing attention while engaged in correcting defects as enumerated here. And, remember, we haven't gone near the booth, the engine room, the back stage area and other departments where the theatre is overly vulnerable to the ravages of the great destroyer.

One of the usually unconsidered peculiarities about fires is that one never knows where, or when, or how, they will start or how far they will progress before discovery. As a consequence the average theatre manager goes about the important business of fire prevention and precaution following a routine procedure that takes into consideration only the obvious places where utmost care is needed. The seldom seen and out-of-the-way places—where the greatest hazard actually exists in this new and modern world—were beyond the ken of the compilers of the rule books of the "horse car era" and continue to be considered as being beyond the pale of even trivial precautions by managers who refuse or fail to use their own think tanks and conclude (since the book doesn't mention these places) that because only a few persons have access to the unmentioned premises no inspection or preventative measures are necessary. Baron Munchausen at the pinnacle of his prevaricating fame was never farther from the truth and here are a few reasons why:

Chemistry has made immense strides in the perfection of cleaning compounds and many of those used by our janitors are in themselves combustible or lend themselves to combustibility either spontaneous or through accidental mixing with refuse or other materials. The practice of laying temporary electrical wiring from wall sockets to special displays, lights, etc., has become so universal in theatre operation that it is doubtful if any house is without this type of hazard. These wires, left laying on the floor between carpet ends and the walls, or strung along base or border boards, can be easily shorted by scuffling feet or the tools of cleaners and unless extreme care is used to prevent the accumulation of dust there is always the possibility of a small spark starting a four-alarm blaze.

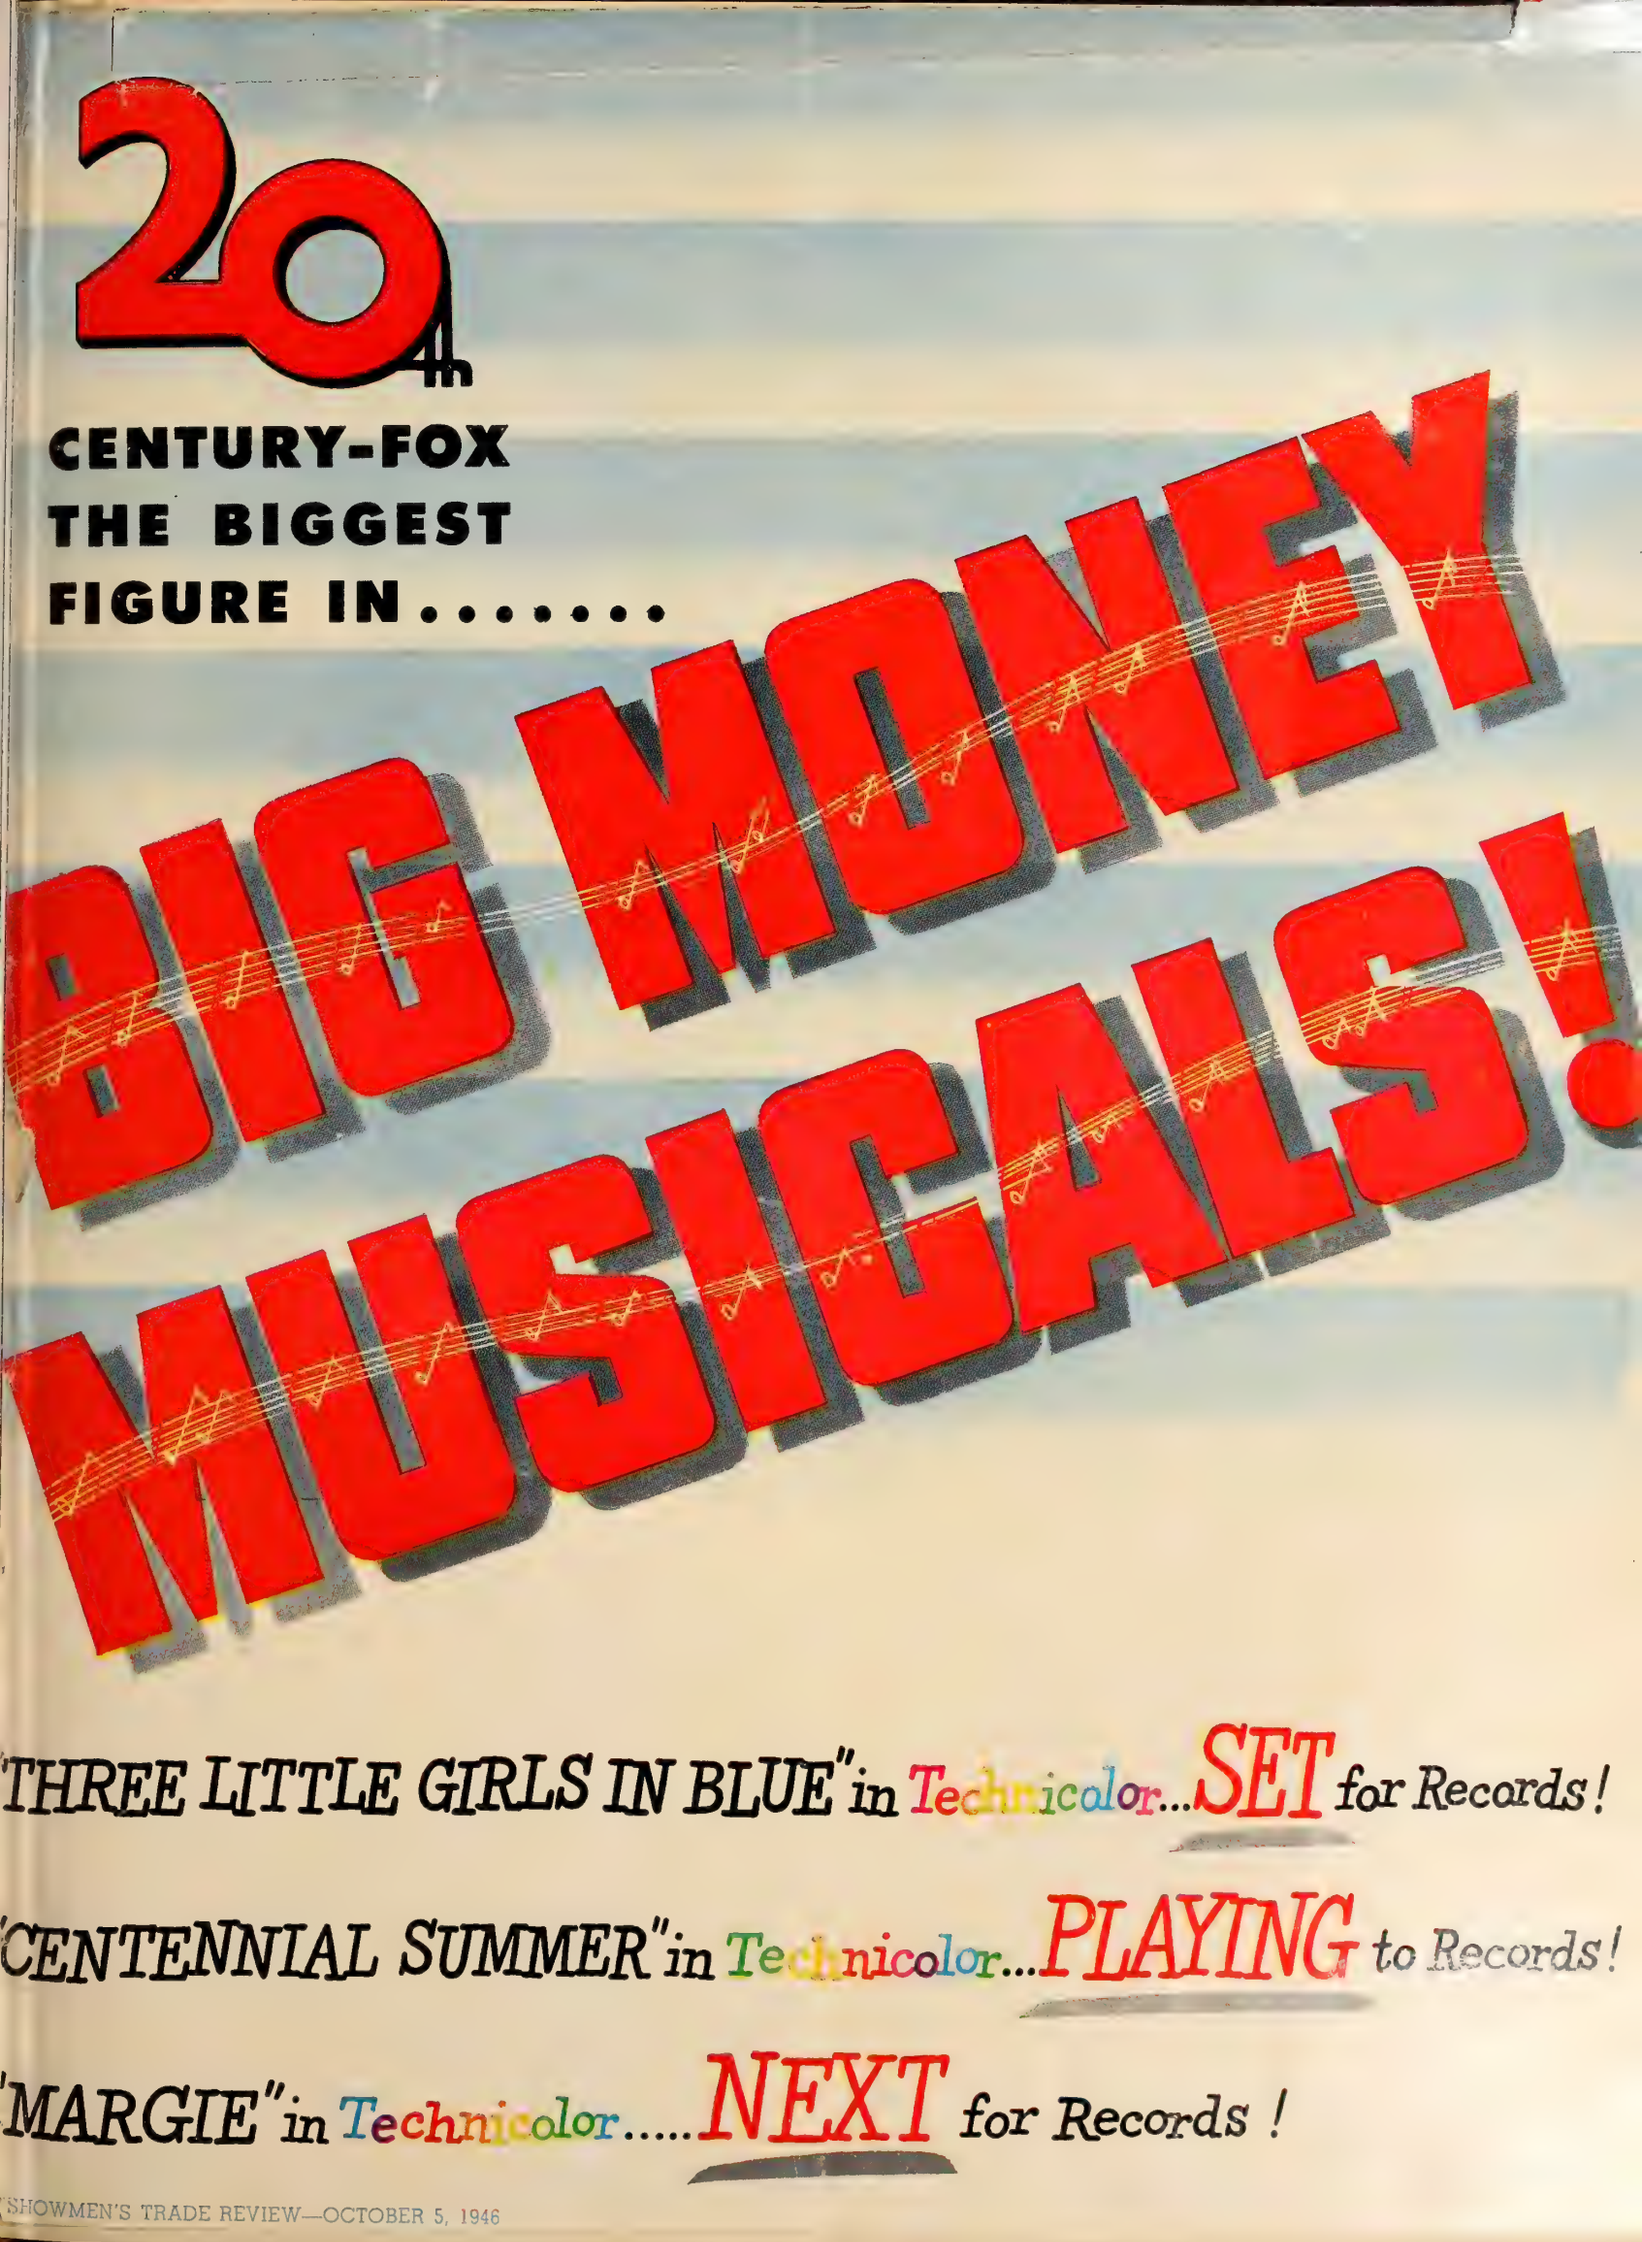
For the past few years we have been harassed with many types of vandalism which has taken the shape of incendiarism in many instances and this demands more than ordinary precautions in rest rooms, closets, store rooms and other seldom used places. Added to this is the fact that so many of today's youngsters are experimenting in chemistry in school and seem overly anxious to test the actual workings of their experiments on theatres, schools and other places of public gathering. There are many, many other reasons for frequent and careful examination of the more remote places where fires may start but the above should suffice to start you thinking about your own nooks and crannies.

Fires Started by Vandals

Let me tell you about the four recent theatre fires with which I have had personal contact.

In one instance vandals ripped a padlock off the door to an unused entrance to the discontinued organ loft and started a fire that was fortunately betrayed by the smoke emerging from the old grids and resulted in little or no damage and but slight inconvenience to the audience. In another instance the vandal found a box containing paper packing that had been used to protect a recent shipment of supplies and spread it along the screen line and on the keyboard of a grand piano back stage. Again Lady Luck was on the side of the theatre management. However, in this instance considerable confusion resulted in the audience when the curtain masking the rear of the screen took flame and was apparent to the crowds in the seats. In still another instance a record room, locked from the inside, was opened by a clever arsonist and the bundles of records set afire. The room was located on a balcony cross-over and the balcony had been closed for the night, which kept the downs airs audience from consciousness of the conflagration. The last was an instance that could happen—and frequently does happen—in any theatre. The porter in emptying the sand urns of discarded cigaret butts permitted a lighted butt to get into his dust pan and when he emptied the dust pan into the refuse box the butt started a fire among the other rubbish. This was, of course, quickly extinguished but I hate to think what may have happened had the occurrence taken place at the time of closing instead of during active operation hours.

The preceding paragraph does not belong in our "let's pretend" game but it goes a long ways toward illustrating how the game can be extended before the various tricks are all played.



But let's get on to the other parts of the theatre and get a check on our prevention and precaution activities.

No Smoking for Operaters

How about that booth? Do your operators observe the "no smoking" rule? Mine don't and I recently authorized the fire inspectors to remove from the job and place in jail any operator found guilty of infringement on the "no smoking" rule. If you are having difficulty in enforcing this important order try contacting the local business agent of the IA and I'm sure that your worries will be over. How about the receptable for discarded patches and damaged film? Is it fireproof? How about the re-wind and storage for occasional trailers, etc.? How about the dousers? the door to the booth? the storage cabinet for the operators' clothes? How clean is the floor? Are the walls kept clear of inflammable material such as calendars, pictures, etc.? How about the generator room? Is it clean of oil and oil cans, waste and wiping cloths? A container should be provided for the storage of these items and the generator itself kept as free from inflammable oil as possible.

The janitor's closet, as usually maintained in theatres, is a pyromaniac's paradise. The cutter that usually prevails offers the brightest prospect for these mental incompe ents to indulge their sadistic instincts. Examine each package and bottle of cleaning compound and if it is declared to be inflammable under any circumstances see that it is kept under lock and key and made available only to the person in charge of the crew. Take every precaution to keep the floor and shelves of the closets free of loose papers, rags, etc. and by all means see that the door is kept locked when not in actual use.

posed wiring, emergency switches, loose connections, dirty contacts and many other things connected with the electrical supply. In addition there is the accumulated dirt due to the fact that the stage is seldom used and careless cleaners are inclined to make use of the space to store crates, boxes and other items of refuse that are difficult to remove from the theatre or hard to break up for placement in the trash containers. If yours is a house where stage shows were once presented you have the added hazard of hanging pieces, battings, catwalks, etc., etc. And that reminds me to caution that you have all scenery and curtains on your stage flame-proofed at the very first opportunity.

Watch the Engine Room

The engine room is another place where the slightest laxity can bring about disastrous results. Practically every item used in keeping the machinery running is of an inflammable nature. That means that access should be denied—prevented is the right word—to all house personnel except those with actual business to transact with the engineer on duty. The engineer should be checked regularly to make sure that he does not become careless in his work and allow the accumulation of used materials offering prospect of conflagration.

Our game wouldn't be complete without a trip up to the roof. This is another highly vulnerable spot and one that offers great promise for the slightest spark to attain its full mission of complete destruction. Is your roof inspected regularly—at least once a week—to make sure that papers carried by the vagrant winds are not allowed to accumulate under the wall ledges? Do you make sure that the ventilators are free from refuse of any kind? Do you inspect your water towers regularly? Look over the side at the standards holding the upright sign. Are the electric wires and connections in order? Have you cautioned your electrical maintenance man to give you a report of any irregularity? How about skylights, hatches covering entrances to the attic, the stairs leading to the roof, etc.? You must use extra care about the roof because sparks can fly from any direction and if your theatre happens to be surrounded by taller buildings the accumulation of waste paper and other refuse will surprise you.

The game's not over, but space demands that we call a halt. I hope we have played long enough to convince you that your theatre needs a lot of attention before it measures to the expectancies of the people who make its operation profitable. How about getting busy right now and seeing how far you can go toward providing the customers the kind of safety that will protect their lives and your property? You'll have to spend some money and exert a lot of mental and physical energy in training the staffs and personally examining their work. But the results are worth it.

He Did His Job Quietly—And See What Happened!

Just how much good does it do a manager to go out of his way to assure good relations with the parents of the children who attend his theatre? The results are not always visible, but once in awhile they are just that. Take the case of Kenneth Wright, who manages the San Carlos Theatre in San Carlos, Calif. Wright has been running children's Saturday matinees for some time, and he took the trouble to get the local Parents-Teachers Association interested in the venture.

The PTA, impressed with Wright's handling of these shows, asked to take pictures of the kids during the performance, and they did that with infra-red light. They didn't say anything much about it, but all of a sudden Life came out with three pages of the photos, with full credit to the theatre and Wright. This was major league publicity and constituted a real scoop for the manager.

Wright didn't ask for this big splash; he was merely doing what he considered the correct way of handling the children-parents angle. So it sometimes pays to go ahead and do your job quietly—without demanding and expecting undue credit for something you were supposed to do anyway.

Rain on the Roof

How's the theatre roof? Any chance of water coming through during a violent storm? Don't wait until the storm to have the local roofing inspector report any defective spots at periodic intervals.

THEATRE LIGHTING — Planning and Maintenance

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

Theatre lighting is paramount in producing a restful atmosphere and should be arranged to bring out the desired effect.

Light should be brightest under the marquee with a gradual lowering of intensities through the lobbies and foyers and with the lowest workable intensity at the auditorium front. This gradual decrease in light level from the theatre front to the screen allows patrons' eyes to adjust themselves comfortably to the low intensity necessary for the presentation of the film. The following table shows the approximate intensities which should be used in the various parts of the theatre, in footcandle units.

Marquee	35
Outer Lobby	24
Inner Lobby	8
Foyer	8
Ramps	4
Auditorium Front	3
Alleys	2

LOCATION OF LIGHTS

All lights should be kept out of the direct line of vision. However, display lighting in lobbies and foyers must be placed in the line of vision to attract attention. This lighting, which constitutes the only exception to the general rule, should therefore be made colorful rather than too bright.

The location of auditorium lights is quite critical. Where use of side wall lights is unavoidable for general illumination they should be well shaded or coved, and always of an intensity lower than that of the projected picture. Never should they be allowed to shine in patrons' eyes. Aisle lights should be directed toward the floor.

Exit lights must of course be located over individual exits, but their intensity should be just high enough for easy reading of the sign—or as low as the law permits.

LIGHTING FOR COLOR

Color effects can be produced either by painting the areas the desired color and illuminating them with white light or by painting them one of the primary colors and using colored lamps to produce the desired effect.

A good rule is to "paint for color" and "light for illumination." The opposite procedure is uneconomical. Colored lights are expensive because the illumination produced per watt is much lower than in the case of white light, excepting only with yellow-green fluorescent lamps.

The following tables give approximate comparisons be-

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Schwalm Issues Rules to Employes To Maintain Goodwill at All Times

Upon becoming a member of the staff of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, the new employe receives a pocket-size folder containing 28 rules for maintaing goodwill.

A message on the cover from Manager John A. Schwalm admonishes the employe to "read these rules carefully; memorize them; use them at every opportunity—they will turn the Rialto box-office into a gold mine. Violations of these rules means dismissal."

Because Manager Schwalm has obtained good results from the procedure, he feels that other theatremen might be interested in a set of rules for their own employes. With that in mind, he passes them along to STR, for use in whatever manner the theatre manager deems most effective.

1. Be on time—Do not chew gum—Do not talk loud—Always be neat.
2. Be dignified in your behavior—Do not carry on unnecessary conversations.
3. Do not encourage flirtations with the patrons.
4. Never give short or flippant answers—Never have a grouch on.
5. Stand erect at your post and do not display listlessness.
6. Never lose your temper and keep cool at all times.
7. Never argue when anything is beyond you; refer it to the manager.
8. Quietness must be maintained at all times during the performance.
9. Special effort should be made to comfort elderly people.
10. Report anyone changing seats more than once during the show.
11. Never be discourteous—Grouchy people can't stand up under kindness.
12. Always meet rudeness with unfailing politeness.
13. We sell good service just as we do good pictures and music.
14. Make an effort to always wear a cheerful smile.
15. Try to please and satisfy every patron as if you owned the theatre yourself.
16. You will not say "yes" and "no" but "yes, sir" or "no, ma'am," as the case may be.
17. "This way please," "Thank you," "Kindly remove your arm please" are magic phrases; always use them when speaking to patrons.
18. Mothers with crying babies should be asked to kindly step to the lobby until the child becomes quiet.
19. Remember that business, like friendship, is sensitive. It goes where it is best treated and stays where it is best served.
20. You, by your conduct, can make or break this theatre. It may take a hundred dollars worth of advertising to coax a new patron into this theatre, and you, with a surly, sulky word, can drive them away never to come back.
21. Service and courtesy are paid for with the money that buys an admission ticket.
22. Notify all hoodlums that the uttering of loud noise, talking, flirtation, and talking over the back of seats are not allowed in this theatre.
23. Ask the young couples to kindly refrain from showing their affection for one another while in this public theatre.
24. Always familiarize yourself with the order of the program and the schedule of the time of shows.
25. Make an effort to recover any lost articles reported to you.
26. Ascertain patrons' preferences and endeavor to place them in seats they like best.
27. Remember, the child of today is the man of tomorrow. Make him comfortable and at the same time keep him quiet.
28. Each member of our staff is valuable to us only in proportion to his or her ability to serve our patrons.

Use Night Lights

Night cleaners should be equipped with night lights so that whole circuits of house lights which burn enormous quantities of costly current are not needlessly used. An occasional check at night will insure the usage of the less costly lighting equipment.

Winners of WB Prizes At Recent Meet Named

Winners of 10 copies of the book, "Okay for Sound," a history of talking pictures, and 10 RCA Victor albums of "Night and Day" music records, donated by Warners at the recent Allied States Association convention at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, Boston, were as follows.

Okay for Sound": Jack Levin, Irvington Theatre, Baltimore; Alex Smith, County Theatre, Sellersville, Pa.; S. Unger, Mayfair Theatre, Hillside, N. J.; Jack Kirsch, Allied president; George Saittis, Temple Theatre, Pittsburgh; Sue Ochs, Drive-In Theatre, Dayton; Carl Ekman, Hollywood Theatre, Evanston, Ill.; Al Ackerman, Detroit; Herb Berg, New York; Josephine Fiorovante, Plainfield, N. J.

"Night and Day" Albums: Rube Shor, Dunbar Theatre, Cincinnati; W. L. Hughes, Nordica Theatre, Freeport, Me.; Helen Serrao, Ritz Theatre, Ford City, Pa.; C. E. Stiles, Auditorium, Coatesville, Pa.; J. L. Whittle, Avenue Theatre, Baltimore; H. B. Charvhas, Elm Theatre, Elmwood Park, Ill.; Mrs. J. B. Fishman, New Haven; Don Swartz, Minneapolis; F. W. McManus, Newton, Mass.; Raymond Pfeiffer, Mission, Tex.

Test the Fire Escape

As a safety precaution, test the fire escape of your theatre at frequent intervals to be sure that it is in good working order. Neglect of this duty may result in loss of lives should a fire occur.

Prepare for Winter

Winter is almost here with its accompanying winds, snows, etc. A quick check NOW on the marquee supports, letters, etc., might save a lot of grief later.

GENERAL MAINTENANCE

It is extremely important that lamps be kept clean. They may lose from 40 to 50 per cent of their efficiency in several months if not cleaned, in which case half the theatre's bill for lighting current represents money spent for the privilege of heating up dirt.

The necessity for frequent cleaning should be taken into account when lamp locations are determined. In very high auditoriums it is both troublesome and expensive to service lamps located in sidewall coves near the ceiling.

Whenever additional lamps or equipment are installed (or when existing lamps or equipment are replaced by others requiring greater power) make sure the circuit is not being overloaded. Wiring is made in different sizes, and with different types of insulation, according to the load to be carried. Overloading is definitely a fire hazard, and is made worse by the resulting tendency to overfuse.

It is also a violation which may result in complications with respect to insurance, and with the local enforcement authorities.

Never replace a wiring circuit without consulting all applicable codes and authorities having jurisdiction. To go ahead blindly may mean the work will have to be re-done at a later date, adding needlessly to the cost.

Whenever wiring is installed, consider using heavier wire than may be necessary at the moment to allow for unforeseen future developments. It is also good economy to run in extra pairs for possible future use.

AVOID OVERFUSING

If a branch circuit intended and wired for 15 amperes is fused for a higher current the circuit may give way before the fuses do, and you risk destroying the theatre.

Have all junction boxes, switches, starting boxes and fuse panels inspected at least once each year to make sure that all connections remain tight (not loosened by vibration or by possible weakening of solder) and that none have been inadvertently overloaded. Inspect more frequently for cleanliness, and be sure that all covers are kept on at all times except when cleaning.

Caution personnel to use extreme care when cleaning!

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.

Invitational Preview Marks 'Kenny' Premiere

The world premiere of RKO Radio's "Sister Kenny" at he RKO Palace in New York last Saturday (September 28) was preceded by a special invitational presentation of the film on Friday evening (27), attended by civic, social and show business leaders. Sister Elizabeth Kenny herself was guest of honor.

The preview was of the "Hollywood" variety, complete with radio commentator George Hicks introducing celebrities via a station WNEW hookup, and with floodlights focused on the facade of the famous theatre.

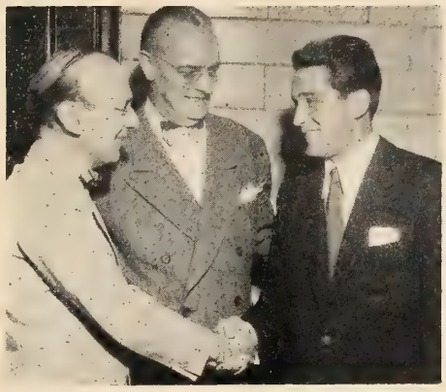
Half a dozen or more dinner parties preceded the invitational preview. Floyd Odlum, chairman of the board of directors of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, and Mrs. Odlum (Jacqueline Cochran) were hosts at their River House residence to Sister Kenny and Frederick Brisson, husband of Rosalind Russell, who portrays the title role in the Dudley Nichols production.

John Whitaker, RKO vice-president, gave a dinner party at "21" for the members of the board of directors of the company, and Mrs. Chester LaRoche, sister of Rosalind Russell and wife of the president of the Sister Kenny Foundation, entertained several guests at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Get Milking Contest on Radio Squirt-by-Squirt

A squirt-by-squirt description of a milking contest by radio station KSTT of Davenport, Iowa, marked the big goings-on for the opening of "The Kid from Brooklyn" at the Orpheum Theatre. A 40 x 12-foot stand was erected on Main Street beside the city's largest department store for the affair, which brought crowds of watchers.

The stunt was arranged in cooperation with the Illinois-Iowa Milk Producers Association, while the Mississippi Valley Fair Association loaned the stand. Sears Roebuck contributed six stanchions for milking. Station KSTT set up the details for broadcasting, with plenty of advance notice. Ed Holland, RKO Radio field exploiteer, promoted the stunt.



Singing Contest Staged For 'Holiday in Mexico'

Loew's Boston publicity team of George Kraska and Joe Di Pesa arranged a singing contest for girls between the ages of 16 and 18 on the stage of Loew's State Theatre in Boston as a publicity stunt for "Holiday in Mexico." The winner, chosen by audience acclaim, was named the Hub city's Jane Powell and was presented with a trophy donated for the occasion by MGM's Jane Powell.

The veteran publicists also arranged for tie-ups for the stunt with Boston newspapers. The film played both the State and Orpheum theatres day and date.—BOS.

Ferguson Meets With 2nd Group for 'Bess' Talks

A second territorial meeting of field representatives was held at New York's Astor Hotel this week during which William R. Ferguson, exploitation director for MGM, discussed additional plans for the promotion of "Gallant Bess" and the nation wide tour of Bess, the film's equine star.

Present at the one day meeting were Ferguson, Floyd Fitzsimmons, Albany and New Haven; Bert McKenzie, Boston; Elliott Foreman, New York and New Jersey; James Ashcraft and Ed Gallner, Philadelphia; and Tom Baldridge, Washington.

Howard Herty, Los Angeles field representative who has been advance man for the Bess tour also was on hand and C. E. Carrier of the home office completed the group.

First in the series of meetings planned by Ferguson was held at the Lake Shore Hotel, Cleveland early in August.

'Honor This Pass' Stunt Clicks for Dave Idzal

A stunt adaptable at county fairs, festivals or under similar circumstances was used by David Idzal in Detroit, Mich. during the recent Detroit Automobile Golden Jubilee, to keep the Fox Detroit Theatre in the public eye.

Double-faced cards were affixed to 100 helium balloons and sent aloft. One side of the card carried this copy: "Fox Detroit Theatre . . . in commemoration of the celebration of Detroit's Automotive Golden Jubilee . . . the finder of this ticket is invited to be a guest of the Fox Theatre." Copy on other side: "Greetings to Mr. Exhibitor Anywhere on Earth. . . . Please honor this pass in your theatre . . . we will be happy to send you our check for the admission price. . . . David M. Idzal, Managing Director, Fox Detroit Theatre, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A."

New Selling Method Is Paramount Meeting Topic

Re-examination of the company's entire publicity, advertising and exploitation setup for possible overhauling to meet the demands of the new method of selling screen product highlighted a four-day meeting of Paramount special field representatives and studio and home office department heads held this week in New York at the Warwick Hotel, with Curtis Mitchell, national publicity and advertising director, presiding at the sessions. Keynote of the meeting was the larger importance placed on showmanship by the new sales system.

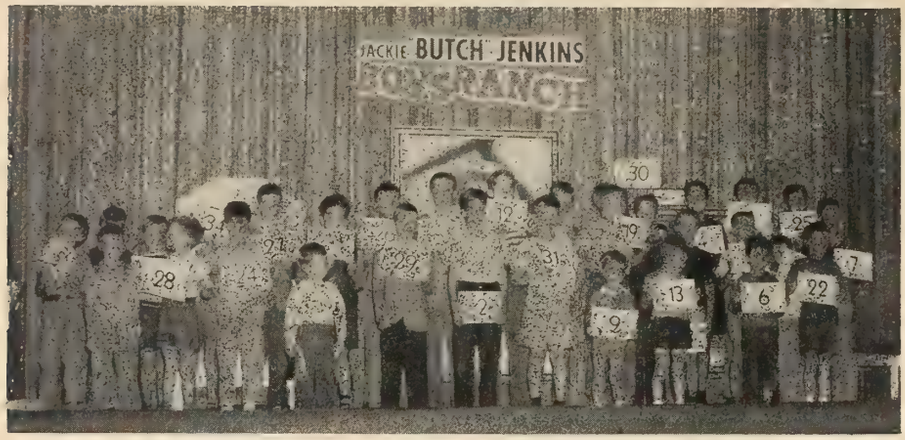
Special emphasis was placed on the promotion of "Two Years Before the Mast" and Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies," with the exploitation pattern set for these two films to be followed in the promotion of all other Paramount product.

"Blue Skies," it was disclosed by Stanley Shuford, advertising manager, will have the largest magazine advertising budget of any picture in the history of Paramount, exceeding that on "For Whom the Bell Tolls," up to now the record holder.

Shuford told the field men that the campaign on "Blue Skies" also was the longest advance magazine as well as radio campaign ever attempted by the company, having been launched on August 14, four and a half months prior to the release of the film, which is scheduled for December 27.

The advertising program calls for 25 insertions in 13 national magazines, plus 14 fan publications. Total circulation of the publications is 77,284,594, with an estimated 150 million readers. Twice the radio time allotted to any picture in Paramount history will be employed in the promotion of "Blue Skies," Shuford said.

He also disclosed that a big magazine campaign lined up for "Two Years Before the Mast" (launched this week) utilizes national and fan publications with a total circulation of 53,844,665. Advertising copy will include full-color half pages in Sunday newspapers in 41 key cities.



Other speakers addressing the field men at sessions this week include Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; Charles M. Reagan, vice-president in charge of sales; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Oscar Morgan, short sales manager; Claude Lee, public relations director; Mitchell, and Al Wilkie, publicity manager.

Studio representatives present at the meeting included George Brown, coast publicity director, and Teet Carle, Martin Lewis, Rufus Blair and James Sarno, all members of his staff.

Book Tieup for 'Strangers'

Fred R. Greenway of Loew-Poli Palace Theatre, Hartford, and his assistant Albert Lessow, arranged a book store stunt on "The Stranger" in which cards were set up in the store windows and inside the stores reading, "No 'Stranger' to you; Read the book and see the picture" at etc., Library promotions, other window displays and truck banners were additional features of the campaign.—HAR.

Alston Gets Civic, Radio, Newspaper Cooperation in 'Butch' Jenkins Test

Most all the kids like and envy "Butch" Jenkins, the freckle-faced star of MGM's "Boys Ranch." That's why Manager A. A. Alston of the Paramount Theatre, Burlington, N. C. decided to put on a "Butch" Jenkins contest as a publicity-getter. Surely there must be some boys in Burlington with freckles and cute faces.

Alston went to work. He put on a special screening ten days in advance of playdate for newspaper carrier boys, representatives from all Boy Scout troops in Alamance county, and a cross-section of city recreation and city officials. This got the word around about the picture and the contest.

Daily Stories

Then he placed daily stories in the local papers also ten days in advance, including several about the forthcoming contest. This same kind of advance dope was also put across on the radio at no cost to the theatre because it went on the city's daily recreation program.

A tieup with Sellers department store resulted in a center window layout, and the store came through with a first prize worth $50. There were more than 30 entrants, and these had their photos taken. The photos in turn were displayed in Sellers' window and in the lobby. The boys had the freckles, all right. The photo angle was obtained gratis through a tieup with the Art Kraft Studios. Another store contributed $35 worth of toys as prizes.

'Boy's Day' Proclaimed

Just before the opening date the Mayor proclaimed it "Boys' Day" and Father Flanagan endorsed the picture and praised "Boys' Day." So the film opened with a bang.

When the "Butch Jenkins Matinee' came along the stage was all set, so to speak, and the result was that the Alamance Theatre had to take an overflow of 500 from the Paramount in order to accommodate all the kids and their parents. The winner of the contest, seven-year-old Conrad Summers, possessed a big batch of freckles and light red hair—also bare feet.

Interviewed after the affair young Summers said: "It's a wow!"

'2 Guys' in Book Stores

Jim McCarthy, manager of the Warner Strand, Hartford, Conn., had downtown book store tie-ups for "Two Guys from Milwaukee." Teaser cards were distributed. Copy: "You'll find Relaxation! See 'Two Guys from Milwaukee,' now, at the Warner Strand, Hartford."—HFD.

SHOWMAN SAM SAYS: Next summer I'm going to close the theatre and go fishing, even if I have to miss playing The Three Stooges.

BALLYHOO. A bannered pony led by a man dressed as a Mexican and carrying a guitar was used by Pete Stainback, relief manager of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., as a street ballyhoo for the showing of MGM's "Holiday in Mexico." Scott Jarrett, WRVA announcer (right), made an announcement for five days on his program mentioning entire cast and feature.

Creasey Whets Curiosity With 'Stranger' Teasers

How an intriguing title, given a showmanly buildup, can produce outstanding results was demonstrated recently by Harry Creasey of the Riverside Theatre, Riverside, Calif.

Creasey built unusual advance interest in RKO's "The Stranger" through the use of three one-column, one-inch display teasers and an ad which appeared in the classified section of the local newspaper.

Copy for the first teaser: "Sounds Strange—But THE STRANGER Is Crazy About Clocks!" Second Teaser: "Who Is? Why Is? THE STRANGER He Is Mysterious?" Third Teaser: "Watch for THE STRANGER . . . Who Is He?"

The classified ad read as folows: "Lost. My Identity. Would like to have it returned by Tuesday. Am now known as The Stranger."

Needless to say, the ads stirred the curiosity of Riverside newspaper readers. And to satisfy that curiosity, they descended upon the Riverside Theatre box-office.

Strand, Albany, Host to Detroit Milk Maidens

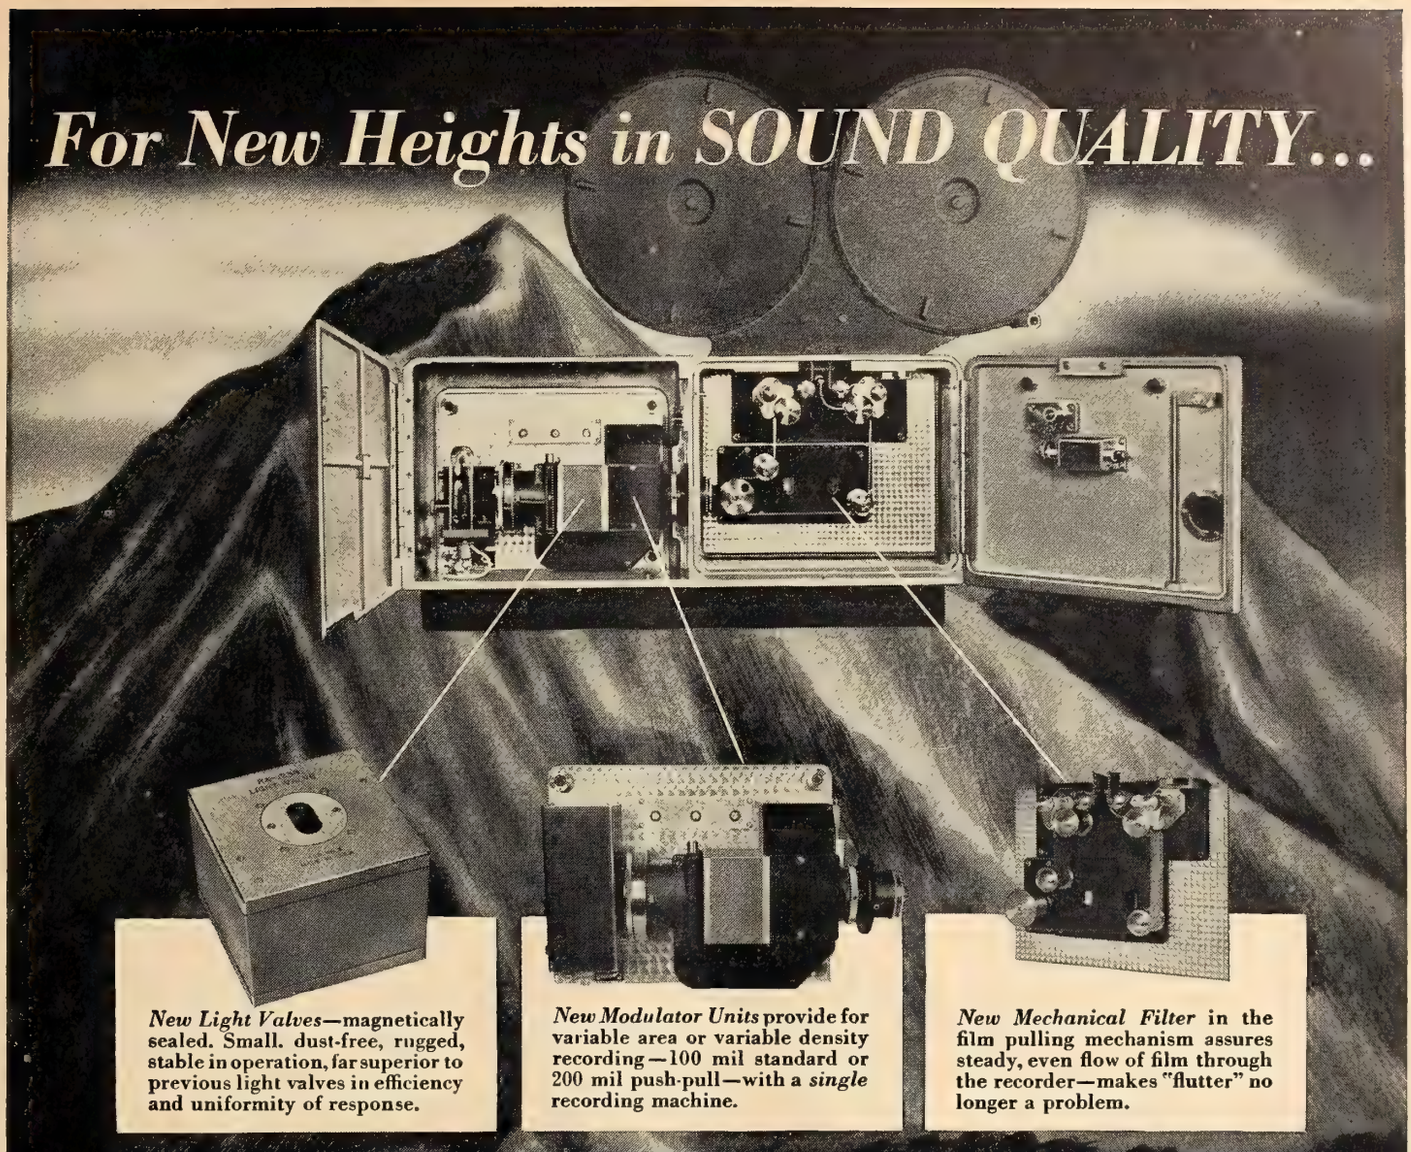
A novel stunt put over by the Strand Theatre, Albany, N. Y. provided for entertainment of the three milk maidens who are traveling via milk wagon and horses from Detroit to New Orleans

Leo Rosen, Strand Theatre manager, and Jerry Atkin, advertising aide, met the girls several miles outside of Albany and escorted them into town where the city played host under the direction of the Strand Theatre management.

There was a personal appearance on the stage of the Strand Theatre with presentation of gifts from local merchants, a radio broadcast, newspaper appearance and full coverage. Arrangements were made for the girls to stay at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel where, for the first time in over sixty days, they reveled in hot showers and cool sheets.

The slogan for the stunt was "Three girls from Detroit welcome 'Two Guys from Milwaukee'."

Twice in This Case



"The Postman Always Rings Twice" is the title of the picture and in this case there were two rings as far as co-op ads were concerned. In two situations, the Main in Ephrata, Pa. and the Palace, Olean, N. Y., the managers were able to get full-page co-ops. At Ephrata it was with the largest clothing store, and in Olean it was a round-robin with several stores.

Roses for the Roses

In connection with the opening of Republic's "Specter of the Rose" at Sidney Lust's Hippodrome Theatre, Washington, D. C., roses and free passes were given to all persons whose first or last names were Rose. A special screening of the picture was also held for ballet and music instructors.—WA.

SHOWMAN SAM SAYS: Funny that the New York press agents for "Caesar and Cleopatra" didn't think of tieing in with Cleopatra's Needle in Central Park.

For New Heights in SOUND QUALITY...

New Light Valves—magnetically sealed. Small. dust-free, rugged, stable in operation, far superior to previous light valves in efficiency and uniformity of response.

New Modulator Units provide for variable area or variable density recording—100 mil standard or 200 mil push-pull—with a single recording machine.

New Mechanical Filter in the film pulling mechanism assures steady, even flow of film through the recorder—makes "flutter" no longer a problem.

Western Electric

400 TYPE RECORDING SYSTEM

The "400" is the top number in Western Electric's new line of sound recording equipment. It's simple to operate, gives unequalled sound quality and is so flexible and adaptable that it handles with ease the most difficult recording assignments. It records 35 mm variable area or variable density tracks, either 100 mil standard or 200 mil push-pull.

In addition to the recording unit shown above, all other units in the system—mixer, limiting amplifier, noise reduction unit, regulated power supply and fully automatic recorder controls—are newly designed and "packaged" to enable studios to put finer-than-ever sound in their pictures of tomorrow.

Restrictions No Damper to London Showmen

Shortage of Paper, Ban on Electric Sign Advertising Force Use of Ingenuity

By JOCK MacGREGOR

London—For the past seven years British showmen have operated under innumerable difficulties which have severely tested their initiative and ingenuity. Although some restrictions are to be relaxed, exterior electric signs are still barred. And though the use of posters is now permitted, the printers have only a quota of paper which they ration to their customers.

Newspapers are to be enlarged by two extra pages on three days a week, but seldom have the cinemas spread themselves beyond a two-inch single column. The 750,000-circulation Evening News, for example, allows the three circuits only one-third of a column for all their Greater London houses. On Saturdays this is increased to double-column width. A few positions have been reserved for West End cinemas.

Yet even under these conditions, $150,000 was spent on launching a recent picture.

The most striking development of the war years has been the use of giant cut-out letters and canvas pictorial displays to replace front-of-the-house neon. Although such displays started in a modest way, as much as $5000 is now expended on a single display. (Already STR has published photographs of outstanding displays by GB's Jimmy Forsyth, UA's B. W. Dudman and Odeon's John Dennett).

Constitute a Danger

Here, the enterprising showman has fallen foul of the authorities. Signs have sometimes exceeded local regulations and are alleged to constitute a danger. Now the LCC (London Civic Council) have ordered GB to alter the Tivoli's display for 20th-Fox's "Anna and the King of Siam" for being offensive (see cut). As a consequence, a large blowup showing Linda Darnell being burned to death has been replaced, and another of her being whipped has been painted out.

Several live-wire showmen have been fined for "misusing" building materials in exploitation displays without a license.

The billboard has made an impressive comeback and every worthwhile site is booked solid.

The difficulties, however, have created friends of rivals, who loan each other hoardings (random posting sites) for premieres. The paper shortage has often forced printers to use linen.

Prices have soared. In London a 24-sheet will cost from $10 on a hoarding to $150 on a single display board a week, depending on locality. Outside a hospital in a secondary area $2000 a quarter is being paid. For large solus sites, prices rise astronomically, and one in Piccadilly Circus, less in area than two 24-sheets, costs $450 a week.

To exploit this boom, hoardings are appearing in bombed areas. A happy Londoner is the foresighted cinema advertising man who, although he could not convince his employers several years back, still went ahead and personally bought some sites.

Railroad terminals are favorite situations and these are well tied up by United Artists. Like

Money Dates for November

There's little we need to tell you about the eleventh month other than the fact that it will be a busy 30-day period for smart showmen who will want to capitalize on its important money dates. Below are just a few ideas that should start you on your way.

Legal Holidays

NOV. 11—ARMISTICE DAY. Veterans of past wars, the city fathers and the general public are certain to observe this day this year. Your theatre might well be the focal point of celebrations, parades, speeches and other forms of observance, but you'll have to get busy now and make your plans if you are to be ready on time. Contact the heads of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled War Veterans, Spanish-American and Civil War groups, together with the auxiliaries of those organizations, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and other patriotic women's clubs. Enlist their aid, as well as that of the mayor and city officials, in staging a parade that will end at your theatre where, on the stage, there should be talks by the leaders and a final tribute to those soldiers who gave their lives in the line of duty. A conference with the school authorities may make it possible for you to get the school bands and glee clubs to take part in a patriotic stage attraction to take place the evening before Armistice Day or at some particular show not in conflict with the general observance. Give your lobby and front patriotic treatment and arrange with the newspaper to handle stories on contemplated activities.

NOV. 28—THANKSGIVING. Despite the nation's turmoil and the uncertainties of a world at peace, Thanksgiving this year nonetheless appears to be a joyful occasion. There seems to be much money in circulation with little to spend it on, unless there be motion picture entertainment available, and that's where you come in. You can pack 'em in from opening to closing—and perhaps stage an extra show—if you polish off your exploitation guns and get in the front line of local activities. Contact the heads of churches and determine the hours of special services and arrange to use a slide (or trailer) on the screen and a card in the lobby a full week in advance calling attention to the religious activities. Although the hours of religious services may conflict with your show schedules, don't falter. After all, you'll be making friends of the people who can do your theatre a lot of good throughout the year, and perhaps they will say a good word about your attraction which will help the next day's business. Perhaps you can persuade them to allow you to distribute cards carrying some message of thanksgiving over the signature of your theatre. Book a short subject of religious portent if at all possible. Get the leaders of the local Civic Clubs to arrange for transportation of the crippled kiddies, the inmates of the home for the aged and the local war mothers, and give a special show the day before Thanksgiving. If you deem it advisable, the newspaper could sponsor one group and the local radio station the other. In any event, you can be reasonably sure of generous publicity from both public services. Have turkeys and pilgrims dominant in all of your ads and on the theatre front. Well in advance (and let's hope they're available) get a number of live turkeys, geese and ducks and arrange for their display on the sidewalk or in the lobby. Reason for the display: the fowls would be given away, a few each night, for the two or three nights preceding Thanksgiving. Perhaps you can persuade the butcher to defray the cost or part of the cost in return for mention on a sign in the lobby and a trailer on the screen. The possibilities of having him share in the cost of printing and distributing handbills are also favorable. See if you can get choral groups to stage an appropriate program at one show during the day. Go after social groups and local lodges of fraternal societies with a view toward having them attend in a body. Just in case the annual Christmas seal starts around this time (it usually does), contact the people heading the local effort and sell them on the idea of putting pretty girls in Pilgrim costumes to work selling seals in the lobby. The newspaper will handle stories and the effort of the seal sellers will add greatly to the holiday atmosphere. If yours happens to be a rural community, stage a contest for the best turkey, duck and goose raised in your vicinity, with owners of the entered fowls appearing on your stage with their contenders. Judging should be in the hands of poultry experts. Merchants will cooperate in providing prizes for a contest of this kind and the newspaper can be depended upon to publicize the event. Be sure that you have a card in the windows and mention in the ads of participating merchants. You can increase interest in the sidewalk or lobby display of fowls by staging a contest in which patrons are requested to guess the amount of grain the birds will consume before they are given away. A few days prior to Thanksgiving—not on a day that will interfere with their school attendance—you can stage a special pre-Thanksgiving matinee for the youngsters. Be sure to enliven it with contests and prizes. For Thanksgiving day itself, be sure to book a program that can be safely enjoyed by the entire family. You are certain to do good business on this day if you will create an enthusiastic holiday in which the entire community will want to take part.

National Observance Weeks

NOV. 1-7—ART WEEK—The art classes in local schools should be given an opportunity to display their work in the lobby. Principals and teachers will cooperate and the newspapers will publicize. If there is an art colony, art school or prominent artist in your vicinity—or a local citizen with a worthwhile collection—try to secure the loan of their treasures for lobby display. Tieups with local photographers should be easy during this period if arranged in advance. Allow them to take pictures in your lobby in return for newspaper advertising, handbill distribution, etc. The newspaper or local radio station will help you locate the oldest, most historic, most interesting, most famous paintings in town. Tickets can serve as reward.

NOV. 10-16—BOOK WEEK. It should be no trouble to book a couple of pictures based on widely read books for this occasion, since a large part of the Hollywood output is based on popular novels. Contact the library for displays in reading rooms and book marks in all outgoing books. Get the cooperation of school authorities on literary contests based on the books, and award prizes of the photoplay editions to the winners. Contact all booksellers—they should have plenty of advertising material from the publishers—and trade space in your lobby for mention in all their ads and cards (plus displays, if possible) in their windows. The newspaper may be interested in running a contest to locate the best patrons of the public library. Library records will show the most frequent borrowers. If you are certain of coming attractions based on well known novels, take advantage of this special week to let your patrons know about them by means of a display in your lobby.

NOV. 10-16 — AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK—Consult local educational groups and tie in with them. Perhaps you can arrange to have some sort of display in your lobby relating to the products of school children. If your theatre can be used for observance during this week, be sure to make it available to the proper parties.

NOV. 28—First U. S. Government Post Office, 1783. Try to get local post office employes to stage a party at your theatre.

Sectional Observances

NOV. 2—No. and So. Dakota joined Union, 1889.

NOV. 8—Montana joined Union, 1889.

NOV. 11—Washington joined Union, 1889.

NOV. 16—Oklahoma joined Union, 1907.

NOV. 16—Russia recognized by U. S., 1933.

NOV. 21—No. Carolina joined Union, 1789.

APPROPRIATE SEASONAL ACTIVITIES

Football tieups, Basketball tieups, Hockey tieups, Fashion Shows, Harvest Festivals.

National Prosperity Week starts Nov. 25. Try to get a local observance committee appointed through cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce, Business Men's League, Civic Clubs, etc. The newspaper and radio station will cooperate fully on any effort to get general observance under way.

the sides and interior panels of buses and street cars, they are best for long runs, since staff shortages and other difficulties prevent frequent changes of material. Underground stations are also much-sought-after sites.

Perhaps the most noticeable wartime (now peacetime) trend has been toward fly posting, which is extensively used by all film companies. Many hoardings around blitzed buildings are plastered. Empty shops are also covered. Five firms specialize in this work, charging $5 a hundred. Although it is a gamble as to how long the posters will remain, it is most effective and certainly the cheapest form of makeshift advertising. Before the war, except for isolated teaser campaigns, such media was considered undignified.

All in all, restrictions have forced British showmen to dig out the oldest ideas, polish them up and utilize them on a scale never before attempted.

Live Cow Ballyhoos May's 'Canyon Passage' Date

What with the meat shortage the ballyhoo set up by Ed May, manager of the Rosetta, Miami, had more effect than it might have had in normal times. Ed somehow got hold of a hefty cow, placed the animal aboard a traveling truck and hung large signs on the sides reading, "This is no Bull!" and then proceeded to tell the populace about his showing of "Canyon Passage."

The gag is an old one, of course, but this time it was really effective. The truck was on the streets for several days preceding opening of the film.

RECORD DISPLAY. Of the many tieups arranged by Harry Schreiber, manager of the RKO Palace in Cleveland, in connection with the showing of 20th-Fox's "Do You Love Me," one was on the recordings of Harry James, who has a leading role in the film. Wurlitzer's was the scene of the particular window display shown above.

Third Anniversary for NSS Trailer Publication

National release of the October issue of Mr. Showman, National Screen Service's special trailer publication, marks the third anniversary of the publication in which more than one thousand special trailer ideas have appeared since its debut in October, 1943.

Feature item in the October issue, which is distributed to 16,000 theatres and executives, is the center spread devoted to seven different ways of cashing in on Halloween exploitation. The Third Anniversary issue also features trailer copy for Columbus Day, Navy Day, Girl Scout Week and Fire Prevention Week. Another section is devoted to the proper use of political advertising on the screen.

TRUCK CRASHES INTO THEATRE; McNAMEE GETS MEDAL OF MERIT

The Howard Theatre, in Kensington, had an uninvited guest on Sunday afternoon, when a tow truck, started by some boys who jumped when they couldn't stop it, crashed into the front of the theatre, going through the outer doors, and halfway through the inner doors before coming to a stop in the lobby. It happened right before the matinee, but Manager Morris Kret went ahead with the show just the same.

Stanley-Warner Theatres donated the use of the Mastbaum Theatre (October 4) for a special show by Tom Breneman for the benefit of the Inquirer Charities, Inc. It was Breneman's first and only Eastern "Breakfast in Hollywood" broadcast.

Richard Brown, former chief of the Warner checking service, will become chief of the Motion Picture Division, Veterans' Administration Special Services. He'll have charge of booking films for veterans hospitals in Pennsylvania, Delaware, and New Jersey.

Charles Segall, owner of the Apollo Theatre, is in the Mt. Sinai Hospital after an appendectomy.

The mother of Marie Blank of the Columbia cashier department is in the hospital awaiting an operation.

Sidney Schaefer, Columbia advertising manager, was in town conferring with Harry Weiner, Columbia Division Manager, and Everett C. Callow and Irving Blumberg, Warner advertising men, on the ad campaigns for "Gallant Journey" and "Thrill of Brazil."

Dave Stadler, assistant contact manager for the Warner Theatres, just returned to work after a long session in the hospital due to an automobile accident, has more trouble. His home has been sold, and now he must find another place for his family to live.

It was a baby girl, Susan Leslie, born to the wife of Harold Cohen, of the Embassy Theatre, Lewistown, Pa. Harold, recently out of the Navy, has been living in Philadelphia with his family, since he left the service.

Max Miller, Republic exploiteer, celebrated his third wedding anniversary recently. Oddly enough, the picture on which he is working is the Company's great musical "I've Always Loved You."

The Goldman Theatre in changing its program last week, showed the last feature of "Monsieur Beaucaire" with the first showings of "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" for one admission. It was the first time that the stunt has been done in Philadelphia. The Goldman's prices are now in line with the increases that went through recently in the Stanley Warner first runs, and the Fox Theatre.

Paramount officially takes over the Tower, Roosevelt, Frankford and Nixon Theatres on October 10. The theatres have been operated by Stanley-Warner for many years. Harry Botwick, who comes from the Maine territory, will be the district manager. He has been in town many months getting the lowdown on the operation. He will make his headquarters in the Tower Theatre Bldg.

Frank L. McNamee, prominent Philadelphia theatreman, has been awarded the Medal of Merit and a citation from President Truman "in recognition of his exceptional and meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the United States and as an official of the War Manpower Commission."

GUNMAN HOLDS UP WILL ROGERS THEATRE CASHIER; GETS $50

The Will Rogers Theatre in Tulsa was robbed Sunday and $30 to $50 taken. Miss Alma Jean Jernigan, cashier, told police a youthful bandit with a gun under his raincoat, thrust a white sack toward her saying: "I've got a gun. I want all the money." She put the money in the sack and then screamed. The bandit ran through the theatre parking lot and disappeared.

Paul West has been named manager of the Ramona and Ritz theatres, Griffith houses, at Frederick. He succeeds J. Galy Varnell, who has been transferred to Oklahoma City.

A jury in district court of Judge Oras A. Shaw at Tulsa September 25 returned a verdict in favor of the Ritz Theatres agent for the Rialto Theatre, which was being sued for $10,000 by Otho Cope, who had alleged the theatre had caused him to be falsely arrested and imprisoned. Cope, whose suit also named Joseph Noble of the Rialto Theatre, alleged that on February 2, 1945, he was "falsely arrested and imprisoned" by Noble, who identified him as a man who reportedly had molested small children.

L. C. Griffith, head of the circuit bearing his name, underwent treatment in St. Anthony's hospital here last week following a paralytic stroke suffered while in a downtown barber shop. His condition is regarded as serious at present.

RITZ THEATRE GOES FIRST RUN AS RANK SHOWCASE; FILM ROW VETERANS SHIFTED

Film Row shifts in Memphis, will take two branch managers out of the city, both going to Dallas. Universal Pictures announced that James Prichard, branch manager here for several years, was being transferred to Dallas as branch manager. At the same time, Republic Pictures announced that Thomas Kirk, branch manager here was being transferred to Dallas as branch manager. Chosen to succeed Prichard for Universal in Memphis was Raphael Pierre (Pete) Dawson, a salesman for Universal for the last several years. Replacing Kirk as branch manager for Republic will be Nat Wyse, who for the last several years has been a salesman out of Memphis for 20th Century-Fox Pictures. At the same time, Universal announced that Michael Carmichael, salesman out of Memphis, is being transferred to Cincinnati as branch manager there. These announcements come just one week after Republic had announced that David W. B. Hunt. Memphis salesman, was being transferred to Oklahoma City as branch manager.

The Flexer-Haberfeld Ritz in Memphis is becoming a first run house, David Flexer, president of the circuit, announced here this last week. Mr. Flexer declared that he had signed a contract with J. Arthur Rank's British made Prestige Pictures and that these films would get their first runs in the Memphis Ritz. He also intimated he was dealing with a West Coast studio for first run privileges of that studio. The new Ritz policy will be started on Oct. 16 when Noel Coward's "Brief Encounter" will open at the Ritz. Also scheduled for showing soon is Laurence Olivier's "Henry V," Margaret Lockwood's "Love Story," "I Know Where I'm Going," "The Happy Breed," "Captive Heart" and "Johnny Frenchman."

TORONTO

FAMOUS PLAYERS CANADIAN CORP. MEETS; VARIETY CLUB SEEKS HOME, MAY BUILD IF POSSIBLE

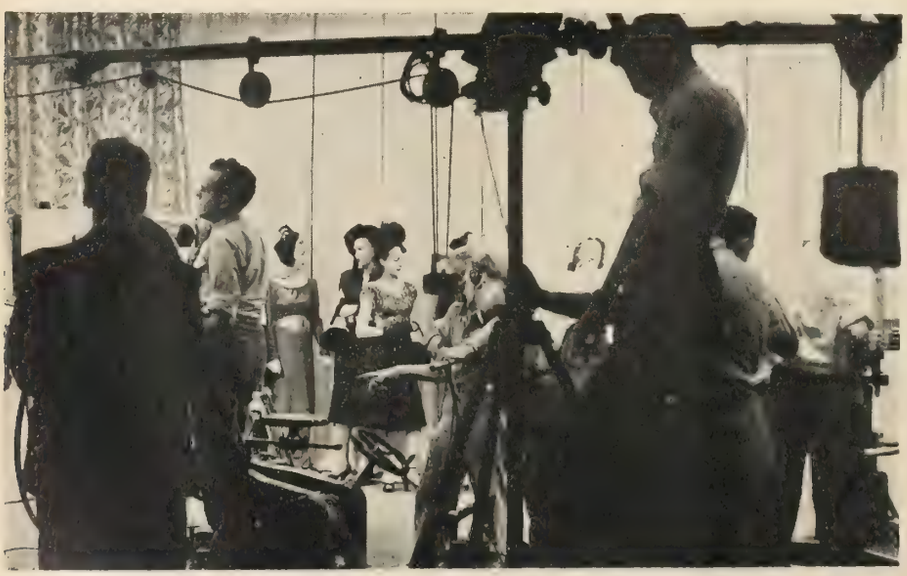
District managers from all parts of Canada attended a new-season conference of Famous Players Canadian Corp. at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, for three days, Sept. 30-Oct. 1-2 for a presentation of plans and policy by headoffice officials. Supervising the round-table discussions were Morris Stein and Larry Bearg, managers of the Eastern and Western Divisions respectively.

Attending the conference, apart from headoffice executive, were Robert S. Roddick, Halifax; Ray Tubman, Ottawa; Eddie Zorn and Harold Bishop, Winnipeg; F. H. Gow and Maynard Joiner, Vancouver; Jack Arthur and Dan Krendel, Ontario district managers, and R. Eves, supervisor of Toronto suburban theatres. Sessions were executive.

General Manager Frank O'Byrne of Queensway Studios Limited, the Arthur Rank unit, has moved his offices from Toronto, to the studio property at nearby Islington, Ont., where he has direct contact with production and equipment activities.

Lorne Moore, manager of the Melrose Theatre, North Bay, Ont., has been appointed supervisor of Odeon units in Northern Canada, including those at North Bay and Sturgeon Falls in Ontario and at Rouyn in Quebec.

With the University of Western Ontario overcrowded with a record number of freshmen, the college authorities made use of Loew's Theatre in London, Ont., for opening sessions for two days when the new students heard talks by President W. Sherwood Fox and other university officials. The "classes" did not interfere with regular performances.



President J. Earl Lawson of Odeon Theatres of Canada, Toronto, spent several days in New York at the time when Rank officials were arriving there from England. Clare J. Appel, Eastern Division general manager, and Harvey Hunt, chief booker, flew from Toronto to St. John, N.B., Sept. 30 for a conference with A. I. Garson, partner-supervisor of the Odeon organization for the Maritime Provinces.

With the falling of the autum leaves, the staff of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, turned from outdoor to indoor sport with the resumption Oct. 2 of the Famous Players bowling league, for which Fergus Martin had been elected the year's chairman. Participating in the alley recreation are 56 men and women of the company, divided into eight teams which will compete in three series of seven weekly matches each.

After accepting six new members into the Canadian branch, the Toronto Tent of Variety Clubs of America arranged, at its dinner in the King Edward Hotel to launch the fall season, to hold an executive meeting at the Cooksville, Ont., home of Oscar Hanson for further consideration of plans to secure permanent quarters. Because of the lack of available premises in Toronto, the Toronto club is studying a proposal for the construction of a clubhouse when building materials are obtainable.

Employes of Canadian Odeon headoffice in Tornto turned out for an "open night" at the Queensway Studios Limited just outside the city for an inspection of premises and equipment.

The recent speaking tour of Arch H. Jolley, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario included a Rotary Club luncheon at Orillia; Kinsmen dinner at Chatham; Lions Club dinner at Sarnia and a dinner of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at Niagara Falls, Ont., the programs of which had been arranged by local exhibitors.

GOLDWYN GLAMOR VIA VIDEO. Those pulchritudinous Goldwyn girls gave New York a gander at glamor during a two-day stopover in the town recently on their way to England. Also, they gave the television set owners an eyeful when NBC starred them in a television broadcast.

DENVER

Foster Blake, newly named district manager for Universal, was in Denver for conferences with the local sales force.

Robert Hill, branch manager for Columbia, and Jerry Safron, district manager, went over to Salt Lake City on company business, with Safron going on from there to his Los Angeles headquarters. The Denver exchange won second place in their group of five exchanges in the Columbia "25th Anniversary Drive" and Safron was on top in the district contest.

Alvin Gross, recently Des Moines office manager for MGM has been moved to Denver in a similar spot, succeeding Bernard Gold, resigned.

NEW THEATRES

Milwaukee—The new Goetz Theatre has opened to the public in Monroe, Wis. It is housed in a new building of the most modern design. Light brown brick and a lighter terra cotta have been used in the exterior finish, as well as for the balconies and grills. Curving lines at the top of the windows and doors lend a Spanish touch. Local newspapers say the new show house is the culmination of a dream of Chester Goetz and his brother Leon, with whom he has been associated in various theatre enterprises for years. Chester Goetz bought out his brother's interest in May, 1939. The first week of September was also celebrated by Goetz as the 15th anniversary of his entry into show business. He also owns the Chalet in Monroe.

Cincinnati—An outdoor drive-in theatre equipped with individual car speakers to eliminate outside noises will be erected on R.R. 4, Woodlawn near Glendale, it was announced last week. Incorporators of the project are Dr. and Mrs. William J. Keller, Woodlawn; J. Ramsey Minor and Nat Kaplan, a salesman for Columbia Pictures. Plans call for completion of the project, which will occupy a 20-acre tract, in the spring of 1947—CIN.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

American PA's Slipping, Dear, Dear! Bob Woolf One Of Town's Top Hosts; Rank's New Shorts Make Debut

By Jock MacGregor

According to "World's Press News," J. Arthur Rank's chief publicist, John B. Myers, made some surprising remarks about U. S. showmanship at a recent lunch.

After claiming that British film publicity was ousting Hollywood pictures off the U. S. front pages, he allegedly stated: "The Americans have two bins—sex and sensation—from which to draw their publicity material. The people in this country do try to think out some reasonably intellectual approach to a film."

Well, well!

The pleasantest receptions these days are those run by RKO Radio. Bob Woolf is always the genial host, invites representatives from all branches of the industry, and the press branch representatives never worry about a "story"—these are social occasions.

The Ned Depinet-Phil Reisman reception at Claridges was no exception and there was an excellent turn out of industry leaders. Many had travelled from further than Wardour Street to pay their respects. Herbert Wilcox and Anna Naagle come from their country home. Randolph Richards was up from Eastbourne. B. T. Davies, vice-president of the CEA, journied from Birmingham for Television talks, and came along with W. R. Fuller, rarely seen at such functions these days.

It was good to see that R. C. Bromhead had recovered from his illness. Jim Majorell was having a look at how we do these things here. MGM's Sam Eckman, Jr. dropped in. Dave Griffiths who in addition to his International alliance, is chairman of the new RAF film, was another we noted.

Fay Allport came from the MPAA office. Independent circuits were represented by Lou Morris and Alf Shipman.

From the studios came Pat Roc with David MacDonald, who is directing her in "The Brothers," and Trevor Howard who, because of his part in "So Well Remembered," was sporting three days' growth.

Another pleasant reception was organized by Praesens, producers of "The Last Chance," for Betty Smith—author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn"—who was on her way to Switzerland to write a script. She knows little of the project but gathers that it will be a sort of "democratic documentary" which Leopold Lindtberg will film in Brooklyn next year.

Had John Myers enthusing over the phone about the success of "The Magic Bow" at the Cannes festival, which, incidentally, is likely to establish these International contests as something worthwhile.

Londoners hope that Paramount really are weather forecasters. Since "Searching Wind" opened at the Carlton, there has been unrelenting storm. Paramount is following that one with "Blue Skies."

"This Modern Age," J. Arthur Rank's "March of Time" style short, made its debut this week with "Homes for All" and "Scotland Yard." Slick, workmanlike, they are insular in outlook, but may get by in special spots overseas as reflecting conditions in Britain.

Russell Holman, Paramount's East Coast producer, who has been in town looking at talent and plays, found himself alibing Hollywood for its idea of England as reflected in "Love Letters" and "To Each His Own."

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

Gentleman Joe Palooka

Monogram Comedy 72 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Second in the Joe Palooka series of films this, like the first, is good entertainment. Audiences who enthused over the initial venture will not want to miss this one.

BOX-OFICE SLANT: On a par with the first offering, which means that it should do just as well at the box-office.

Cast: Leon Errol, Joe Kirkwood, Guy Kibbee, Elyse Knox, Lionel Stander, H. B. Warner, Stanley Prager, Warren Hymer, Richard Lane, Cliff Nazarro, Fritz Feld, Sarah Padden, Louis Jean Heydt, Freddie Steele, Tommy Harmon, Roy Atwell, Ian Wolfe, Sam McDaniel, Eddie Gribbon, Roger Daniel, Marie Blake, William Forrest, Dick Fishell, Jack Roper, John Indrisano. Credits Directed by Cyril Endfield. Screenplay by Cyril Endfield. Photography, William Sickner. Produced by Hal E. Chester.

Plot: After Kirkwood becomes Champ, his girl-friend's uncle, who is head of a chain of newspapers and practically runs the country through his crooked friends in the Senate, gets him to assist in having a choice bit of ground made into a national park. This turns out to be a crooked play, for there is oil in the ground, and Kirkwood gets into a nasty mess before Knobby can straighten things out.

Comment: In this, the second in the Joe Palooka series from Monogram, Hal E. Chester, the producer, satisfactorily continues his efforts to turn out good, wholesome amusement that will entertain small-town and neighborhood audiences. Picture is as good as the first, with the same kind of comedy and enjoyable elements. Millions of theatregoers, especially those to whom the Joe Palooka strip is a daily "must," will get their share of enjoyment out of watching "The Champ," as played by Joe Kirkwood, get himself out of a difficult situation, which includes prize-fighting, golfing and a free-for-all scrap. Leon Errol is again Knobby Walsh and Elyse Knox is Joe's sweetheart. In other important parts are such capable performers as Guy Kibbee and Lionel Stander, while in smaller roles are H. B. Warner, Warren Hymer and Tommy Harmon. Though the film is not as fast-moving as the first one, it is nevertheless a good comedy with a well-constructed story, capable performances and a nice pace, the latter a credit to Cyril Endfield's direction.

Bad Men of the Border

Universal Western with Songs 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fair-to-middling outdoor film that will have no particular appeal for western audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will get by fairly well in houses playing such product, but in average situation won't mean anything extra.

Plot: Grant masquerades as a bandit to get into the confidences of the local badmen, who are operating a border counterfeit money racket. Actually, he is a U. S. Marshal. Unwittingly, he is helped in trapping the racketeers by a Mexican dancer, who is really an operative of her country. To carry the masquerade business a little farther, a wandering minstrel turns out to be the hero's aide. All ends well, with the Mexican and American authorities capturing the desperadoes as they attempt a getaway.

Comment: This offering attempts to be a little different, but it doesn't quite hit the mark. The average kid and action crowd will be let down more often than not in the 60 minutes' running time by a slackening of pace. The cast has some rather well established people, such as Armida and Fuzzy Knight and others, but the main character, Kirby Grant, just doesn't measure up to western hero standards. He still seems more at home in any other locale but the Wild West, from the standpoint of stature, actions and speech. Photography is okay and technical departments are up to par. There are several obvious deviations in the script from usual western procedure, and it is a question as to whether the fans will be pleased about them.

Below the Deadline

Monogram Drama 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Satisfactory dramatic offering that will entertain most adult audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will serve as a good supporting feature.

Cast: Warren Douglas, Ramsay Ames, Jan Wiley, Paul Maxey, Philip Van Zandt, John Harmon, Bruce Edwards, George Meeker, Clancy Cooper, Cay Forrester, Alan Bridges, George Eldredge, William Ruhl. Credits: Directed by William Beaudine. Original story by Ivan Tors. Screenplay by Harvey Glass and Forrest Judd. Photography, Harry Neumann. Produced by Lindsley Parsons.

Plot: A returned soldier takes over his murdered brother's rackets in order to make money quick and catch up with the people who were cleaning up while he was fighting overseas. The girl he falls in love with tries to straighten him out, but nothing happens until his colonel and buddy come back and find a way to set him straight.

Comment: This is a satisfactory dramatic offering for the secondary spots, for it has the action and excitement most audiences expect to find in supporting films. Most interesting aspect about the picture is the introduction of a new player, Warren Douglas, who turns in a credible Alan Ladd-type of performance as the returned soldier who takes over the running of the rackets. His work augurs well for his future in films. Playing opposite him in a role that gives her an opportunity to show what she can do is Ramsay Ames, and Jan Wiley is good as the gang-leader's fiance. Among the supporting players, Paul Maxey, Philip Van Zandt and John Harmon turn in capable performances, with Harmon a standout. A good pace is maintaine dthroughout the film because of William Beaudine's direction. Lindsley Parsons produced.

Undercurrent

MGM Drama 113 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Absorbing, highly emotional drama that will entertain the most discerning patron. Strictly for grown-ups who will understand the human emotions involved, with the love theme making it particularly attractive to women.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Name draw, plus its quality and entertainment values should be ample proof of the picture's potent box-office drawing power.

Cast: Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor, Robert Mitchum, Edmund Gwenn, Marjorie Main, Jayne Meadows, Clinton Sundberg, Dan Tobin, Kathryn Card, Leigh Whipper, Charles Trowbridge, James Westerfield, Billy McLain. Credits: Directed by Vincente Minnelli. Screenplay by Edward Chodorov. Based on a story by Thelma Strabel. Photography, Karl Freund. Musical score by Herbert Stothart. Produced by Pandro S. Berman.

Plot: The daughter of a small-town chemistry professor meets and marries a young millionaire. Very much in love, she is a little overwhelmed by his attentions, until she begins to hear strange tales about his brother who disappeared. In trying to solve the mystery so that she won't doubt her own husband's guilt in the matter, she not only risks her own life but discovers strange things before the happy ending.

Comment: This is a highly emotional, intensely human drama depicting with great feeling and understanding the sufferings of a wife whose love for her husband leads her into channels that threaten her life. With a story that is exceptionally well-constructed, with excellent portrayals by Katherine Hepburn and Robert Taylor in co-starring roles, and production and direction of the finest, it is th kind of suspenseful, absorbing film that comes along only once in a while; in other words, a picture with enough entertainment value to satisfy the most discerning patron. The only possible criticism is that it gets off to a slow start in order to introduce the characters, but this is quickly forgotten once the story begins to unfold. In a role that is minor in comparison with the others in the limited cast, Robert Mitchum does an unusually splendid job. He does not enter the picture until it is half over, but when he appear he dominates very scene and immediately wins the audience sympathy with the smooth, efficient way he portrays a character that they had been led to believe was villainous. Music by Herbert Stothart is done well and the sets are worthy of mention too. Direction credit goes to Vincente Minnelli, one of his best jobs to date, and Pandro S. Berman gave it lavish production values.

The Welldigger's Daughter

(French Dialog, English Titles)

Siritsky Int'l Comedy-Drama 122 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Intriguing, vastly entertaining for discriminating adult audiences. Average audiences may find it a little stilted.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will do well in the so-called "arty" houses, but its success with average American audiences is problematical. Those who remember Raimu in "The Baker's Wife" will run to see this one.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS

Cast: Raimu, Fernandel, Josette Day, Charpin, Georges Grey, Line Noro, Milly Mathis, Tramel. Credits: Written, directed and produced by Marcel Pagnol. Photographed by Willy. English titles by Herman G. Weinberg.

Plot: Welldigger Raimu plans to have his daughter, Josette Day, marry his assistant, Fernandel. But all plans go awry when Josette tells her father that she is to have Georges Grey's baby. Grey has gone off to war, his parents refuse to recognize the legitimacy of the affair or the child and Josette goes to live with her aunt until the child is born. Raimu finally gives the child his name, brings them both back to live with him. Grey's parents have been notified of their son's death, try to placate both Raimu and Josette and have succeeded, to some degree when the son unexpectedly returns and claims Josette as his bride, with all rejoicing.

Comment: The story is simple, the players are simply superb and the direction of Marcel Pagnol is inspired. The only weakness of "The Welldigger's Daughter," if it is a weakness, is in the technical aspects of the actual film, itself, indicated largely through faulty dissolves. But with the charm of the story and the utter matter of fact with which Pagnol puts the actors through their occasionally earthy paces is so disarming and sometimes hilariously natural and entirely unoffensive that the average American's reticence about these facts of life is easily pushed aside and the film easily enjoyed. While the more squeamish may be caused some slight embarrassment by things the French take in their stride, the charm with which the demonstrative French carry these things off as purely natural facts makes one forget that the picture was made by French for French consumption. The English titles by Herman Weinberg give American audiences a complete understanding of the action, even if the superb pantomime of the actors had not made it clear. The late Raimu performs so well here that if the French gave Academy Awards he certainly would have been in line for one. Fernandel, too, is a comedian of high merit. Josette Day is beautiful, appealing and a fine actress. The box-office chances of "The Welldigger's Daughter" will be enhanced by playing up the names of Raimu and Marcel Pagnol. From then on it's up to the taste of your patrons.

The Raider

(Color)

English Films War-Documentary 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A tense, gripping story of the men who carried the goods of war across the seas. Should thoroughly entertain nearly everyone.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The film is so good that its reputation may precede its showing at your theatre, thus surmounting the "war" stigma. Good for any double-bill program.

Cast: The cast is entirely non-professional and comprises officers and men of the British Royal Navy, Merchant Marine, sub-marine crews, etc. Credits: A Crown Film Unit production made with the cooperation of the Royal Navy, The Royal Netherlands Navy, the Ministry of War Transport. The Allied Merchant Navies. Produced by Ian Dalrymple. Directed by Pat Jackson. Script by Pat Jackson. Released in Great Britain as "Western Approaches."

Plot: The master and 20 other survivors of a torpedoed ship radio their position constantly and finally are heard by one merchant ship which has left its convoy, due to navigational difficulties. A German U-boat also hears the distress signals and waits near the lifeboat survivors to sink any ship that approaches to give aid. Seamen in the lifeboat see the sub's periscope, however, and by decoy signals to the aiding ship are able to permit the ship to escape entire destruction (although it is damaged), and at the same time, aid in decoying the sub to the surface so that the supposedly deserted merchant ship may sink it with deck guns.

Comment: This is a re-enacted series of events that actually took place during the war and, as in the case of so many stories based on fact, it is very, very much better than most of the dramas conceived in some script writer's fertile imagination. Although the actors are non-professionals they collectively do a job of acting that might well give some professionals something to think about. It is in the story and direction, however, that "The Raider" is strongest. The suspense achieved preceding the submarine's sinking is almost unbearable, so intensely has the director caught the mood of the story and transformed it to colored film. The underplaying of the actors is so good that one might be led to believe that they are players of long experience, rather than amateurs. And for this attribute again much credit must go to competent, inspired direction.

The Dark Mirror

Universal-International Mystery 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Certified delights for the lovers of mystery drama and a picture of outstanding excellence from standpoint of story construction, direction, acting and staging. It is "class" production with evidences of polish abounding in every set and scene. The twin-sister roles played by Olivia de Havilland, the smooth college professor scientist portrayal of Lew Ayres and the ruggedly-outlined detective sketched so boldly by Thomas Mitchell are models of good acting.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This should register as a strong attraction generally. It is absorbing mystery drama with many novel twists to contribute new vigor to the particular type of screen fare.

Cast: Olivia de Havilland, Lew Ayres, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Long, Charles Evans, Garry Owen, Lester Allen, Lela Bliss, Marta Mitrovich. Produced and written for the screen by Nunnally Johnson; Original story by Vladimir Pozner. Directed by Robert Siodmak. Director of photography, Milton Krasner, Duncan Cramer.

Plot: Thomas Mitchell, with a clear-cut case against Olivia de Havilland as the murderer of a doctor who had been courting her, is stopped cold when he faces the fact that the suspect has a twin sister and each refuses to testify which one was "at home" on the night of the murder and which was in the company of several people who furnish an air-tight alibi. The detective wheedles Lew Ayres, a psychiatrist, into making a study of the two girls to determine which is capable of murder, by arousing the fear in Ayres that the girl to whom he is strongly attached may be in danger if she is the twin who may be the next victim if it is true that one of the sisters is a paranoiac. The climax comes when Ayres makes definite identification of the girl who is really insane and she, aware that he is in love with her sister, is determined to kill the sister.

Comment: Producer-writer Nunnally Johnson has turned out a polished, expert script and a finely staged picture in this absorbing mystery play based on a novel and very potent plot idea—of twin sisters, one of whom is a mental case and the other entirely ignorant of that fact. But it is not a case of fine script and highly finished production being the only virtues of this engrossing melodrama, for all other elements—direction, acting, dialogue—are of the highest order. Robert Siodmak wins new honors for his already highly-established rating as one of the great directors of screen mystery plays. His direction here eloquently plays up the many—and there are many—potent situations and turns of plot in a richly endowed script. His cast is a most able one. The three top roles are played by Olivia de Havilland, Lew Ayres and Thomas Mitchell for all they are worth—and that is quite a lot. Miss de Havilland has the dual role in which there are merely shadings of difference until the climax is reached in the narrowing down of the search for the murderer and the deterioration of her mental illness. She does an excellent job of restrained expression and contrasting melodramatic emphasis to give the climax an added zest and vigor. Lew Ayres, long absent from the screen, proves a most welcome returnee with an adroitly-modulated characterization of a scientist who also has a generous bit of romanticism in his makeup. Mitchell's performance as the detective is colorful and graphic to a degree that importantly contributes to the outstanding quality of the entertainment offered by "The Dark Mirror."

Driftin' River

PRC Western with Songs 55 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Suitable entertainment for the western fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Eddie Dean films have been doing fairly well, and this one should duplicate the success of its predecessors.

Cast: Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates, Shirley Patterson, Bill Fawcett, Lee Bennett, Denny Moore, Bob Callahan, Lottie Harrison, Forrest Taylor, Don Murphy, Lee Roberts, Wiley Grant, Marion Carney, M. H. Richman, J. O. Smith, A. L. Smith, Edward F. Wallace. Credits: Original screenplay by Frances Kavanaugh. Produced and directed by Robert Emmett Tansey. Photography, Marcel LePicard.

Plot: Eddie Dean and Roscoe Ates go to the ranch of Shirley Patterson to inspect a herd of horses needed by the army. Dean approves the sale, but the lawless element of Dow City rustles the herd before the sale can be completed. Dean and Ates finally round up the gang and turn over the money from the herd to Miss Patterson.

Comment: This follows the usual western pattern of the hero on the side of law and order, overcoming the lawless element and then leaving to go to his next adventure as the film closes. One never knows whether or not the guy gets the gal, but western fans are little concerned, so long as there is action and the hero is triumphant. The picture has its goodly share of fist fights, winding up with plenty of gun action.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Some Producers Halt Production While Others Curtail Activities as Hollywood Jurisdictional Dispute Hits Major Studios; Films on Location So Far Unaffected

Minor incidents marked the Hollywood studio strike early this week as seven striking locals of the Conference of Studio Unions took their case to the National Labor Relations Board. At MGM eleven men were arrested, eight charged with violating the restraining order aimed at mass picketing. The CSU complaint filed with the NLRB charged that ten major studios and the rival International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, AFL, had "conspired" to deny them their legal rights and had refused to bargain with them collectively since October 24, 1945. Named in the complaint were MGM, Warner Bros., RKO Radio, Paramount, 20th-Fox, Universal, Columbia, Republic, Hal Roach, Samuel Goldwyn, Eric Johnston, head of the Motion Picture Association, and IATSE officials.

Last week, when the following report was written and the strike was three days old, no one could predict what would happen within the next few days. There was a good possibility that many of the larger studios might have to shut down or curtail production to a considerable extent.

MGM Hardest Hit

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been the most strenuously attacked lot during the strike. Cars were overturned, carrying replacements for striking CSU workers; physical attempts were made to keep actors from entering the premises; and fighting was on between strikers and non-strikers and the police. At one time, nearly 1000 pickets were in evidence at Culver City. However, re-enforced police contingents are keeping peace now, and the injunction by the Superior Court judge, which is good until Oct. 7, keeps picketing to a bare skeleton force. Metro didn't get going until the afternoon of the first day, but claimed that seven films were rolling thereafter, although not 100 per cent work on all of them.

"Green Dolphin Street," being produced by Carey Wilson, returned from location just a few short days before the trouble started. (Troupes on location aren't affected by the strike, to date). Van Heflin, who stars in the flicker with Lana Turner, is temporarily out of the cast to complete scenes at Warners on a Joan Crawford picture there. The Technicolor ballet film, "The Unfinished Dance," rehearsed a chorus of 100 for a big finale, set to the music of Dave Rose's Holiday for Strings, bought last week. Difficult underwater scenes were shot on "This Time for Keeps," with Esther Williams and 10 chorus swimmers. Mary Stewart substituted for Al Jennings as assistant director for the film, because of Jennings' illness. Sam Marx, producer of "The Beginning or the End," was given a new two-year contract.

If the CSU strikers choose to disregard the injunction, plenty of trouble may be forthcoming here, possibly leading to a darkening of the studio.

WB in Middle of Strike

Every time there's a strike, Warners seem to be right in the middle. This time is no exception. Next to Metro, the Burbank lot has received the most punishment. Until Judge Washburn limited picketing to a virtual token force, violence flared at Warners; in one case, CSU men boarded a bus taking IA replacements to the lot and gave the IA men severe beatings. At present, scores of Burbank policemen are on duty, and there is no trouble. Again, if the CSU disregards the injunction, or if it is not extended permanently, violence can be expected once more. Warners claimed to have all seven of its films going, following trouble the first day in getting started; but the CSU countered this claim by alleging that production was considerably hampered. Nevertheless, three new pictures were started. They are "My Wild Irish Rose," in Technicolor; "The Woman in White," with Alexis Smith, Eleanor Parker and Sydney Greenstreet; and "Deep Valley," starring Dane Clark, Ida Lupino and Wayne Morris.

George O'Brien, former Western hero, was inked to a top role in "Irish Rose," his first since he went into the Navy five years ago. Rory Mallinson was added to the cast of "Deep Valley," being directed by Jean Negulesco. Osa Massen and Broderick Crawford went into "Night Unto Night," in which Viveca Lindfors makes her American debut opposite Ronald Reagan. Van Heflin came over from Metro to do three weeks of final work with Joan Crawford in "Possessed."

Columbia Gets By

Outside of less than a half-dozen individual cases of pickets getting involved with worker replacements, Columbia was virtually unaffected by the strike. For one thing, one of its pictures, "Lone Hand Texan," third in the current "Durango Kid" series, was on location. Another film, "Twin Sombrero," was in the great open spaces, untouched by pickets. Producer Harry Joe Brown brought the company back from three weeks at Sedona, Ariz., to nearby Newhall, where director George Waggner is trying to make up for lost time occasioned by rain and a broken generator. Orsen Welles and a location crew were in San Francisco, scouting sites for "The Lady from Shanghai," in which Welles will co-star with Rita Hayworth, and direct and produce.

RKO Little Affected

RKO Radio, so far, has managed to keep practically free of trouble. Unconfirmed reports,

'Tchaikovsky' to Lead Wallis 1947 Schedule

Hal Wallis has placed "The Life of Tchaikovsky" at the head of his 1947 schedule and allocated a top budget for the production of the musical biography which Paramount will release. As a result of discussions between the producer and James Mason held in London last spring, a preliminary screenplay by Walter Abbott has been dispatched to the British star.

For the past year negotiations have been under way and are now completed, to secure copyright clearances throughout the world for use of the famous composer's music. Interspersed in the story of Tchaikovsky's colorful career will be a generous portion of his music, which includes six symphonies in addition to concerti, songs and operas.

Production is being planned in Technicolor with a cast to be drawn from the top names in the industry. The picture is scheduled to be the most ambitious undertaking attempted by Wallis since the formation of his independent company two years ago.

14 WB Productions On Blanke's Schedule

As a result of new assignments, Henry Blanke now has 14 pictures on his 1946-47 production schedule for Warners, giving him the heaviest lineup assigned to any single producer in years.

In addition to "Deception" and "Cry Wolf," which are in the editing and scoring stages, and "Deep Valley" and "The Woman in White," currently before the cameras, the Blanke schedule includes "Moby Dick," "The African Queen," "Ethan Frome," "Autumn Crocus," "The Fountainhead," "The Iron Gate," "Man Without Friends," "Lady Windermere's Fan," "Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "Return of the Soldier."

Frank Sets New Film

Production of "Dan Patch," story of the fastest pacer in equine history, has been set for January by W. R. Frank, Minnesota exhibitor who was associated with the production of "Syncopation" and "The Devil and Daniel Webster" for RKO. Screenplay of "Dan Patch" is being completed by John Taintor Foote, noted fiction writer and horse breeder.

Team Haley, Karloff

Jack Haley and Boris Karloff have been signed by RKO Radio to co-star in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," screen version of the noted Broadway success. Herman Schlom will produce, with Sid Rogell as executive producer. Filming is expected to start October 21.

Miss Hyer Gets Lead

Martha Hyer has been given the feminine lead opposite James Warren in RKO's "To the Last Man."

Warners Increase Number Of Technicolor Films

An all-time high in the use of Technicolor for both features and short subjects is scheduled by Warner Bros. for 1946-47.

In addition to two already completed Technicolor features, "Life With Father" and "The Time, the Place and the Girl," color will be used in "My Wild Irish Rose," while two other Technicolor musicals, "Bill's Gay Nineties" and "Howdy, Stranger," are set for 1947 production.

These five pictures will give Warners their highest quota of color features in any single year.

Technicolor shorts, totaling at least 66 out of the 1946-47 schedule of 84, also will set a new record for color.

U-I Signs to Release Rampart Productions

Rampart Productions, recently formed by Joan Fontaine and William Dozier, has signed a long-term exclusive contract with Universal-International for the production and release of its pictures. All Rampart productions will be made in association with U-I, and all deals for the loan-out services of Miss Fontaine will be handled through Rampart, except her present commitment with RKO for one picture a year on that lot.

The new production company plans to acquire outstanding properties, personalities and writers for the pictures to be made under the Rampart banner.

Fans' Request Heeded

Following the release of "My Pal Wolf," RKO Radio received hundreds of letters from film fans asking to see Una O'Connor and little Sharyn Moffett together again on the screen. The requests have been heeded, and the two are to be paired in the studio's forthcoming "Child of Divorce."

Leslie Opposite Tone

Joan Leslie will have the feminine role opposite Franchot Tone in Eagle Lion's "Repeat Performance," replacing Constance Dowling who left the studio recently. The picture is based on a novel by William O'Farrell showing what might happen to a condemned murderer who gets a chance to live again.

Musical Cavalcade

With production scheduled to start next January at MGM, Joseph Pasternak plans a cavalcade of classical music, "Triumph of Music," which will have Jose Iturbi, pianist-conductor, playing himself. The title had formerly been applied to a projected life of Mozart.

Warren Writing Pact

Charles Marquis Warren has signed a new term writing contract with Paramount and started work on a screen treatment of Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim" as his first assignment.

Grippo Plans 'Panic'

Jan Grippo has scheduled "Panic," a murder mystery, as a future vehicle for the Bowery Boys at Monogram. Jerry Warner will do the screenplay.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Alan Curtis to Play Philo Vance in Series for PRC; Joan Lorring Signed by Enterprise for 'Other Love'

Barney Sarecky, recently installed as producer at Monogram, began preparations for his first picture on that lot, tentatively titled "Stick to Your Saddle," which will star Johnny Mack Brown with Raymond Hatton. Lambert Hillyer will direct.

Frank Ferguson was signed for the role of a Hollywood studio executive in "Variety Girl," Paramount's all-star romantic musical. Mary Hatcher will portray the title role with DeForest Kelly in the male lead.

Frank Partos has been signed to a writer-contract by 20th-Fox and will collaborate with Millen Brand on the screenplay of Mary Jane Ward's best-seller, "The Snake Pit," which Robert Bassler will produce and Anatole Litvak direct.

Frances Rafferty was set by Eagle Lion for a major role in "His Bridal Night," romantic comedy which Leigh Jason will direct, with Lee Marcus producing. Ann Richards plays the feminine lead.

Mathew Bolton, Hazel Smart and Elmore Henderson have been cast in "Woman in White," starring Alexis Smith, Sydney Greenstreet, Eleanor Parker and Gig Young. Peter Godfrey directs and Henry Blanke produces for Warners.

"The Son of Rusty," fourth picture in Columbia's "Rusty" series featuring Ted Donaldson, has been added to the production slate of Sanford Cummings.

Barry Sulivan will star in "Violence," original story by Stanley Rubin and Louis Lantz, which Monogram producers Jack Bernhard and Bernard Brandt will put before cameras in December with Bernhard directing.

A Howard Hughes discovery, Iris Bynam, has been given the second feminine role, that of a native girl, in Pine-Thomas' "Adventure Island," being filmed in color from Robert Louis Stevenson's "Ebb Tide." Rhonda Fleming, Rory Calhoun, Paul Kelly and John Abbott share acting honors.

Alan Curtis has been signed by PRC to play suave Philo Vance in a new series of films based on the character created by the late S. S. Van Dine. Sheila Ryan will be seen opposite Curtis in the first of the new series, titled "Philo Vance's Gamble," while Frank Jenks and Tala Birell have important roles. Howard Welsch produces the series, with the first one being directed by Reginald Le Borg.

William Frawley, veteran screen actor, has been assigned to an important feature role in 20th-Fox's "Mother Wore Tights," starring Betty Grable. Walter Lang will direct for producer Lamar Trotti.

Dolores Moran has been given a feminine starring role in the Benedict Bogeaus-Burgess Meredith sectional film, "A Miracle Can Happen." She will appear opposite James Stewart and Henry Fonda in their sequence of the film.

Irving Bacon was signed for a comedy role in Paramount's "Dear Ruth," Joan Caulfield-William Holden starrer which William Russell directs.

Joan Lorring will play the plum role of Celestine in chief support of Barabara Stanwyck and David Niven in "The Other Love," David Lewis production for Enterprise, which Andre de Toth will direct. Screenplay by Ladislas Fodor is based on a new, unpublished novel by Erich Maria Remarque.

Robert Sidney, Broadway dance director, has been signed by Columbia on a long-term contract. Sidney has designed routines for such stage musicals as "Three to Make Ready" and Irving Berlin's long run success, "This Is the Army."

Leo G. Carroll has been assigned an important role in 20th-Fox's "Forever Amber," appearing as Matt Goodegroome, Amber's foster father, in the film which Otto Preminger will direct.

Billy Wilder, Paramount director-writer who has just completed "The Emperor Waltz," lavish Technicolor film, was re-optioned by the studio on the occasion of his tenth anniversary with Paramount.

John Hamilton and George Lloyd have been added to the cast of "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," current Roy Del Ruth production for Monogram. Cast is headed by Don De Fore, Gale Storm, Victor Moore, Ann Harding and Charles Ruggles.

Ben Lessy, night club comedian, has been signed by MGM to appear with Red Skelton in "Merton of the Movies," as a silent picture funny man. Virginia O'Brien shares acting honors with Skelton in the film.

Hayworth, Welles to Co-Star for Columbia

Columbia will co-star Rita Hayworth with Orson Welles in "The Lady From Shanghai," which Mr. Welles will produce and direct from his own screenplay. Production was scheduled to begin this week and the film will be shot on location in Hollywood, New York, San Francisco and Acapulo, Mexico.

Based on the 1939 novel, "If I Die Before I Wake" by Sherwood King, "The Lady From Shanghai" deals with a chauffeur who pleads guilty to a fictitious murder charge.

UA to Release 'Valentino'

With production scheduled for early 1947, Edward Small Productions' "The Life of Rudolph Valentino" will be released through United Artists under terms of a contract approved and signed over the weekend. Meanwhile, Small is continuing his search, begun in 1939 and hampered by the war, for a likeness of the late great star.

Ceballos to Do Dances

Larry Ceballos, who has staged the dance numbers for many of the industry's most spectacular music films, has been signed by producer Sam Coslow to direct the dances in "Copacabana," which Alfred E. Green will direct for United Artists release. Groucho Marx, Carmen Miranda, Andy Russell, Gloria Jean and Steve Cochran have top roles.

however, were rife to the effect that "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer" had to shut down temporarily. However, Hakim-Litvak's "A Time to Kill" kept right on moving, as did "Banjo," on location; "They Won't Believe Me" and Sol Lesser's "Tarzan and the Huntress." The latter was another film reportedly shut down for a time, but studio officials did not definitely confirm this.

A unit headed by director Lynn Shores is on its way to Boston and Washington, D. C., to shoot backgrounds for "Rich Man, Poor Man," in which Eddie Cantor co-stars with Joan Davis. Cantor is also producing. Gordon Douglas is slated to direct the main unit. Picture concerns a forgotten patriot who winds up becoming a buddy of the President.

Enterprise Not Picketed

Enterprise, being an independent, was not picketed. Meanwhile, production continued on David Lewis' "Arch of Triumph," and director Andre De Toth sent a camera crew to San Francisco to get background shots for "The Other Love," the company's next picture.

No Production at EL

With nothing in production, Eagle Lion has been unaffected by the strike. Moreover, it was not picketed by the CSU.

Alvin Levin, under term contract to EL, was assigned by Irving Friedman, music department chief, to compose an original score for the company's initial production, "It's a Joke, Son!" The shooting was completed some time ago, but scoring is just commencing.

Paramount Little Troubled

Paramount claims to have kept seven pictures rolling, despite minor clashes and disturbances. The studio was fortunate in that CSU strike strategy called for few pickets at the lot. The great majority was concentrated at Warners and MGM. The studio was aided, besides, by several films on location. One was "Dear Ruth," which has completed its locationing, following difficulties caused by "smog."

Director Mel Epstein took a location unit to Balboa for backgrounds on "Golden Earrings," while the main group, under Mitchell Leisen, remained at the studio. Pine-Thomas moved from Catalina to Sunland, Cal., for "Adventure Island." Interior sets were constructed to permit uninterrupted filming despite adverse weather. John Hodiak returned to "Desert Town," following hospitalization.

UA Halts Some Features

United Artists stopped production on some fronts. The Bogeaus-Meredith production, "A Miracle Can Happen," an episodic treatment, was postponed until a later date, with the film about three-fourths completed. David O. Selznick stopped work on "Little Women" and "The Paradine Case."

Charles R. Rogers brought home his "The Fabulous Dorseys" just before the trouble started. Producer Jules Levey was fortunate in that the Roach lot, where "New Orleans" is in work, was one of the few majors not being picketed by the CSU.

Federal Films' "Carnegie Hall," shooting in New York, was not bothered by Hollywood's labor strife. Because Goldwyn's lot was another not being picketed—as yet—by the CSU, California Pictures' "Vendetta" went on, as did Howard Hawks' "Red River." Bill Boyd just managed to finish "Hoppy's Holiday," latest Hopalong Cassidy. Hal Roach, who is now releasing through UA, was able to put the finishing touches on his kid comedy-feature, "Who Killed Doc Robin?"

Two Continue at U-I

The two features at Universal-International continued, unabated. Tom Drake returned to "I'll Be Yours," following a three-week vacation given him when the company shot scenes involving Bill Bendix. Film stars Deanna Durbin. Other film rolling is the Technicolor costume drama "Flame of Tripoli."

Republic Evades Picketing

Republic managed to evade picketing during the early days of the strike and at this writing was still unaffected. Just one film was going, "Hit Parade of 1947," being produced and directed by Frank McDonald. The company has over 30 films in its backlog; that is, either in editing or unreleased.

Light Picketing at 20th-Fox

Twentieth Century-Fox was picketed lightly, and was therefore able to keep production going without much trouble. For one thing, "Boomerang" is being produced in faraway Stamford, Conn., where producer Louis de Rochemont and director Elia Kazan are readying the production. Latest addition is Taylor Holmes, veteran Broadway actor, who was brought on from New York.

Ray Klune, 20th's executive production manager, and Sid Bowen, unit manager for "Captain from Castile," went to Mexico City, to make arrangements with the Mexican government for shooting the picture there. Film, which is to star Tyrone Power, will be made entirely across the border, with a three-month shooting schedule.

The studio renewed director Otto Lang's contract and gave a new termer to actor Roy Roberts for his work in the recently completed "The Brasher Doubloon."

PRC Going Strong

Producers Releasing Corporation is going strong these days, strike or no strike. Its Cinecolor special, "Red Stallion," was set to start September 30 at Shasta, Calif., on location, with Lesley Selander directing. In addition to the horse that plays the title role, a bear, two dogs, a jackal, a falcon, an egret and 10 additional equines are set for roles. Humans in the film include Robert Paige, Noreen Nash, Jane Darwell, Ted Donaldson and Willie Best.

"Philo Vance's Gamble" got under way September 27 under the direction of Reginald LeBorg. This is executive producer Howard Welsch's first stint for PRC under his recently signed contract. "Wild Country," newest Eddie Dean, is scheduled to roll October 4, with Ray Taylor directing. Producer Jerry Thomas signed Helen Mowery for the feminine lead, and also added Peggy Wynne and Stan Jolley to the cast of the outdoor musical.

Monogram Completing 'Cisco'

Monogram is completing shooting on the latest "Cisco Kid," called "Cisco and the Angel." Latest additions were Eve Whitney, Marcelle Granville and Julia Kent.

Five Productions on Gottlieb Schedule

Alex Gottlieb, Warner Bros. producer, has been assigned five important story properties for 1946-47 production.

List includes "The Glass Room," new novel by Lester Fuller and Edwin Rolfe, slated to start shooting in November; "Tomorrow Is Another Day," W. R. Burnett's book; "Bill's Gay Nineties," original by Louis Sobol; "Wallflower," from the Broadway stage hit, and "Howdy, Stranger," musical starring Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson.

Plan 'Wabash Avenue' As Technicolor Musical

Plans for the production of "Wabash Avenue," the fabulous tale of Chicago's Tin Pan Alley, as a Technicolor musical woven around the life of Gus Kahn, who turned out more than 75 hits, was announced this week by Darryl Zanuck, 20th-Fox vice-president in charge of production.

The film story, Zanuck said, will be produced by Mack Gordon.

Brown Producing Five

"Thunder in the Forest," an original screenplay by Milton Raison, has been assigned to Donald H. Brown for production, bringing to five the number of pictures Brown will supervise on Republic's 1946-47 schedule. Other Brown assignments: "Web of Danger," "Pride of Kentucky" and two Roy Rogers specials, "Heart of Old Mexico" and "Song of the Golden West."

Family Now Complete

With Ann Todd assigned the role of the middle daughter, the family in MGM's "The Birds and the Bees" is now complete. Other members: Jeanette MacDonald, mother; Jose Iturbi, stepfather; Jane Powell and Sharon McManus, daughters. Joe Pasternak is producing.

Schedule 'Moby Dick'

"Moby Dick," the Herman Melville classic, one of the great sea stories of all time, is up for filming at Warners, having been placed on the production schedule of Henry Blanke. John Huston, writer-director, has been assigned to prepare the screenplay.

French Star Signed

Roger Dann, French musical comedy star, has been signed to a long-term contract by Paramount and will be introduced to American audiences in "Variety Girl," all-star musical film.

Taylor to Direct Dean

Ray Taylor has been signed to direct "Wild Country," first film in PRC's new Eddie Dean outdoor action musical series. Alfred Orloff wrote the screenplay.

Sawtell Will Do It

Paul Sawtell will write the background music for RKO Radio's "Code of the West," in which James Warren plays the male lead.

Exercise Care in Placement Of Short Reels on Program; That Smith Touch in Shorts

Booking the proper types of short subjects for program balance, important as it is, deserves no more care than the placement of shorts in their relation to one another. A number of factors are sure to be involved in lining up shorts so that a proper balance is achieved.

For example, let us say we have 30 minutes available for shorts and to fill that time we have booked a cartoon, a travelogue and a two-reel comedy. Now, assuming that there is also a newsreel on the program, shall we pair two relatively topical or "serious" subjects (the news and travelogue) and also pair two humorous subjects (cartoon and comedy)? Weighing down one end is seriousness; the other, comedy. For better balance, this program of shorts should begin with the newsreel, followed by the cartoon, then the travelogue and finally the comedy. Or, the cartoon could lead the lineup, followed by the travelogue, comedy and newsreel in that order. Thus, between each, is a respite from laughs or from the serious side, as the case may be.

Which Is Predominant?

Then what is to be done if, say, two subjects are in color and two in black and white? Shall we segregate the color shorts from those that are black and white, thus presenting several minutes of color followed by several minutes of black and white? Or, shall we arrange the lineup so that color is followed by black and white, and vice-versa (color, black and white, color, black and white)?

It all depends on which is predominant, the type of short involved or the kind of photography. If type is outstanding, then the problem of color vs. black and white becomes a secondary consideration. On the other hand, if variety can be achieved best through "mixing" the two different kinds of photography, then that is the procedure to follow.

Should Get Special Attention

Aside from the careful selection of shorts for better balance and consequently, better entertainment, the order of the subjects on the program should receive special attention when program schedules are made up. It should be the business of the person supervising these schedules to determine just which subject should follow which, and why.

To our desk has come a photograph of MGM's Pete Smith receiving from MGM's Red Skelton the trophy of the Motion Picture Committee, National Safety Council, for Pete's Specialty, "Safety Sleuth." Pete deserves congratu-

Screening for Vehicle, Traffic Heads Garners Publicity for 'Highway Mania'

'All Sports Show'

When a sporting goods store opens, the wise showman does something about it. And wise, indeed, was Manager Ralph Civitello of the Devon Theatre, Devon, Conn., who, in a tieup with a newly opened sporting goods store in that community, presented an "All Sports Night" show consisting of 14 single-reel shorts covering all phases of sports. Prizes were donated by the store, and Civitello himself donated neckties to be included in the gifts. A Devon sports celebrity was invited to speak from the stage. Invitations to attend the special show were accepted by Coach Herbert French and the Milford, Conn., high school football squad.

An outstanding promotional campaign for the RKO-Pathe This Is America subject, "Highway Mania" was put over in Washington, D. C., by Sol Sorkin, manager of the RKO Keith Theatre.

Excellent results were obtained through tieups suggested by the safety theme on which the picture is based.

Sorkin first contacted the Director of Vehicles and Traffic of the District of Columbia and arranged to screen the picture for District Commissioners, Metropolitan Police heads, officers and men of the Traffic Division as well as officials of the District transportation companies, members of the automobile associations, judges of the Municipal Court and other officials.

To make the screening official, invitations were sent out by the Director of Motor Vehicles. In addition to this, the Superintendent of Police sent an invitation over the Police Department teletype for all men in the various precincts to attend.

Wide newspaper coverage was given the screening, not only with stories but picture layouts as well.

To place further emphasis on the campaign, Manager Sorkin contacted Matthew J. Connelly, secretary to President Truman, and obtained an Executive Order to reopen East Executive Avenue which runs just east of the White House and which had been closed since the start of World War II.

Official ceremonies attendant upon the reopening were covered by the newspapers, with all tieing in with the special showing of "Highway Mania" at the Keith Theatre.

Radio commentators also gave it considerable attention, including special broadcasts from Traffic Court, with the presiding judge recommending that traffic offenders go to see "Highway Mania."

'Last Bomb' Premiere to Be Held in Washington

World premiere of the "The Last Bomb," Technicolor Special two-reeler produced by Warner Bros. in cooperation with the U. S. Army Air Forces and supervised by Frank Lloyd, will take place October 10 at the Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C.

An invitation preview for educators and editors of scentific publications was held one day last month in the Earle projection room under AAF auspices. Among prominent educators viewing the subject were Dr. Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association; Dr. Guy E. Snavely, executive director of the American Association of Colleges, and L. H. Dennis, executive secretary of the American Vocational Association for the Advancement of Science.

Warners Set 9 Shorts For November Release

One of the biggest schedules of short subject releases for any single month in the past six years has been set by Warner Bros. for November, when nine subjects will be placed in general distribution, according to Norman H. Moray, short subject sales manager.

All except two of the shorts, "Minstrel Days" and "So You Want to Save Your Hair," are in Technicolor. Heading the latter group is "The Last Bomb." The others include four cartoons, "Mouse Menace," "Rhapsody Rabbit," "Roughly Squeaking" and "One Meat Brawl"; a Sports Parade, "Battle of Champs," and an Adventure Special, "Rubber River."

Bradley Narrates Short

Truman Bradley, radio announcer, is the narrator for Warners' "A Boy and His Dog," which was directed by LeRoy Prinz and produced by Gordon Hollingshead.

Woody Herman Signs For Pal Puppetoon

Woody Herman, bandleader, has been signed by George Pal to star with his orchestra in the second of Pal's Puppetoons for Paramount combining puppets and live action, "Rhapsody in Wood."

Duke Ellington and his orchestra were featured in the first of the combination shorts, "Date With Duke," in which his Perfume Suite was performed. Pal hopes to have this film released in time to compete for the 1946 Academy Awards.

Finish 'Snake Eyes'

"Snake Eyes," first of MGM's Crime Does Not Pay shorts for 1946-47 release, has been completed. Barry Nelson has the leading role as a young man tempted by chance at easy money.

First Musicolor Short Is Shown in Salt Lake City

World premiere of the first of a series of seven Musicolor shorts being produced by David L. Loew for United Artists release took place one day last month at the Centre Theatre in Salt Lake City.

Setting a precedent, the subject, "Toccata and Fugue," was given the benefit of a gala opening, with Werner Janssen, prominent orchestra leader who furnished the musical background, making a personal stage appearance at the Centre in the interest of the ten-minute short. Special advertising was also used to herald the opening.

During his stay in Salt Lake City, the noted conductor was guest of honor at a luncheon sponsored jointly by the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce and Salt Lake Advertising Club.

Interviewed by the press upon his arrival, Mr. Janssen explained that his idea in "Toccata and Fugue" was to combine the works of old masters with scenes which typify the music. The movegoing public, he said, might in this way develop a deeper appreciation of classical music.

"Toccata and Fugue" unfolds the story of Utah's famed Bryce Canyon to the accompaniment of a musical background of Johann Sebastian Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor played by Mr. Janssen and his 90-piece symphony orchestra. The subject, filmed in the new three-color Cinecolor process, has no commentary. Instead, the musical background expresses the word picture to audiences for the action taking place on the screen.

Grecula, O'Sullivan Set New 'Chick Carter' Club

Columbia's serial "Chick Carter, Detective" was the occasion for the formation of a Chick Carter, Detective Club at the Rialto Theatre, Hartford. Stunt was handled by Ernie Grecula, advertising and publicity director of the Hartford Theatres Circuit, and Bill O'Sullivan, manager of the Rialto.

Prospective members of the club were given cards at the initial Saturday matinee, with copy "See 14 chapters of 'Chick Carter, Detective,' and then present this card at the door to see the 15th Chapter, free!" Window displays and truck banners also were part of the campaign. —HAR.

Lecture Aids Business

Some time ago Buster Scott of the Waco Theatre, Waco, Texas, had the March of Time subject, "Problem Drinkers," booked for his house. So he arranged for a screening of the subject before local dignitaries. This was followed by a lecture on the subject's content at Baylor College. This was followed by newspaper publicity, and special ad, lobby and marquee copy. This was followed by excellent business on the subject.

Shorts Above Feature

When Joe Jackson of the Village Theatre, Dallas, set up his trailer advertising for the next attraction at his house, he billed the short subjects above the feature. Given the old selling plug were Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Tom & Jerry and Woody Woodpecker cartoons.

'Walter Kitty' to be New Cartoon Character

"The Secret Life of Walter Kitty" has been announced as the title for the latest MGM Cartoon. Tex Avery will direct the Technicolor one-reeler, which will introduce a new cartoon character "Walter Kitty."

Active again after its annual vacation, the MGM Cartoon studio recently resumed work on the heaviest production schedule in its history. A total of 20 Technicolor cartoons are in various stages of production at the studio, according to Producer Fred Quimby. Eight one-reel cartoons are in final stages of production, including three "Tom and Jerry" cartoons directed by William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, three Tex Avery-directed shorts, and two "Barney Bear" cartoons, co-directed by Michael Law and Preston Blair.

Boy Scouts Attend Screening of Short

A feature of the 25th anniversary celebration of the Boys Scouts of America in the Ohio, West Virginia and Kenntucky regions, held last Saturday (September 28) at the Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, was a special screening of Warners' Technicolor featurette, "Men of Tomorrow," depicting the work of the Boy Scouts.

Following the screening, Vernon Berg, Warner field representative, addressed the Scouts and outlined how they could cooperate with their local exhibitors in booking and promoting the picture.

Save Vacation Footage For Screen Snapshots

When Glenn Ford recently turned over to Ralph Staub several hundred feet of 16-mm. film shot by the Columbia star on a vacation he spent in the High Sierras, the delivery marked the inauguration of a new idea by Staub, who produced Columbia's Screen Snapshots.

Staub has made agreements with a number of screen and radio personalities to furnish them with 16-mm. camera, film and all necessary equipment before they leave on vacation jaunts, and in return the stars have agreed to turn over some of the footage they shoot. This footage will eventually be included in the Screen Snapshot reels.

For Radio Coverage

For quick and concentrated radio coverage on "Traffic With the Devil," MGM held a special showing of the short last Saturday morning (28) at the Egyptian Theatre, Los Angeles, for news analysts and broadcasters representing every local station. The subject was produced with the cooperation of the Associated Press and the sponsorship of the National Safety Council and the Los Angeles Police Department.

Cartoons Break Records

A cartoon carnival broke house records—yessir, that's what it says here—for Howard Skelton at the Village Theatre, Houston, Texas. Besides the feature, "Pinnochio," the program consisted of "The Cheese Burglar," "Egg Cracker Suite" and "Hair-Raising Hare." The show was played up big in the newspapers, with a special editorial as well as ad space. A special panel was displayed in the lobby.

lations on winning the award, and from the handsome looks of it, we're sure he'll take pardonable pride in showing it to his friends. But just be sure it sets well back on its base, Pete, for, judging from the size in the picture, which appears to be nearly half-a-man high, the trophy, if it fell, would occasion a crash that could be heard at least half way 'round the world.

Speaking of Pete and his award reminds us of the preview and luncheon MGM held recently in New York in connection with a new release, "Sure Cures," at which Dave O'Brien, star of the subject, and his wife, were guests. Dave recounted many behind-the-scenes experiences in short subject making which, in themselves, would provide ample material for a number of shorts. As for "Sure Cures" itself, we can only say that the Smith touch is to short subjects what the Lubitsch touch is to features. Pete is probably the only short subject producer in captivity who, instead of manufacturing situations for his series of one-reelers, takes them from happenings in our everyday life. We look forward to his forthcoming explorations into domestic bliss, "I Love My Wife, But" and "I Love My Husband, But."

Exhibitors playing the Warner short subject, "Men of Tomorrow," would do well to seek the cooperation of local Boy Scout heads in its promotion. Seeking isn't likely to be necessary, however, for the Boy Scouts have heard about the subject and in all likelihood will be at their local theatreman's doorstep for information about playdates and what they can do to help bring the story of their organization before the largest number of people.

First Republic Cartoon Now in Production

Republic Studios entered the short subject field last month when the company's initial cartoon feature, "It's a Grand Old Nag," went into production at the Bob Clampett Cartoon Studio. The series of six cartoons will be filmed in Trucolor, new color process developed by Consolidated Laboratories. The first subject is expected to be ready for December delivery.

Cartoon Studio is a corporation headed by Robert E. Clampett, president; Walter W. Arnold, vice-president and general manager; Roydon Vosberg, secretary, and Murray Vosberg, treasurer.

Tone Poem of Gotham

"Rhythm of New York," a Technicolor short subject described as a color tone poem of Gotham, has been announced by Jack L. Warner for early production. Camera crews, under Carl Dudly have been shooting footage in various parts of New York state. Short is produced by Gordon Hollingshead for Warner Bros.

Next Musical Parade Set

"Five and Dime" will be Paramount's next two-reel Technicolor Musical Parade. The original story, dealing with the adventures of two girls against a New York night club background, was developed by Jack Roberts, studio writer, who also wrote the screenplay. Lou Harris is producing.

SHORT SUBJECT REVIEWS

RKO (63,706) Leon Errol 18 mins.

Shall we go into the plot? It's a mixup in which Errol has to dress as a woman and be married to friend Paul Harvey to keep the latter out of jail. Harvey's wife arrives to unwig Leon and the judge remands both to the mercies of their wives. Both Errol and Harvey do a bang-up job in this, and average audiences will get plenty of good laughs out of it. A nice, lively filler.

20th-Fox March of Time 17 mins.

Despite a near record harvest this year in the United States and many other countries famine still stalks in India, China and some European states. The problem of feeding these countries and aiding them to become self-sufficient by providing agricultural equipment, fertilizer and "know how" through the United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Association (UNRRA) and through the bounty of private individuals is amply demonstrated. The March of Time's newest production gives graphic proof of the starvation that exists, particularly in China and India, and demonstrates through charts and photographs the important part being played by the United States in fostering relief to the suffering peoples. That America has contributed 72 per cent of UNRRA funds and almost 75 per cent of the supplies that are daily being shipped are facts that also are forcibly presented. "World Food Problem" is an excellent presentation of the problem that exists and is thoroughly engrossing entertainment as well. The short contains many angles for exploitation efforts.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AND MARCH 3, 1933.

Of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, published weekly at New York, New York, for October 1, 1946.
State of New York County of New York
ss:

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Sidney Shapiro, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Business Manager of the Showmen's Trade Review and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1933, embodied in section 537, Postal Laws and Regulations printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

Business Manager, Sidney Shapiro, 1501 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

2. That the owner is : (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a firm, company, or other unincorporated concern, its name and address, as well as those of each individual member, must be given.)

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) None

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholders or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the twelve months preceding the date shown above is 8,909.

MGM Pete Smith Specialty 10 mins.

Delving once again into the phobias and eccentricities of we human mortals, Pete Smith comes up with an excellent short subject about those home remedies touted to be sure cures. Counting sheep to fall asleep, experimenting with all kinds of hair preparations to prevent baldness, using all the well-known tricks to stop hiccups and other "sure cures" are tried by Dave O'Brien with amusing results. Of course, O'Brien's attempts are met with other difficulties which must be overcome, and these too, provoke laughter. The short should be a welcome and refreshing addition to any program.

Goal Rush (Novel)

Para. (P5-5) Noveltoons 6 mins.

Canine College and Alley Cat College play a football game in the Milk Bowl with each side gaining alternate advantages. Between halves the Bouncing Ball leads the audience through well-known football songs. In the second half, the Canine team uses mechanical mice to upset the Cats. A novel Technicolor cartoon.

WB (3501) Sports Parade 10 mins.

Ross Allen of Silver Springs, Fla. is shown as he goes through his various didoes with wild animals to the admiration of the troop of Boy Scouts. Printed in Technicolor, the film fails to offer anything new, but does a workmanlike job of following Ross as he lassoes a racoon, panther, and dives after turtles, fish and alligators. For any audience, but purely a filler.

Mr. Chimp on Vacation (Good)

Univ. (1354) Variety View 10 mins.

Shorty visits the beach with his master and the master's girl, who incidentally, isn't hard to take in a bathing suit. Shorty goes through his usual shenanigans, but he's out of his element in the sand and in the water. He doesn't like it and registers his objections. Good for any program.

Screen Snapshots No. 9 (Poor)

Columbia (7859) 11 mins.

This is a motion picture recording of one of Judy Canova's radio shows, taken right at the microphone. The humor is poor, and loses whatever impact it might have had by the addition of sight, destroying the illusions created by the program's sound effects.

20th-Fox (7504) Mighty Mouse 7 mins.

Bad Bill Bunion, toughest critter of the west, escapes from Alcatraz, aided by his venal horse. The duo embark on a series of nefarious deeds, including the stealing of the ball during an Army-Navy football game. Bill evades tanks, the air forces in all of their might, the navy's big guns, etc. Not until Mighty Mouse himself, in person, appears on the scene does law and order again triumph and Bill and his horse are returned to Alcatraz. In Technicolor, this short is a delight for any program.

On Forthcoming Product

THEY WALK ALONE (Col.) Mystery. Principals: Glenn Ford, Janis Carter, Edgar Buchanan. Director, Richard Wallace. Plot: A young mining engineer meets a blonde waitress and her bank president boy-friend, who attempt to frame him in a big robbery. She makes a play for him, while planning his murder, but when the time comes, she kills the bank president instead, intending to pull the robbery herself. The engineer traps her in the act and turns her over to the police.

CALENDAR GIRL (Rep.) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Jane Frazee, William Marshall, Gail Patrick. Director, Allan Dwan. Plot: Two young men from Boston, a painter and a composer, arrive in New York to further their careers. At their boarding house they fall in love with the same girl, a dancer, although the painter is engaged to a socialite back home. He paints a calendar picture of the girl and it wins a big prize. When his fiancee comes to visit, amid all the complications, the dancer learns the truth and realizes her love for the composer, who has written a musical in which she will star.

QUEEN OF THE AMAZONS (Screen Guild) Drama. Principals: Robert Lowery, Patricia Morison. Director, Edward Finney. Plot: An American girl organizes a safari to hunt for her fiance, missing in the jungle since he set out to track down a group of ivory poachers. They trail him to the village of a tribe of beautiful white Amazon women, where they learn that he and the Amazon queen have fallen in love. He remains in the jungle with his queen, while the girl returns to civilization with her new love, the safari guide.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This is a new service feature which will be expanded. Its purpose is to supply theatremen with the classifications as to audience suitability, by age groups, of national reviewing committees which are independent of the industry. This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that in advertising, as well as in response to requests of local groups or individual parents, the theatreman may state the facts about the suitability of a given feature for showing to children as determined not by himself or any industry agency but by organizations maintained for the service of the public.

Dark Mirror	Family	.....	Adults	.....
Three Little Girls in Blue	Family	8-14	General Patronage	.....
White Tie and Tails	Family	.....	Adults	.....
Perfect Marriage	Mature	.....	Adults	Mature Family

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Foundid in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

WHISPERING WALLS (UA) Western. Principals: William Boyd, Andy Clyde, Rand Brooks. Director, George Archainbaud. Plot: Hopalong Cassidy's pal has inherited a share of a ranch, along with four other people. When two of the heirs are mysteriously killed, Hoppy sets out to find the reason. He discovers oil on the supposedly worthless ranch, and exposes the family attorney and his henchman as the crooks. The henchman kills the attorney, only to be captured by Hoppy and turned over to the law.

ANGEL AND THE BADMAN (Rep.) Western. Principals: John Wayne, Gail Russell. Director, James Edward Grant. Plot: A westerner falls in love with a beautiful Quaker girl. For her, he renounces his oath to kill the man who murdered his foster-father. But when he and the girl are attacked by the murderer and his gang, and the girl becomes desperately ill as a result, he forgets his promise. The two men meet in the street and the death of the outlaw settles their feud forever.

BORN TO SPEED (EL) Drama. Principals: Johnny Sands, Terry Austin, Don Castle. Director, Edward L. Cahn. Plot: A young boy leaves home to follow his desire for an auto-racing career, against his mother's wishes. He falls in love with a girl who hates racing because her brother was killed on the track. After an accident in which the boy almost dies, he loses his nerve, but goes back for one more race and wins the Gold Cup, before letting his mother and sweetheart persuade him to return to his home-town.

SPOILERS OF THE NORTH (Rep.) Drama. Principals: Paul Kelly, Adrian Booth, Evelyn Ankers. Director, Richard Sale. Plot: A ruthless fishery tycoon has dominated and abused the Alaskan natives, and his own young brother, for years. Finally the brother rebels. An alluring half-breed girl, jealous of the beautiful socialite whom the tycoon is to marry, attacks him with a harpoon. He dies of the wounds, she goes to prison, and the young brother marries the society girl.

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE (RKO) Drama. Principals: Jimmy Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Donna Reed. Director, Frank Capra. Plot: Confined to a small town life against his wishes, a young man takes over his father's philanthropical work, marries and raises three children. Always he is frustrated in his attempts to get out and see something of the world. Faced with financial disaster, he expresses a wish that he had never been born. When a messenger from Heaven points out to him how the community would have suffered had he never lived, he realizes a man's wealth is not measured by material possessions, and he settles back in his life, his troubles seeming insignificant.

RENEGADE GIRL (Screen Guild) Drama. Principals:Alan Curtis, Ann Savage, Jack Holt. Director, William Berke. Plot: When her brother is killed by an Indian in a Civil War feud, a young Southern girl takes over the leadership of his guerilla gang. She believes her lover, a Captain in the Union Army, has betrayed her. When she learns he had been true, but realizes they cannot marry because of her past, she vows to find and kill the Indian. In an attack by the Indian band, she is wounded and dies in her sweetheart's arms.

"Undercurrent"

with Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor
116 Mins.
M-G-M

SET OUT THE ROPES TO HOLD THE LINES THAT WILL FORM FOR THIS SPLENDID DRAMATIC OFFERING.

All the superlatives and very probably a batch of new ones will be called upon to give praise to "Undercurrent." In a season that started in a whirl of lightness and color "Undercurrent" arrives to stir profoundly and provide an emotional impact seldom encountered in the artificiality of the film medium.

Katherine Hepburn has a role that lines her up for unquestioned leadership in her chosen line of endeavor and when the conclusion rolls past, the viewer will be limp, exhausted, stirred. 'Undercurrent" for exhibitor and patron is one of those all too rare events.

From the outset a scheme of suspense is created in the direction of Vincente Minelli that moves and builds to quite unbearable heights and there is a fairly hair-raising scene most certainly not for the impressionable and thin-skinned.

As the story is the thing and as each new role enhances a player's estimation and adds to stature of indicated potentialities so will this film set laurels for Robert Taylor, Robert Mitchum and the supporting cast that includes Edmund Gwenn, Marjorie Main, Jayne Meadows, Clinton Sundberg and Dan Tobin.

The story is a beautiful example of screen writing; intelligent, warm, inventive and given the limit in interpretation. Edward Chodorov has done handsomely and creditably by Thelma Strabel's original. On the music side a Brahms piano concerto tinges, emphasizes, heightens and sets off the dramatic content and in this respect, for his taste and contribution to the whole, Herbert Stothart rates special consideration in the distribution of laudatory remarks.

Miss Hepburn is a young girl swept off her feet by a rapid marriage to Taylor, a rich, renowned manufacturer. and set down amid the glamor of capital society and the country life of aristrocratic Virginia. And as marital life settles upon her she becomes aware of something not entirely right in her husband's action. His brother is relegated to chance remarks, abrupt dismissal. He speaks little of his family.

This is one of the best.

CURRENT OBSERVATIONS

It is amazing that after all the time which has elapsed since the New York Statutory Court decision was handed down, that the industry should still be so divided on the many vexing problems which have arisen in its wake.

The chief reason for this, of course, is that there is nothing approaching a united front in the exhibitor branch of the industry. The situation emphasizes again the wide differences that exist as several organizations, following closely their own "rugged individualism" rather than meeting on common ground for mutual benefit, deliberately take stands in opposite camps on matters vitally affecting all exhibitors. It's a perfect formula for chronic turmoil and a result which makes the exhibitor body as a whole a sucker for a Sunday punch from any and every quarter that chooses to take a sock at the business.

The distributors, in this case, appear to be as muddled as the exhibitors and far from a solution of their problems except—and it is a big "except"—that they can go along selling their pictures individually and at very handsome figures.

Whether there will be a sympathetic hearing and an intelligent approach to the problems that will be put before the Court by the exhibitors and distributors in their various and several petitions remains to be seen.

Meantime, indecision reigns in the business, and there is valuable loss of energy to any industry when uncertainty enters to cause tentative rather than permanent policy and vigorous action. Actually we have in the industry a sorry state of affairs and no amount of optimism can alter the cold, hard fact that there is no relief in sight for a long time to come. Because the industry cannot return to normal and achieve anything approaching a balance between the distributor and exhibitor branches until there is a lot more product available and a distribution setup that would give wider encouragement to independent production.

While the good old industry squirms from the pangs and miseries of its internal ailments, it is being given a very beautiful needling and jabbing from all and sundry round and about it. But more amazing than anything else is the fact that many of the industry's own members are giving it the arm and are joining the chorus of Hollywood baiters.

For example, Richard de Rochemont, production chief of the March of Time, does a by-line story for the New York Times in which he appears to be attempting to give Hollywood and the U. S. industry the hot-foot by claiming that American pictures which are sent to Europe are giving those people a "glittering cascade of rhinestones," whereas the Europeans are "asking us for spiritual and emotional bread."

There is a veritable "cascade" (thanks, Dick, for that word) of abuse and invective against Hollywood and American films, it seems to us. And we don't think it's mere accident that the "heat is on" for Hollywood.

Them's rich markets, those territories abroad, as well as the theatres in this country and there's lots of competition for them. Hollywood has taken the lion's share of the bookings in theatres all around the world, because Hollywood—for all the sneering—has turned out the pictures the people of all lands like best. Sooo, Hollywood gets the old smear treatment—but good and international and on a scale that is super-colossal no less.

Now it's all very well to be big, and generous. It's very well to feel smug and act mellow and feel that it can take it—"so let the boys have their gripe." But it looks very much to us that this campaign—which we have mentioned previously in this corner—is taking on a momentum and acquiring a power which promises to increase and multiply.

That sharp-shooting, the sniping from foreign press, the needling from the superior ones within the industry itself, the flippant jibes of newspaper reviewers, are all blending with the other hullabaloo that resounds from strikes, asinine charges of union "leaders" about the politics of stars, etc., and so-forth, to create a condition that could set the industry back on its heels.

As a tag to all this, we'll repeat what we've said many times and still believe:

This industry needs a real public relations job, and the way to get it is to set up some program that will utilize the theatreman right on the job as the contact with the public.

The industry has tried other ways, including the "czar" formula, and gotten nowhere, so why not try the sensible thing for a change?

Ask Triple Dish Bill

Another federal suit under the anti-trust laws against three theatre corporations and eight distributors, was on record this week as Joseph Miskinis and his son, Joseph, Jr., of the Civic Theatre, filed suit for triple damages totaling $102,951.

The Miskinis petition asserts that house has continually suffered since its opening in May, 1941 because of its inability to get pictures and that it had to resort to giving away dishes to survive. The dish bill amounted, they claim to $34,317. This amount, tripled is asked in damages.

Defendants are: Loew's for MGM, United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia, Universal, Warner Bros., RKO, Paramount United Detroit Theatres, Harpter Theatres, Seven Mile Theatre Co.

Nation Senses Coming Product Shortage, Makes Few Changes

Duals Hold Up With Help of Reissues; Some Houses Cut Down on Midweek Change

Theatres across the country which are beginning to feel a shortage of product are in some instances cutting down the number of changes a week or going in for reissues, but as a general rule there is no film famine manifesting itself to date yet, a survey of the nation completed this week revealed.

Many exhibitors profess to see such a handwriting on the wall and acknowledge that their present activities are merely temporary and may have to be changed. To date, however, there is no marked indication of any definite decrease of double features or any heavy decrease in the number of changes per week.

The prospect of a film famine seems to be something that most exhibitors view as a problem for the future.

Holdover Log Jam

That the log jam of product caused by holdovers and moveovers due to the phenomenal business which has greeted the industry's first runs, might be broken was extremely unlikely. Situations throughout the country which had previously been regarded as one week stands, now are running two or more weeks as a matter of policy. As long as the legions which attend downtown first runs continues in its present strength, observers believe that there will be no decrease in holdovers.

The trend is possibly best summarized by New York's Radio City Music Hall. Last year that show window played only nine features in an entire year. To date it has played only eight, with the eighth having a better than even chance of a very long run which might crowd it almost to the end of the season. At any rate there is little possibility that the maximum number of features it shows, will exceed the 1946 maximum of nine.

That, incidentally, seems indicative of a general situation, for as long as profitable first runs can be milked, there is little possibility of features being released for other runs.

That there has been a gradual tightening of product, almost unnoticeable in some localities, seems agreed upon.

From Milwaukee comes the report:

"As to any tendency toward extending runs and decreasing the number of shows per week, that is being noticed or is just in the offing, according to several managers. One said that such conditions are being forced on exhibitors, that they would prefer to keep on the old way of changing oftener and especially to make a change when a decrease in patronage becomes evident for a given show."

Cincinnati reports no decrease in double features but a fear on part of subsequent run exhibitors that if holdovers and moveovers continue that they will suffer.

In Albany, where there is a feeling that "something is going to happen," there has been no tendency to decrease double features or the number of changes a week. Several Schine houses reportedly have gone into single feature policies, however.

In Cleveland all first run houses consistently play single features. During the past year these houses have extended their runs more and more so that one week runs are the exception rather than the rule, with two weeks becoming common and three weeks usual. "Notorious," "Night and Day," "Gilda" and "Saratoga Trunk" had runs from five to six weeks.

Reissues in Demand

Reissues seem to be more and more in demand by subsequent runs to ease up the tightness caused by the loss of available product due to holdovers in the first runs. Experienced exchange men in Cleveland believe that never have theatres of that city played so many reissues as they have during the current year.

They add, however, as these reissues get used up, the exhibitors will face a serious product shortage, which may automatically force them into a single feature policy despite the fact that their patrons want double fea-

'Tidbit Bars', 'Donut' Shops in Century Plan

(See Cover)

Employes of the Century Circuit, in an "extra profits" convention held in New York, Tuesday, heard executives of the company's concession subsidiary describe a plan to take over all confection concessions in and around the circuit's 37 Brooklyn and Long Island theatres.

Leslie Schwartz, vice-president of the concession subsidiary, Andrews, Inc., described the plan to those who gathered for the one-day meeting in the Waldorf Astoria as an "aggressive pursuit for the supplementary income dollar."

Under it, special "tidbit" bars, constructed by Century to serve candy, popcorn, and soft drinks, would be established in all the circuit's houses, constructed to fit the needs of the house. Also, Century would take over the stores immediately adjoining the theatre to construct them into soft drink establishments which would be called "Stardust" shops and would bear panel decorations of Hollywood stars and films. These shops would all have an entrance also directly from the theatre.

First of these shops has already been successfully operating for six weeks in the Brooklyn Rialto, Schwartz said. The extra profits needed by theatres, was stressed throughout the convention, as a reason for the plan.

Postpones ATA Affiliation Action

Homer Strowig was elected president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association which met in Kansas City last week. The association also approved the turning over of $1,500 from the Kansas City area War Activities Committee to the American Theatres Association for organizational activities, but decided to take no action in joining ATA until the final decree in the anti-trust suit had been entered.

Others elected were: Elmer Bills, Salisbury, Mo., vice-president; C. E. Cook, Maryville, Mo., secretary and Fred Meyn, Kansas City, (re-elected) treasurer.

New directors named include Tom Edwards, Eldon, Mo.; George Baker, Kansas City; Dale Danielson, Russell, Kansas; Ralph Larned, LaCrosse, Kansas; J. E. Pennington, Topeka; Clarence A. Schultz, Kansas City; J. A. Becker, Independence; Earl Jameson, Lee Summit, Mo.; Herman Ilmer, Kansas City; Frank Weary, Richmond, Mo.; Mrs. T. H. Slothower, Wichita, and Frank Plumlee, Kansas City.

Gov't., Big 5 at Odds on Decree Proposals as U. S. Asks Divorce Ban on Cross-Licensing

Majors Want Arbitration Kept, Other Factors Than Price Considered in Bids

The Department of Justice and the Big 5 this week were still at odds in the anti-trust suit as the Government filed a revised proposal for a decree together with supplementary papers which urged divorce, dissolution of clearances for affiliated theatres, banning of cross-licensing and abandonment of arbitration, while the Big 5 submitted proposals which hedged selling and clearance with provisions of revenue, preferred playing time and prior business relations and asked for retention of arbitration.

The Government move to abandon auction selling excepting where an exclusive run is demanded, was no surprise since auctioning was never a Department of Justice proposal but was written into the opinion by the three judge statutory court. The exception in favor of exclusive runs now requires that the picture be sold to the "highest responsible bidder" with an adequate theatre regardless of other considerations such as affiliates or "old customers."

The move toward persuading the court to order divorce of theatres is not made in the revised brief but in "Proposed Supplemental and Amended Findings" which claim that the defendants dominate the film market not through the number of their theatres but through their locations and positions, and that the only way to restore a free market is through divorce. The Government submits the ruling of Federal Judge John Knight in the Schine case in support of its divorce request.

Big 5 File

The Government filed its reply Tuesday. The Big 5 Defendants—Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Loew's (MGM), Warner Bros.—filed their proposals Wednesday but did refused to make them public. Their papers, said to number nine pages to the Government's total of 41, were apparently not written as a decree but merely as what the Big 5 thought the court ought to embody in a decree. Universal and United Artists were considering this week whether or not they would file a proposed decree.

Outside observers thought both sides were holding their Sunday punch till the last minute. From Washington a spokesman from the Department of Justice told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW that "our answer will be filed with the court next week. We will file a proposed final judgment from which you can tell just how we feel about the various proposals we have received from distributor and exhibitor sources." This confirms reports that the Government would supplement its recent proposal. The spokesman commented on reports that the new proposal would be against percentages in favor of flat rentals, terming the subject "pure speculation."

(The Conference of Independent Exhibitors Association which had urged divorce and elimination of auction selling upon the Government, had also urged a flat rental clause, arguing that flat rentals would eliminate other considerations in bidding. With flat rentals, Pres. Jesse Stern said, the size of theatres, policy, even clearance would cease to be factors and the sole question would be how much money an exhibitor was willing to pay for a film. CIEA will attempt to appear as a friend of the court.)

The Big 5 submitted their interpretation of the court's opinion in several proposals.

Most important of these seemed to be that other factors beside the highest bidder should determine who gets the picture bid upon. The Big 5 argues the amount of film revenue the bidding exhibitor will furnish for the picture, the length of playing time, the days in the week it will be played, the surrounding program, the type of house owned by the exhibitor, its transit facilities, admission prices, etc., should be among points considered.

Another factor to be considered in bidding, the Big 5 told the court, is the suitability of the theatre for the picture in question and what effect a run in that theatre may have upon returns from other exhibitors in the future.

The Big 5 also set up a definition of "reason-

The Government

DIVORCE—Wants distributors divested of their theatre holdings. ("A divorce judgment would, in our view, make unnecessary most of the provisions of the judgment with respect to the manner in which films should be licensed. . . . Divesting the major defendants of their theatre interests will tend to restore and maintain competition.")

CLEARANCE—All clearance presently affecting affiliated theatres would be abolished.

AUCTIONING—Would be limited to situations where exclusive runs are wanted, with the "highest responsible bidder, without discrimination in favor of affiliates, old customers," getting the film.

SOME RUN—Would grant some run on "reasonable terms" to all exhibitors.

CROSS LICENSING—Would prohibit a defendant from playing his pictures in theatres owned by another defendant for a 10-year period.

CANCELING—Would permit more than one picture to be bought at time provided each picture were sold individually theatre by theatre and the exhibitor has the privilege of cancelling up to 25 per cent of what he bought sight unseen within ten days after he has the opportunity to view the picture. No exhibitor can buy more than six months' product at one time and all exhibitors must run a picture within 30 days after it is available for his run. (The Government explains this is done to prevent overbuying or delaying film to destroy competition.)

EXPANSION—Would prohibit the major defendants to expand their theatre interests or from buying up the independent members of dissolving pools. (Asks that all pools be dissolved within two years.)

The Big 5

SELLING—Distributors would be allowed to consider theatre admissions as one of the factors in accepting bids; to fix minimum rentals for their films; to consider the revenue which an exhibitor can furnish for a feature based on the number of days he will play the picture, the time of the week he will play it, the surrounding program planned for it, the theatre, its equipment, appointments and transit facilities. Past business relations, business methods, honest and financial responsibility of the exhibitor and the effect exhibition of the feature in a theatre would have on other exhibitions of the feature, would also be considered.

CLEARANCE—To be based on admission scales of the theatres involved, their seating capacity, type of entertainment, location and policy (such as duals, giveaways, etc.); rentals and the amount of revenue a distributor gets out of the theatre.

ARBITRATION—To be retained on licensing provision and clearance, with the power of the arbitrator in clearance matters restricted to fixing the maximum clearance between competitive theatres and to abolishing clearance between non-competitive theatres. Modification of the arbitrator's ruling through reopening of cases in light of subsequent experience is also asked for. Arbitrators could impose fines of between $100 and $5,000 for various violations.

ROADSHOWS—The distributor shall have the right to arrange for roadshowing a picture under his terms.

EXPANSION—To be permitted if the defendants, by acquiring added theatres do so to protect their interests or "in order to enter a competitive field." The present court or a court in the federal district where the theatres to be acquired are located, would rule on the question.

Not Guilty

Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught, Wednesday in Oklahoma City found the Griffith Circuit, its affiliates and individual defendants H. J. Griffith, L. G. Griffith and R. E. Griffith (deceased) not guilty of anti-trust violations.

Judge Vaught found that the defendants, who control some 40 theatres in eight states and which with affiliates, are one of the most powerful operators in the central southwest, did not use their buying power to freeze out competition. The Griffith is the first of the Government suits against large theatre circuits, second being th Schine case and the third the Crescent Amusement Company.

able clearance" which included admission prices of the theatre, its size, appointments, transit facilities, type of entertainment, policy (bank nights, duals, giveaways, cut-rate tickets, etc.) the rentals and license fees paid by the theatres involved and the revenues derived by the distributors from such theatres.

In arbitration the Big 5 would want arbitrators on licensing question and to determine the maximum clearance involved among theatres, or to revoke clearances among non-competitors. The arbitrators' ruling could be subject to "modification" by reopening the case at later date on the grounds that conditions had changed. (The distributors would pay the cost of such arbitration. The MPTOA wants arbitration with both distributor and exhibitor sharing the cost.)

The distributor defendants also sought permission to roadshow pictures, assumably either by fixing prices or admissions with the management or taking over a house on a lease basis. (The Government has made it clear that it will oppose any exceptions for road showing.)

The Big 5 further would agree to an injunction preventing expansion, excepting where it was to protect its interests or to enter a "competitive field" in which case approval should be sought of the statutory court or of a federal court in the district where the theatres are located. (The CIEA wants the independent exhibitors in the localities affected to be heard in court against such expansions if they wish.)

The Government Seeks

In its decree, the Government seeks:

1) To throw out the provision of the consent decree and with it arbitration as well as clearance for affiliated theatres.

2) To outlaw admission fixing by the defendants, or agreements to maintain clearances, grant unreasonable clearances or grant clearances to non-competitive theatres.

3) To outlaw franchise or formula deals, or conditioning the sale of one picture upon an exhibitor's buying another or several other pictures. It gives the exhibitor the privilege to buy more than one picture at a time provided the deal is negotiated picture by picture and allows him up to 25 per cent cancellation on pictures bought without trade showing, provided he cancels within 10 days of the time he can see the picture.

4) To prevent licensing of any film for more than six months in advance of its release and to compel an exhibitor to play any picture he has bought within 30 days of its availability. (The Government explains that this is to prevent any exhibitor from freezing out competition through a corner on the film market.)

5) Making it mandatory to offer some run to any exhibitor who wants it who offers "reasonable terms" and in cases where an exclusive run is demanded that it be sold to the "highest responsible bidder" with an adequate theatre.

"Identify"?

National Allied may file information with the New York statutory court designed to "identify" parties behind ATA if the court allows ATA's intervention petition in the New York equity suit, it was revealed in Washington this week. It would be pointed out that many of the parties behind the ATA intervention proposal are actually parties to contracts condemned by the court and that such filing might have an important effect upon future suits for triple damages.

6) To enjoining conspiracy among defendants or anyone else to defeat purposes of the decree.

7) To dissolve pools and to require defendant exhibitors owning less than 95 per cent of their theatres and more than five per cent, either to increase their holdings or decrease them to the required amount within the next two years. (The court may authorize one partner to purchase the other's interests if it "will promote competition in the exhibition of motion pictures.")

8) To prevent defendants from expanding their theatre holdings in any manner. (This is a change from an original Government proposal.)

9) To prevent defendant exhibitors from booking, buying or operating any of its theatres through an agent who is also acting in a similar capacity for any other exhibitor.

10) To prevent a distributor defendant from playing his pictures in the house of another distributor defendant within the next ten years. (This change, which would begin one year after the decree is in effect, was not in the original Government proposal.)

In the memorandum supporting its proposed decree, the Government finds that auction selling "would not be likely to have constructive results when applied to a market dominated by distributor-owned theatres, unless supplemented by other relief to make these major defendants competitive with each other. . ."

"It seems plain," the Government continues, "that any distributor, acting solely as a distributor, will normally use a competitive method of distribution as a means of securing maximum profit from his product, if left to his own devices. We think it is apparent from the court's opinion that the competition-restricting devices which were adopted by the defendant distributors were directly related to the substantial interest of the major defendants in the production of theatre operating profits as distinguished from film rentals. This interest they still have and having it . . . they may still license film to one another based upon rental terms which are calculated to share those profits. . . .

"In short, while the auction method of selling proposed by the Court would make non parties to the decree more vigorous competitors with each others . . . it would not place them on terms of equal competitive opportunity with the defendants. Nor would it compel the defendants to compete with each other in the selling of films. . . ."

The government suggests a ban on cross licensing as an alternative. (In Washington a Department of Justice spokesman said the Government was not interested in auction selling unless it was accompanied by a ban on cross licensing.)

Clearance 'Illegal'

In attacking clearance the Government contends that they were part of an "illegal system" and their retention would defeat some of the proposed decree provisions.

On arbitration the government says:

"In our view, no arbitration system may serve as the mean of enforcing a final decree in this case. Arbitration might be well adapted to the administration of an established system of trade practice control, but it does not appear to us to be an admissible solution to the problems posed by this suit since the illegal system outlined in the court's opinion may be terminated only by a drastic elimination of established trade practices."

The Government did not comment officially upon the Big 5 proposals. However reports were current in Washington that it looked upon them as giving the defendants the right to do everything which the Government seeks to stop.

The court, it was pointed out, is not bound to accept either parties' proposals but may throw both out and write its own decree or may write a decree incorporating points made by both sides. Arguments on the proposals are expected to start in the court at New York on Oct. 22, with the intervention petitions of the American Theatres Association and the 30 exhibitors of the Confederacy of Southern Associations to be heard Oct. 21.

Exhibitor Opinion Varies

Exhibitor unit opinions on both the government and the distributors proposals for a decree in the anti-trust suit Wednesday appeared criss-crossed instead of a straight-line pattern, with certain features of both sides finding divergent views.

The American Theatres Association, which is seeking to intervene in the suit, declined to comment upon either side's proposals at the present time.

In Washington Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers praised the government proposal in part but found that it still "falls short" of what he believes the proper solution.

Myers was in accord with the attempt to procure divorce, favored the "some run" guarantees and the ban on cross licensing which he described as a "considerable improvement." He aded that the limiting of auction selling to exclusive runs would "help break down the lazy practice of many exhibitors who seem to want to forget showmanship and old fashioned exploitation methods."

Of the difference between the distributor and the government proposals, he said:

"The distributors and the government are as

Settle Jurisdictions Nelson Warns Green

A warning to American Federation of Labor President William Green that he must invoke powers to settle the film studio jurisdictional strike or he would find such strikes spreading to other industries, was uttered by Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers as he flew to Chicago to attend the AFL convention.

Nelson, who says his organization has had cordial relations but could not help the shut down from what he termed a "purely jurisdictional" strike, left Hollywood as 500 Conference of Studio Union striking pickets held up production at Columbia for almost an hour Wednesday by massing automobiles in the middle of the street before the studio and by sitting on Columbia property until ejected by police. The police also had to remove the parked cars.

The latest strike action sent Columbia to court in search of an injunction similar to that which was earlier granted Republic limiting pickets to 25 at a studio entrance.

In Chicago it appeared that the Screen Actors Guild delegation which flew there to appear before the American Federation of Labor, might get a chance to be heard despite technicalities which otherwise require 30 days notice of intention to appear before that body. IATSE President Richard Walsh, whose jurisdictional quarrel with the CSU's United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners over set erection is the cause of the CSU picketing at the studios, was present and ready to appear on the jurisdictional subject. Also in Chicago for the same reason was CSU President Herbert K. Sorrell. All unions involved belong to the AFL.

There is at present before the convention a resolution by Actors Equity President Paul Dulzell citing the jurisdictional adjusting machinery in the building trades and urging the same within the motion picture industry.

Screen Extras Ratify 33% Pay Raise Deal

The Screen Extras Guild this week ratified by a vote of 2,605 to 151, the recently negotiated contract which gives approximate 33 per cent wages to its members retroactive to Jan. 1, 1946. The present contract, which will not expire till Dec. 31, 1947, provides for reopening of wage talks if living costs increase more than five per cent between July 1, 1946 and Jan. 1, 1947. The negotiations also provide for 10 per cent additional for night work where previously there was no differential and double time for Sunday and holiday work which previously paid time and half. Other extras are for special feats such as riding or driving horses, or getting wet.

Appoint Moran Helper

IATSE President Richard F. Walsh this week appointed St. Louis Union Business Agent Elmer Moran to assist International Representative Frank H. Strickling in the management of the local union. The national organization took direct control of the union when attempts by a discredited faction were made to seize its control.

MPTOA Poll Finals

Final results of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America poll on questions connected with trade practices and the statutory court opinion this week showed an estimated 93½ per cent of the exhibitors were against auction selling while 61 per cent of those questioned favored theatre divorcement.

The results which covered 961 theatres in 42 states and the District of Columbia, follow:

Auction selling—276 against, 20 in favor.

Arbitration on disputes as to "bids, clearances, runs," etc.—217 against, 66 in favor, 14 not voting.

Use of non-industry arbitrator—250 against, 40 in favor, eight not voting.

Theatre divorcement—108 against, 185 in favor, nine not voting.

Areas in which the exhibitors were polled were: Rhode Island, Virginia, Florida, Wisconsin, Texas, Iowa, Missouri, Montana, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Illinois, Oklahoma, California, North Carolina, New Jersey, Georgia, Vermont, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, New York, Arkansas, Kansas, New Mexico, Delaware, Connecticut, Mississippi, Minnesota, North Dakota, West Virginia, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Nebraska, Utah, Massachusetts, Kentucky, Michigan, Alabama, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland and the District if Columbia.

far apart . . . as the North Pole and the Equator."

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, whose board was meeting in Washington when the proposals were made public, greeted the Government proposals with mixed feelings and approved two proposals made by the distributors.

The MPTOA reiterated its belief that divorce is not a cure but expressed satisfaction with the "some run" clause as well as the cancellation clauses, both of which it had advocated.

General Counsel Herman Levy took some exception to the exclusive run clauses in the competitive bidding phase, in the belief these might be interpreted as making runs exclusive, especially in the subsequent run fields where an exhibitor might be faced with exclusive second, third runs and the like.

On the question of arbitration, MPTOA favors arbitrators with industry background.

For Arbitration

An MPTOA spokesman asked for his views on the distributor proposals replied that MPTOA was glad to hear of them, and that the MPTOA concurred with the distributor proposal to retain arbitration. The association further approved, he said, of the distributor proposal on road showing, provided the "road showing of a picture is a national policy."

No objection to road showing as a policy was voiced either by Jesse Stern, president of the Conference of Independent Exhibitors Associations in New York Wednesday. Stern, considering the distributors proposal as read to him, said:

"We exhibitors, have no objection to road showing pictures, provided the road shows are not used to create new runs and otherwise circumvent the purposes of the decree."

Stern found no particular objection to using theatre admissions as a factor in considering bids, nor so called preferred playing time, since, he said, in percentage deals this would affect a distributor's income. He pointed out that on a flat rental deal, all these questions would be obviated, and discussing admission said:

"Of course, the past admission history of a house should not be a factor. I might be charging 50 cents admission on a subsequent because it was a subsequent run. If I want to raise my prices to get a first run, that should be the only consideration. Not the past."

Considering the government proposal Stern said CIEA approved divestiture, the "some run" provisions, the clauses on cancellation and intended to restrain over buying.

Sees Auction Selling As End of Buying Combines

Establishment of auction selling would cause intensified competition and the disappearance of buying combines, which would become unnecessary, Bernard P. Day, president of Joseph P. Day, auctioneers who have submitted a plan to auction film to the statutory court, said in New York Wednesday. Day further claimed auctioning would level the difference in instances where he said "chains have been able to buy films at lower rental than competing exhibitors."

Under auctioning, Day said:

"The single theatre exhibitor would no longer have to fear the power of a buying combine of which his nearest competitor is a member. The exhibitor will be competent single-handedly to make any deals he wants."

Kaymann to MPTOA Board

Clarence Kaymann was elected to the directorate of the MPTOA to represent eastern Missouri and southern Illinois, replacing Fred Wehrenberg. MPTOA met Wednesday in Washington with Special assistant to the Assistant Attorney General Fred L. Wright, where, among other things, it proposed retention of arbitration with both exhibitor and distributor paying the arbitrator cost. General Counsel Herman Levy said he had no objection to the American Arbitration Association if it would hire men with an industry background, but he doubted that it would do that.

Pay Hikes for Operators

Won't 'Tolerate' Local Checkers

Walter Reade, Jr., Tuesday issued orders to his managers not to "tolerate" the presence of local checkers in any of the 42 theatres of the Walter Reade circuit.

The order, a Reade spokesman said, was issued at a managers' meeting in New York after a spurt in the use of local checkers had been noted, especially in the New Jersey localities. Up until recently, the spokesman said, the circuit had not been generally subjected to local checkers.

The spokesman added that Confidential Reports had been notified of the Reade stand and that the circuit was of the opinion that the local checker system would be dropped.

Confidential, when queried, said that it had been using local checkers on the Reade circuit during the past seven months and had not agreed to abandon the practice. Apparently the circuit has not formulated a policy of what it considers a local checker, leaving each instance to its city managers. However it does consider a check from a town immediately adjoining the locality to be checked, as a local.

Exhibitors Want Grade 'A.' Question is Will They Pay?

With the acknowledgment from several major distributor sources as well as many exhibitor spokesmen that audiences today are shopping for their motion pictures as they never did before, comes the accompanying fact that there is a very pronounced trend in audience selectivity and that at present it seems to be moving toward the technically perfect film.

Veteran exhibitors throughout the country, when interviewed, acknowledged that it was hard to decide what the public wanted, but whatever it was, it had to be dressed up properly and delivered in an almost perfect passage.

Audiences Want 'A's

The trend, they say, which producers are repeating as they try to get away from B pictures and make quality product, has very good basis in what the audience actually seems to want. However, exhibitors are a bit skeptical whether the public will want to pay the added cost that a full season of higher priced product will require from box-office sources to make house operations a success.

They contend that while it has been possible in the past to gross heavily on grade A product and then to coast along several nights a week on Grade B, that it is an open question in their minds whether they can peddle Grade A seven nights a week to their audiences.

One of the contentions is that the average small community or neighborhood cannot afford to extend its runs any more than it is doing now to get the proper returns on a quality picture while heretofore it could get by on two assumably top pictures a week for preferred playing time and then hold an audience on minor pictures.

Business Profitable

A good deal of business done on B product and on double features, they point out was highly profitable and the frequent changes kept audiences in the habit of coming to the theatre so many times a week if nothing else.

This latter view is argued by a good portion of the exhibitors who point out that the percentage of the public who had been coming to their theatres out of habit has been steadily decreasing. Managers who make it a habit of standing in the lobby to greet patrons report that the number of familiar faces who were regulars on certain nights has dwindled and that it takes entertainment to get hem there.

Entertainment, they acknowledge, seem to be tied up in big pictures, which through advance exploitation and key bookings seem to have prestige ready made. This prestige, exhibitors say, does attract audiences, often putting over a picture which might not have otherwise clicked and by-passing a superior picture which might not be in the big picture class but has better entertainment value.

See Added Costs

The majority of the exhibitors interviewed, apart from problems which may arise under the anticipated court decree, fear that they are going to have problems in showmanship in connection with added costs which are going to be difficult to offset. They recall that the motion picture came up as a cheap form of entertainment as far as prices are concerned and they believe that further raises at the box-office are presently impossible.

They also believe that increased cost product and big picture programs, if carried out as announced, mean the end of double features. Strange as it seems, there doesn't seem to be much regret about this, even by some of those who championed duals strongly.

Paramount, MGM Films Win Cannes Awards

Paramount won two prizes in the International Film Festival and a picture distributed in the United States by MGM won another, according to reports from Cannes, France, where the festival was held.

To Paramount's "The Lost Week End" went the selection as the best representative American film, with Actor Ray Milland winning the best acting award. "The Battle of the Rails" a French film, dealing with wartime sabotage, distributed here by MGM, won the Grand International prize.

Loew's 16-mm. Plan Starts

Loew's International starts its 16-mm. plan in Great Britain on Oct. 14 and in Ireland on Nov. 4 with a list of 12 features.

They are: "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," "Mme. Curie," "Two Girls and a Sailor," "Pride and Prejudice," "Maytime," "Waterloo Bridge," "Treasure Island," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Tarzan's Secret Treasure," "Captains Courageous," "Lost in a Harem," "A Night at the Opera."

Columbia to Oppose Six Months Sales Limitation

The Department of Justice's clause in its proposed decree to require that no film be sold more than six months ahead of its release, will bring opposition from Columbia, it was learned in New York this week.

The Columbia sales policy has been to sell exhibitors a year's product in advance and the Government's proposal would stymie a sales program which that company has considered essential to its successful operation.

That the Columbia attorney Lou Frohlich will attempt to block such a move on the part of the Government on the grounds that it is contrary to the United States Copyright Act and would limit the license privileges under such act.

It is no secret that both exhibitors and certain distributors have been extremely worried over a policy which would prevent buying a year's product at one time. Both parties who favor the yearly booking plan point out that it has an advantage of economy in time and enables both distributor and exhibitor to gauge their needs ahead of time and provide for them in a single operation.

Free Art Films for Cincinnati Public

Free presentations of documentary and art films, as well as some releases of commercial success, to the general public, in the 400-seat auditorium of Cincinnati's Art Museum, had been announced in that city this week.

The free shows, part of Museum Director Philip R. Adams' program to offer the public outstanding examples of works in all art forms, to date have not created much of a stir in exhibitor circles, probably because the limited size of the auditorium does not create much of a competition problem. The pictures will be shown at reserved matinees for the subscribers to the museum's Fine Arts Series and at nights, free, to the public.

The Baker's Wife is scheduled for Oct. 15 on a program which includes "The River," "The Plow that Broke the Plains," "The City," "The Dance in Film," "Carnival in Flanders," "L'Amitie Noire," "Easter Island" "Song of Ceylon," "Maltese Falcon," "The 39 Steps," "The Adulation of the Lamb," "Memlings of St. John's Hsopital," "Stone Wonder of Naumberg," "The Thin Man," "Potemkin," and "Destry Rides Again."

Owners Protest Organizing Of Managers in England

Attempts to unionize house managers in Great Britain this week seemed about to be abandoned as protests arose from owners to the effect that managers were not employees subject to ordinary employe working hours, but executives in the theatre.

The organization seeking to establish a managers' union instead will work to procure higher wages and better working conditions, reports from London said.

RKO's PIC-TOUR OF THE MONTH

BOUDOIR INVADER. As daredevil Sinbad the Sailor, in RKO's Technicolor production of the same name, DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. boldly meets every challenge, including MAUREEN O'HARA's locked bedroom door. Sharing star honors with them is WALTER SLEZAK.

WOMAN WITH A SECRET so monstrous it wrecks three men's lives. LARAINE DAY, lovely storm-center of RKO's tensely dramatic The Locket, is seen here cheek-to-cheek with ROBERT MITCHUM. The other two men in her life: BRIAN AHERNE, GENE RAYMOND.

TEN BRUNETTE BEAUTIES. Many authentic Hollywood showplaces give film colony glamor to RKO's nerve-tingling Nocturne. Starred are GEORGE RAFT, shown with photos of the brunettes, and lovely LYNN BARI. Mysterious death of filmland composer motivates exciting story.

RUNAWAYS GET RUNAROUND in gay Mexico City, where detours in path of eloping SHIRLEY TEMPLE and GUY MADISON provide whole-hearted merriment for RKO's Honeymoon, based on a Vicki Baum comedy. Co-star FRANCHOT TONE helps speed them to the altar.

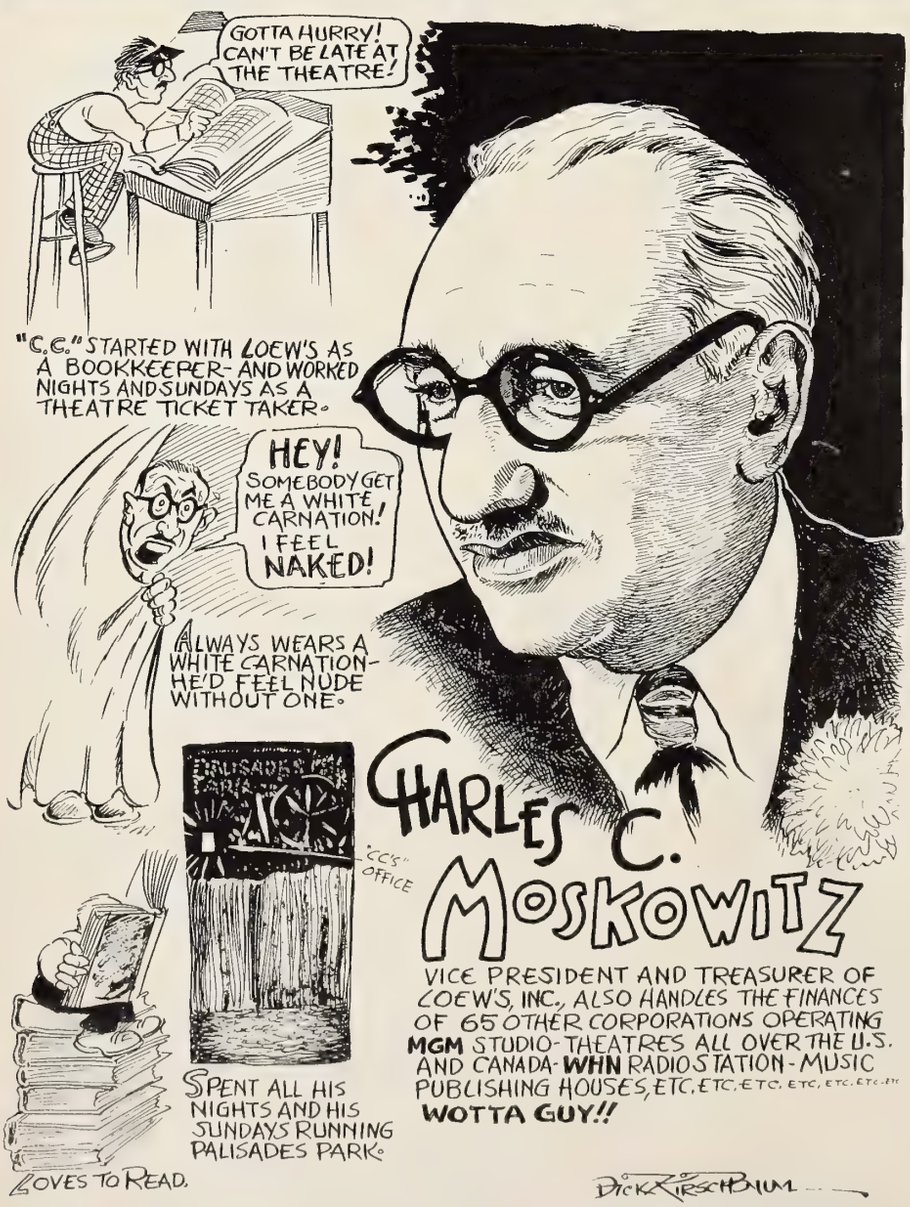
Elizabeth Carver, who used to be with David O. Selznick, this week moved over to Milton Sperling's United States Pictures and will head the New York office.



If you want to hear vim, vigor and enthusiasm about how the film business picked up, just open an ear to Robert V. Perkins, Paramount manager for Philippines. Despite the demoralized condition of the country and Jap destruction, Perkins finds that almost 300 houses are in operation, and that rebuilding is going under way. Right now the ace spot is that of the Rufino Brothers, a 1600 seater in Manila, the Avenue. Equipped with air conditioning and costing almost a quarter of a million dollars American, it sets a standard, Perkins said.

J. J. Oulahan, who used to manage the branch for Paramount in Cincinnati and who dates back to the Pioneer Film company days, has joined the J. Arthur Rank organization as a special field salesman with supervision of the Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati areas.

Warner Bros. Theatres President Harry Kalmine is set for a series of zone meetings in Chicago and Milwaukee.

Charles Skouras Bids To Buy St. Louis Bonds

Directors of the Ambassador Building Company, which owns the Ambassador, the Grand Central and their buildings and the Missouri Theatre Building Corporation, owner of the Missouri Theatre and office building, were considering this week an offer made by Fox West Coast President Charles P. Skouras to buy all outstanding bonds on the buildings at 100 cents on a dollar. The bonds were guaranteed at time of issue by Skouras, his brother, 20th Century-Fox President Spyros, another brother, Skouras Theatres President George, and Clarence M. Turler, secretary-treasurer of the St. Louis Amusement Company. The outstanding bonds reportedly total $4,847,200. Fanchon and Marco, who operate the theatres, are seeking a renewal of the management contract on a long term basis.

Favor Iowa Tax

That communities in Iowa may seek to have the legislature pass an enabling act which would permit them to tax amusements, proceeds of which to go to cities, counties and school districts, seemed likely this week in the wake of several such proposed tax plans. One group advocates a tax of two cents on each ticket sold, with the provision that 20 per cent of the proceeds go to the county, 40 per cent to the schools and 40 per cent to the city.

Form New Corporation

Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state's office by the Iowa Falls theatre corp. of Iowa Falls with authorized capital stock of $50,000. Officers listed with the corporation were R. G. Faulds as president; Slater O'Hara as vice-president; E. M. Garbett, secretary; and A. E. Thiele as treasurer.

Beef 'Stead of Ham?

The lure for beef steak, chops and he like surpassed the lure of the movies in the Boston suburb of Brookline this week.

Just as the feature was going on at the Circle, a lady loaded with packages, felt her way down the aisle, moved over several patrons and said in a stage whisper to her female companion.:

"Oh, Jane, I'm sorry to be late but the new Spartan Market opened down the street and they have all kinds of meat. . . . "

She didn't have to go any further. The theatre almost emptied itself of its matinee housewife, audience, some of whom returned later with packages.

What the house management is trying to figure out is: Was the lady with the stage whisper, a ballyhoo artiste?

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Naughty, Naughty

Advertising pictures as "Adult Entertainment" which are not so classified by the censors this week brought a warning from Ontario's film advertising censor T. L. Elliott that the practice must cease at once.

Elliott's warning followed reports that some exhibitors were using the line "Adult Entertainment' as a trade lure to build up the box-office. The system of classification was adopted by the censors last June after the welfare organizations complained that some picture were not suited for juvenile attendance. Its possibilities as a business booster for trade were not considered at the time.

UA Will Release 7 During Last Quarter

United Artists General Sales Manager J. J. Unger Wednesday announced the release of seven additional features during the last quarter of 1946. The features, in addition to "Bachelor's Daughters" and "Angel on My Shoulder," already released, are:

Oct. 11—"Little Iodine; Oct. 25—"Strange Woman."

Nov. 15—"The Devil's Playground" (Hopalong Cassidy); Nov. 22—"The Chase."

Dec. 6—Preston Sturges' "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock"; Dec. 13—"Susie Steps Out"; Dec. 27—"Abie's Irish Rose."

Pledge Production Booking To Allied in West Va.

Directors of the West Virginia Theatre Managers Association this week were on record as pledging Allied 200 bookings in that territory should the exhibitor association go ahead with contemplated plans to foster its own motion picture production.

The decision was made last week at the directors meeting held in Cincinnati. Allied ic sonsidering a plan of production by guaranteeing a producer playing time in its theatres.

tures. The extended run policy in first runs is here to stay, circuit heads claim.

First run neighborhood houses, which play 35 days after downtown run still maintain their policy of singles over the week-end and duals the remainder of the week using the double feature bookings to get rid of the "weak sisters." If these houses cut to single features, it will be because they lack product, Cleveland sources say.

The neighborhoods have taken to reissues, claiming that "A" type reissues are better than new "B" pictures. But one exhibitor was not too happy about the situation.

"Right now," he said, "these reissues are available. One reason they are available is because many of the major companies are holding sales drives. When the drives are over, our experience has taught us that the reissues will disappear from the availability list. That's when the product shortage will pinch and that's when we will have to revamp our policies."

Few Changes

In Chicago 20th Century-Fox manager Tom Gillian said that where single features run too long and where the demand for the film is strong there is a tendency to return to single features. Product seems plentiful but again the demand for reissues is indicative of what may be in the wind.

A booker for a leading circuit says that with the elimination of some 30 Universal pictures and similar types by other companies, his booking problems will be tougher this year than they have been previously. In the past runs were extended only when public demand justified it.

Another circuit booker acknowledged that his houses had been forced to cut down on the number of changes weekly from three to two due to product problems. This circuit has been dubious about using reissues because of allegedly high costs. The policy remains unchanged however with dual houses continuing to dual and single houses staying on a single policy.

The majority of Chicago exhibitor opinion seems to believe that the city wants twin bills.

In Los Angeles and in San Francisco there has been no noticeable decrease in dualing though the holdover problem there is serious. At MGM, Los Angeles, it was believed that runs are showing a tendency toward being lengthened, while at PRC there was the opinion that in smaller theatres there is a slight tendency to decrease the number of changes a week, especially to cut from three changes to two. On the whole the situation in both these cities remains very much like it was during the year.

Charlotte sees no discontinuing of double features, pointing out that the territory has been predominately single. Key centers there do not seem to be going in for extended runs as a matter of policy, and product seems plentiful.

In Columbus, Ohio, there is no definite trend toward single features in neighborhood houses, but the action of the Bexley Theatre in going single feature after a long policy of dualling, may be indicative of a change. Local first run situation shows seem inclined to single feature.

Des Moines sees no change in double features or any extension of runs. There is a complaint that the cutting down of "B" pictures is bad, but some exhibitors point out that other companies are expanding series pictures and what with independent product this can be worked out.

Gulf States Dual

The Gulf States area, hitherto a citadel of single features, has seen more dualling go into effect recently than at any time in its history with even some circuit houses which had been opposed to the policy, entering this field. Exhibitors with smaller houses or in subsequent neighborhood runs, who have always had a long wait for product, are worried that they may find themselves caught short, but there has been no noted changes in operation policy.

A similar situation seems to exist in the Atlanta and the Dallas territories, excepting that there is less dualling done there.

In Canada, the Vancouver area notices a tendency to decrease double features due to shortage and another trend toward extending runs. Coincidentally revivals and reissues are getting strong bookings.

The Toronto area shows no variation in the number of theatres using double bills and no particular changes in playing time. An interesting feature there though was the fact that in Ontario 41 theatres representing 9.9 per cent of the theatres, played single bills and got 21.2 per cent of the province's total receipts, while 166 or 40.1 per cent of the theatres playing a double bill policy, got only 39.5 per cent of the income.

Again in Quebec, 35 theatres playing a single bill policy, representing only 15.4 of the province's total, took in 15.6 of the theatre revenue, while the 100 theatres that played duals, representing 43.8 of the total, took in 59.1 per cent of the receipts.

A. J. O'Keefe | Charles Feldman | F. J. McCarthy | Fred Myers | E. T. Gomersall

Due to "complexities of the present market," William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager of Universal-International, this week announced operational realignment of his executive sales staff. The cabinet, which, Scu'ly said, will make frequent visits to the field and be in close contact with territories where sales policies set for each individual picture would be implemented under home office supervision, is comprised of the following: A. J. O'Keefe, ass'stant general sales manager; Charles Feldman, Western sales manager; F. J. McCarthy, Southern and Canadian sales manager; Fred Myers, Eastern sales manager; E. T. Gomersall assistant to Scully.

THE primary concern of United Artists is the exhibitor—his needs, his desires, his suggestions. When exhibitors everywhere expressed a long-felt need for good features to tie-in with any type of program, Comet Productions was conceived to answer that need. With such names as Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers, Ralph Cohn behind the Comet facade, this producing group has for release now, "Little Iodine", a fine comedy based on the King Features' syndicated cartoon strip read by forty million, and the grand song and dance musical, "Susie Steps Out." United Artists is proud to say that Comet fills the bill, and proud, too, that

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

TIME TO TAKE STOCK—AND ACTION

By Jack Jackson

Unless you can get yourself into the mood to dream a bit you'd better turn from this page right now. A few recent experiences with theatre managers encourages the view that the spreading of a little ink along inspirational lines may go a long way toward bolstering the bending spines of the old timers and stiffening the vertebra of the newcomers.

Regardless of the topsy-turvy condition of the world, this is still the business that offers more concrete examples of the workability of Horatio Alger's fiction formulas, "Work and Win," "Strive and Succeed," etc., than any other existing commercial endeavor. But the fellow reaching for his bootstraps to pull himself to the top has to get his teeth into his job and stick with his convictions of a scintillating future through thick and thin.

The examples of lassitude and laxity are so prevalent that there can be little or no question about the urgent need for some kind of mental medicine to make confidence, courage, vigilance, patience and persistence—qualities indispensable to good management—take root where the weeds of apprehensiveness, fear, negligence, vexation and indecision flourish and seem to be tangling the feet of managers and impeding the progress of plans for efficient theatre operation.

The theatre is no place for those afflicted with the slightest tinge of "too tired," "I Can't," "Manana (tomorrow)," "forget it" or any other physical or mental negative complex. And, since—in most cases—such afflictions are not of the marrow but of the flesh, it is to be hoped that citation of instances to prove the power of the infallible five (confidence, courage, vigilance, patience and persistence) to stem the tides of defeat and level mountains of resistance may strengthen faith and spur effort.

Procrastination Is Dangerous

There is no end of theatre managers today who are cowards; who tell you they want to know all about their establishments but who seem afraid—or too neglectful—to go about the business of digging into the hidden or forgotten nooks and crannies to find out what materials they contain or what conditions exist—and sometimes the conditions are dangerous.

The "putting off" of unpleasant duties and the forestalling of unpleasant news is an age-old trait of mankind. For some reason yet undiscovered we would rather worry about unknown physical handicaps than expose ourselves to the doctor's examination that will reveal the truth. We'd rather put up with aching jawbones than permit the dentist's probe to disclose the cause. We of the theatre seem to possess a penchant for carrying the "fear of consequences" complex a little too far for the good of our business. We ignore or paint over a stain on the ceiling for fear that further examination may bring the unpleasant news that the roof needs repairing. We keep our noses out of little or unused closets because we don't want to face the unpleasant job of inventorying the contents and engaging in the dirty job of making the premises clean and usable. And, in doing so, we very often find ourselves buying merchandise and equipment that we already possess and exposing ourselves to nuisances that can—and very often do—damage our business materially.

If ever there was a time when we have to be honest with ourselves and honest about our business and the conditions of our establishments, this is it. For five long years we have been confronted with shortages of materials and labor and during those years we have let entirely too many things "slide" until we really don't know what we may find to have been shunted off into storerooms or buried under piles of seldom used and seldom seen articles that were put aside in the days gone by in full anticipation of their being of use at a future date. Now the job of sorting and assembling has grown so big that we are actually afraid to face it. But it has to be done in the interest of safety to your customers and surety to the success of your theatre.

By the same process of reasoning we have put up with the mishandling of jobs by employes for such a long period—in graven fear that the employe would quit and in the firm conviction that any help was better than none—that we are reluctant about taking on the unpleasant duty of issuing the necessary orders and engaging in the time-consuming and patience-trying work of correcting the errant ways of cashiers, ushers, door attendants, stage hands, operators, janitors and cleaners. Yet we all know that this job must also be done if we are to again make our establishments the models of public service they once were and that our customers value second only to the grade of entertainment we provide.

Let's quit being afraid of the truth. Let's quit being afraid of our employes. Let's go about the business of correcting the laxity and lassitude of the war days and putting our establishments back in the spic and span condition that invites basement to roof inspection and implies a pardonable pride in possessing an A to Z perfection in all departments. Before you start on this important mission you must take into consideration the well known fact that the road back to a well managed operation is far more difficult to negotiate than the willy-nilly lanes that led to the present unsavory conditions. It will require a cranny-to-cranny and nook-to-nook chart of the establishment as well as the expending of a more than ordinary amount of physical energy to execute a clean-up campaign of the kind that will rid the theatre of five years accumulation of dust, dirt and filth. You'll have to take into consideration the expense of hauling load after load of refuse to the dump as well as the cost of the menial labor required to dig

Resumes Kid Shows

Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, Pa., was scheduled to resume its two hour kiddie morning shows on Saturdays this week with a program of 15 cartoons. Under the plan the doors will open at 8 A. M. with the performance starting at nine. Admission for both adults and children, sold in advance, is 30 cents.

The Regent had dropped the shows, which were very successful last winter, during summer vacations. The Senate will continue with a policy of two cartoon shows monthly on Saturday morning, with the regular admission price including the right to stay for the feature which follows.

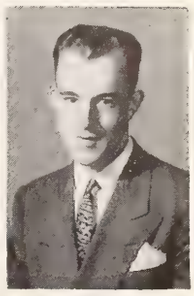
to the bottom of the piled or stacked debris. But you may, as we did, find so much useful merchandise that the overall venture will show a profit.

When it comes to the revamping of the employe situation you'll have to get some stiffening into your spine and this can be best accomplished by reversing the trend of thought about labor you've been harboring for the past several years. Help is not now nearly as difficult to obtain as it has been these past few years. As a consequence you are in position to do a little hand-picking again and cull out the undesirables without materially effecting the operation of your theatre. It's not going to be easy to stand up and tell employes who have been doing as they darn please for years that the picnic is over and a new order is to take place.



When I started this discourse I promised to give out with some inspirational dreaming, but things happened kinda fast and I found myself facing some long-neglected conditions that bristled like an angry porcupine with distressing facts that need immediate correction. A fellow can't dream very well with an angry porcupine as a bed fellow but now that I have plucked most of the pin-pointed bristles I'll try to get on with the inspiration patter.

Sam Katz, often referred to as the little Napoleon of the Theatre business, had mottoes printed and sent to all Paramount - Publix managers reading: "Plan Your Work Then Work Your Plan." It's a swell slogan since it demands that you make a thorough examination of your premises in order to lay out any workable scheme of correcting defects. I would, however, like to

Author of Maintenance Manual

Responding to widespread interest in the man who prepared the Maintenance Manual for Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit's school for managers, which is being published in condensed form currently by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW in this department, following is a brief sketch of the author:

James T. Redd

James T. Redd joined Wil-Kin Theatre Supply, Inc., affiliate of Wilby-Kincey Theatres, in November 1945, following his release from the U. S. Navy, in which he served for over three years in a mine sweeping squardon.

Shortly after joining the organization, the Wilby-Kincey high command decided to inaugurate a school on maintenance for all managers of the circuit, and the job of preparing a manual for use in connection with the school was assigned to Redd—who reveals that his knowledge of the theatre, prior to his association with Wil-Kin, consisted of having been a fairly frequent theatregoer and, he imagines, about as well posted on all matters technical pertaining to the theatre as the average moviegoer who pays his money to see a show and lets the management worry about running the establishment.

An engineer by education and prior experience (his business connection before entering the Navy was in the capacity of an Industrial Engineer for Procter & Gamble), Redd proceeded to analyze the job to be done—ascertaining the duration of each class, getting information about the prospective students, listing of the subjects to be covered, gathering the data to be written on each subject by consultation with officials of Wil-Kin and the theatre circuit and research.

Before he closed up the job, Redd had written all of the Manual; corrected it in accordance with instructions and suggestions from R. B. Wilby, head of Wilby-Kincey Theatres; laid out the whole typographical makeup; supervised the drawing and illustrative matter, and supervised the stencil-cutting, printing, assembling and binding of the books—a good-sized accomplishment in itself, but mere details in comparison to the immensely practical and useful work on maintenance which he has achieved in the finished job.

POPCORN MACHINES — Maintenance and Supplies

Cleanliness is of extreme importance. A theatre selling popcorn is handling food for public consumption. The need for cleanliness is not limited to the machine, raw materials and containers, but applies also to the attendant.

Continual spot cleaning is essential. The following is a suggested routine for good popcorn machine maintenance.

Continual Spot Cleaning Essential

1. Make sure machine and attendant are absolutely clean and neat before opening the theatre.

2. During operating hours, occasionally remove accumulated grease, salt and burnt husks from inside the popper bin, using a clean dry rag.

Clean Glass and Metal Parts

3. After two or three poppings wipe any accumulated grease from the outside area of the pan, using paper "wipes."

4. Clean all glass and metal parts as necessary during the day. Commercial cleansing tissue "wipes" are excellent for this.

Scrub Inside of Popper Pan

5. After each day's operation, be sure to scrub the inside of the popper pan thoroughly. Be doubly sure to rinse thoroughly to remove all of the cleaner.

Caution: Do not get any water or cleaning compound on the wires or the heating element.

6. After each day's operation, thoroughly clean all glass surfaces and metal parts, and be sure to wipe them completely dry.

Have Mainenance Man Clean Machine

7. Every two to four weeks, depending on how much use the machine gets, have the maintenance man tear down, clean and lubricate gear boxes and other assemblies containing moving parts. Do not wait until gears are stripped because moving parts have become clogged with grease. If the motor has been giving satisfactory service, does not spark or run hot, leave it alone. If it is dirty, clean it.

Replace Any Defects Immediately

8. Keep all electrical wires in good condition and all electrical connections tight. Replace any defects immediately from the stock of spare parts on hand, and order new spare parts at once.

REPLACEMENT AND REPAIR PARTS

Each theatre (or at least each town, if there is more

It's Time for Action, Says Jackson

add that when you have once decided on what has to be done that you stick to the job and see it through. Don't quit! Figure carefully just what your theatre needs to give it the best face, the best program arrangement, the best projection, the best service and the best possible appearance. When you have determined what you want to do, do it in spite of all hell! The chap who first said "Impossible" had a midget heart and a flunky's soul. Nothing is impossible and you'll find every barrier to your goal melting like ice under a desert sun if you just have the nerve to fight it out to a finish.

The Spartans at Thermopylae; Napoleon at the Alps; Ben Hur madly driving his chariot over his prostrate adversaries in the Roman Coliseum; John Paul Jones and the Bon Homme Richard; Edison defying the scientists who scoffed at the idea of his filaments turning darkness into light; Marconi and the wireless; Bell and the telephone and other instances too numerous to mention furnish irrefutable proof that man's will is supreme and man's determination capable of blasting the mountains of resistance into nothingness.

Each day sees the dreams of its predecessor hatched into facts and the successes of this hour are only feathers in the wind to indicate the wizardry that will be recorded as fact at the next hour's writing. Those who cry "It can't be done" will always have their echo interrupted by the "Extra, Extra" of the newsboy heralding the fact that it has been done. Each of you—day after day—read of accomplished somethings that were once nebulous fancies of your own and that might have been listed as your own contribution to the world's betterment if you had just gone ahead and done it. Don't anchor your fate and the fate of your theatre on "Hope." "Hope" is a fragile, silken line that snaps easily unless it is encased well with the hardy sinews of determined action. Do it! Don't sit around hoping that it will be done. If the service staff has to be instructed and trained in what's right and correct in the handling of their job; don't vacillate and don't be afraid of losing a few pet employes. Figure out your own plan of proper deportment and service and demand that it be carried out. If the operators are giving you a sloppy job of change overs, poor sound, bad lighting, go after them with a well planned argument about the future of their jobs depending on the theatre's success and insist that more care be exercised. If the janitor service is lax set down the details of what work is to be done and at what intervals you expect its accomplishment and get rid of the employes who don't or won't comply with your desires. Check your entire operation carefully and wherever you find evidence of negligence or carelessness put on your fighting togs and start slugging it out with the persons or circumstances at fault. Do it now—or you'll find yourself reading one of those pink slips that tells about another fellow who will be coming in to DO the job you could have done.

I might add that you'll have to be ready to hear some "boos" and "baas" from the lead-seated fellows who secured managerial titles by reason of the man-power shortage. Those chaps are "whistling in the dark" so let 'em laugh. Their laughs won't last and your courage will tighten.

Just be the fellow who "does things." Let others be "the wish they hads."

than one theatre under the same management in the town) should have on hand such parts as may be needed, including heating elements and asbestos-covered wire which has ben chemically treated to prevent soaking up the oil.

Give Make, Model, Serial Number

When ordering spare parts, be sure to give the make, model and serial number of the machine.

Give a full description of the parts needed. If necessary, attach a rough sketch with approximate dimensions.

SUPPLIES

1. Store popcorn in a cool, preferably damp location.
2. Store seasoning in a cool, dry location.
3. Store salt in a dry location.
4. Store boxes and bags in a dry location of sufficient size so that operating stocks can be withdrawn in numerical sequence.
5. Order seasoning by the pound.
6. Order salt by the case. A case contains 24 2-lb. boxes.
7. Order boxes and bags in multiples of 10,000.

SUMMARY

Remember that with popcorn machines, cleanliness is next to Godliness. Continue to stress the importance of cleanliness to all persons handling the machine and raw materials.

Determined by Past Performance

Keep on hand those spare parts which are most frequently needed. Which they are can be determined by past operating performance.

Use Asbestos-Covered Wire

Do not use fixture wire in a popcorn machine. Use asbestos-covered wire that has had the asbestos chemically treated so it will not soak up oil. If fixture wire is used, the operation of the machine will be jeopardized.

Describe Repair Parts Fully

Give fully adequate description of repair parts when ordering them.

Keep Supplies in Proper Location

Stock raw supplies in proper locations, according to the requirements of each.

'Kid' Campaign Rates High in Gallup Survey

The publicity campaign directed and supervised by Lynn Farnol on Samuel Goldwyn's "The Kid from Brooklyn" has been one of the most successful ever checked by Audience Research Institute, and attained a mark for other films to shoot at, according to a report furnished the producer by the Gallup pollsters this week.

Lynn Farnol

As early as July 27, the picture reached a national publicity penetration figure of 52, which is rated extremely high in comparison with other campaigns, and has held that figure to the present. In the New York area the penetration figure was higher, reaching 88 as early as June 15. This means that 88 per cent of all moviegoers in that area, which comprises 18 per cent of the national motion picture market, know about the picture. The only other films attaining comparable ratings in the annals of Audience Research, are "Gone with the Wind" and "Bells of St. Mary's."

The report also revealed that the recent nationwide tours of the Goldwyn Girls paid off handsomely at the box office, increasing the penetration of the Danny Kaye starrer a minimum of 10 points, on the average, in the metropolitan areas they contacted. The tours should result in an increase of well over $250,000 in the box office gross in the cities visited, the ARI report indicated.

'Lady Luck's' Four Aces In RKO Promotional Piece

Leon Bamberger's promotion department at RKO Radio has dreamed up a promotional mailing piece containing four enlarged simulated playing card aces on which the stars of the forthcoming "Lady Luck," Robert Young, Barbara Hale and Frank Morgan's photos are superimposed over the pips in the center of each card. The fourth ace shows photos of all three, with each of the aces containing catchlines.

The aces are printed on both sides with each perforated at the top to permit marquee hanging. More of the same to hang all over the marquee would be a good sales accessory. Maybe, Mr. Bamberger?

Leon Brandt Joins PRC Exploitation Staff

Leon Brandt, for the past two years New York exploitation man for United Artists, has joined PRC as a member of the staff of Lige Brien, exploitation manager, and will be in charge of exploitation in the Chicago area.

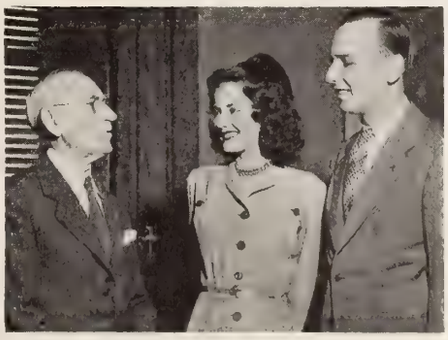
Brandt, who will headquarter at PRC's Chicago exchange, was with Fox Theatres for many years prior to joining United Artists.

Break for Cohn

When the water main broke in front of Century's Midwood Theatre, Brooklyn, Manager Howard Cohn thought of another, if unorthodox, exploitation stunt. The break necessitated excavation in three different places, with piles of dirt alongside each. Cohn had signs made and placed around the excavations. Copy: "Danger—Men at Work. . . . 'Kitty' Is Here Today." Stunt, of course, was on Paramount's "Kitty."

Air Time Scarce for Movie, Radio Tieins

Radio tie-ins and plugs for pictures on free time are becoming increasingly hard to get as a result of increased radio advertising business due in part to the newsprint shortage, an informed theatre source declared in New York this week.



Formerly, the source said, where a tie-in or a plug could be arranged to take up some unused time on a station, a situation has developed generally whereby few if any radio stations at present have open time.

The newsprint shortage, which is threatening to become acute again, may further complicate the theatres' advertising problems, since it was anticipated that newspapers in almost every situation, in order to conserve newsprint, might have to limit both their amusement and general advertising.

The situation, even as it is at present, with papers in several large cities hard pressed for newsprint, has for some time curtailed the amount of space devoted to theatre publicity.

Berlin to Aid Campaign

Irving Berlin will contribute to the exploitation of Paramount's "Blue Skies," Technicolor musical of which he is the composer, by visiting a number of cities scheduled to play prerelease engagements of the film.

Neat Advance Selling on Halloween Midnight Show

You all know that Halloween arrives October 31 with its extra chance to put on a midnight show, but have you done anything about it? In case you haven't we'll let you in on the plans for that night developed by Lester Pollock, manager of Loew's Rochester Theatre in Rochester, N. Y. His scheme is simplicity itself. All he is doing is showing two horror pictures plus a "Halloween Song Festival," which as you know can mean almost anything or almost nothing. The attraction will certainly cause no headaches.

The teeth in the idea, though, is the way Pollock is handling the advance stuff. He is starting the end of this week to show a special trailer, giving him about three weeks advance. Then he is selling for the same period special tickets in the lobby for the midnight performance. He plans window card displays in downtown areas and street poles. On the radio he will conduct a contest in which patrons tell why they would like to be guests for the horror show, winners to receive guest tickets. Five thousand special spook show heralds will be distributed house-to-house. Ad slugs will be inserted in regular ad set-ups. Special lobby display will announce the midnight performance.

There is no doubt, however, that Pollock is leaning heavily on the trailer and it is easy to understand why when you see the copy. Here it is:

"Ooh-h-h! Halloween is Coming . . . and all the spooks and goblins will be droppin' in for a visit! Be around to meet 'em at our spooky Halloween Midnight Show (date). Two weird, thrilling, chilling features on the same program. Plus — Halloween Song Festival. All seats, 60 cents. Doors open 11:30 p.m. Special tickets now on sale at the boxoffice. Buy them in advance. So-o-o, come and get your blood chilled! (We'll scare the yell out of you). Don't forget (date). We'll see you then."

Screaming cats, howling, weird noises, ghostly figures are being used for the trailer background.

Preparing Public for 'Halloween Holocaust'

Joe Samartano's Halloween midnight show at Loew's State, Providence, will be patterned after the title, "Halloween Holocaust of Horror Midnight Spook Show," and will consist of two "horror pictures," spooks, goblins and ghost (what—only one ghost?) with a Halloween Festival of games and contests and Maurice at the organ.

Tickets for the show are already on sale, and means of building up interest in the affair are already under way. Samartano is running a "spook" trailer; current ads are underlined; teaser cards are on display, as well as a "horror" lobby setpiece. But that isn't all. a few days before playdate 300 window cards will be placed in strategic locations; tie-up cards featuring Halloween merchandise will be placed in several store windows; spot announcements will be made following mystery radio shows.

'Try Co-op Ads' is Advice to Loew Men

That cooperative newspaper advertising is an effective method by which the theatre manager and publicity man can obtain large quantities of free space is well known. There are hundreds of ways to accomplish this objective, and Loew's Theatres' home office advertising and publicity department, under the direction of Ernest Emmerling has compiled a comprehensive booklet on how Loew showmen have obtained "that extra bonus of advertising."

Emphasizing the importance of cooperative advertising, the booklet presents 14 pages of offset printed copies of co-ops obtained by Loew managers to illustrate what can be done by a manager with a little bit of imagination.

For instance, Bill Reisinger in Dayton has an arrangement with the Home Store in his city for a weekly series of full page ads, no less, in which his theatre and coming or current attraction receives at least one-eighth of a page and mostly more space. This amounts to several thousands of dollars in absolutely free advertising space in Dayton's newspapers over the course of a year.

Another series of illustrations in the Loew booklet points out that the title of a picture may be the key to tieups with local merchants and uses the Clark Gable-Greer Garson film "Adventure" to show how it can be done. In Reading, Larry Levy obtained a jewelry ad with the line "Begin Your Adventure Together." The jeweler sold engagement and wedding rings in the ad. Russ Bovim in Kansas City went to an oculist and with the

2600 Kids in Fabian's 'Cutest Baby' Contest

The "Search for the Cutest Baby" in the Harrisburg area ended recently with the presentation of 30 prizes from the stage of the State theatre. The contest, under way for more than three months, attracted more than 2600 entrants, all of whom were photographed by Goldtone Studios, co-sponsors with Manager Gerald Wollaston.

Judged in New York, 30 winners were selected, and through arrangements made by Wollaston, were presented with their prizes by Congressman John C. Kunkel, in a special program at the theatre.

During the three months of the contest Goldtone sponsored special co-op ads in local papers and radio stations, calling attention both to the contest and to the current attractions of the three Fabian houses. The theatres, State, Rio and Colonial, displayed lobby exhibits of the contestants and announced the event with trailers.—HAR.

Juke Box Tiein Signs

Cognizant of the fact that Lisette Verea sings Who's Sorry Now in the Marx Brothers film, "A Night in Casablanca," Manager Dan Redden of the Paramount Theatre in Seattle worked out the neat stunt of decorating local dance hall juke boxes with a sign tieing in the song with the picture.

SHOWMAN SAM SAYS: Seems to me every ad I've seen lately has a couple kissing or the star reclining—apparently on nothing.

Founder of Boys' Ranch Sends Film Off to Big Start in Washington

Every once in a while a picture comes along that offers an opportunity to arouse interest in folk outside of the usual regulars. Such a one is "Boys' Ranch"—at least, in the estimation of Brock Whitlock, publicity director of Loew's Capitol, Washington, following his experience with the picture.

For Whitlock and MGM expoiteer Tom Baldridge based their campaign on two main points: 1. The fans, through a contest to select "Washingtons' Own Butch Jenkins; 2. a tieup with the Texas State Society of Washington that resulted in a personal visit by Cal Farley, founder of the real-life Boys' Ranch in Texas. This in turn was also linked up with the D. C. Motion Picture Council, which arranged a showing for representatives of 40 women's organizations of Washington, Virginia and Maryland.

Because of the national interest in the job of rehabilitating boys from possible paths of juvenile delinquency, Farley's participation became a legitimate occasion for both the Texas Society and the women's clubs, organizations that could not ordinarily have been approached. As Whitlock explained it: "In 'Boys Ranch' we found we had a film that could be exploited through all the old avenues and many new ones. We feel that in our contacts because of this attraction we have been able to place the theatre before additional groups of people."

Because of the unusual nature of the tieups it was a promotion that would gladden the heart of any manager. For instance, Washington papers came through with more than 20 art and story breaks in the space of a week, with the Washington News (tabloid) covering the Butch Jenkins contest daily. This contest, virtually the same as those held in other cities in connection with the picture, was decided by applause on opening night, and the winner, a gorgeously-freckled boy named Tim Shea, received many prizes of the sort that kids delight in. All this got full notice in the press and also brought proper recognition to the Franc Jewelry Stores, who photographed the entrants free of charge. So much for the fan side of things.

The most important feature of the promotion, however, was the visit of Cal Farley and his daughter, Gene. They flew up from Amarillo at the invitation of the Texas Society and were met by President Ralph Pitman and a delegation. They entertained Farley at a reception and dinner the night of the opening, induced Congressman Ed Gossett to introduce him from the stage, and put on a boat ride down the Potomac at which Farley addressed 1200 Texans on the work being done at Boys' Ranch. During the visit Farley and his daughter made a tour of the White House. He later spoke in various nearby locations as part of the trip, with resultant publicity both to the picture and to his own project.

There were numerous other features such as heavy ad budgets, numerous radio announcements, throwaways on the contest, and an elaborate lobby display. Hard work it was, Whitlock admits, but when you get results it's a pleasure.

Talk Up 'Boys' Ranch' Via Walkie-Talkie Radio

Six days in advance of the showing of MGM's "Boys' Ranch" at the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Manager Robert Hynes arranged a walkie-talkie radio tieup whereby three marines and three girls equipped with the instruments walked the streets of the business section talking to each other about the picture.

In front of the theatre was this sign: "Butch Jenkins, now appearing in 'Boy's Ranch' at the Criterion invites you to talk over a walkie-talkie. For adventure, travel, education, join the U. S. Marines."

Paramount Extends Field Promotion to 114 Cities

In an exploitation expansion program designed to meet the demands of the new method of merchandising film product, Paramount announced at a meeting of field men last week that the company would extend concentrated promotional activities to 114 cities, with a greatly increased budget. Newest feature of the plans divulged at the meeting was a renaissance of bill posting, due to increased post-war motor travel.

As outlined by Sid Mesibov, assistant exploitation manager, 41 of the communities to be covered will lie in the eastern and southern division, 20 will be in the central division, 28 in the mid-eastern division, and 25 in the western division.

The importance of pre-selling of pictures under the new method of selling will be taken cognizance of by Paramount in all the company's future promotional plans, Mesibov said. Individual situations will get individual treatment, although the different campaigns when put together will add up to a unified whole. "Flexibility" is the word that describes the new set-up.

Besides going in for bill posting in situations where it will do the most good, Paramount will make greater use of radio and direct mail in the field. The first two pictures to come under the new system will be "Two Years Before the Mast" and Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies."

Sets Up Saloon Replica On 'Badman's Territory'

A replica of an oldtime western saloon was set up in the lobby of Warners' California Theatre, Santa Barbara, in advance of the showing of RKO Radio's "Badman's Territory." Behind the bar was a bartender adorned with a handlebar mustache. A sign carried this copy: "Don't Shoot While Gents Are Drinkin' Show Some Courtesy Even While Visitin' 'Badman's Territory'."

Norman Lofthus, manager of the theatre, also arranged foyer and store exhibits of objects of interest to horsemen, with full billing for both picture and playdate.

MGM Trade Ad Used For Lobby Displays

That trade paper ads often contain the basic germ of excellent lobby display ideas long has been the contention of Si Seadler, MGM's advertising manager. And to prove his point (although there has been no direct urging on this matter from Mr. Seadler to any theatre man) we have discovered a top-notch lobby display duplicated at both the State and Orpheum theatres in Boston, taken direct from a recent MGM trade paper insert on "Holiday in Mexico."

Jim Tibbett of the State and Jack Mercer of the Orpheum saw eye to eye on the idea and had the insert ad made into a photo enlargement and had their local display artist do the rest—which meant cutting out the illustration, painting in a large title, selling line, credits etc.

Watch those trade paper ads in SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW. They not only keep theatre men informed, but they often give ideas for exploitation in one way or another—including lobby displays.

SHOWMAN SAM SAYS: There are two pictures I'd like to see—"Skinner's Dress Suit" with Gabby Hayes and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" with Maria Montez.

Co-op Ad Quiz Contest Promotes 'Night and Day'

In the "Night and Day" campaign put on by the Griffith Circuit's Tivoli Theatre, Ardmore, Okla., an unusual tieup was made whereby local merchants participated in a full-page cooperative ad, with each merchant's copy containing a question about the Warner Bros. musical. Prizes of 50 free tickets were offered to the persons who sent in the first 50 correct answers.

Among the questions were "What character in 'Night and Day' has a natural beard?" "Is 'Night and Day' in beautiful Technicolor or in black and white?" "What character does Cary Grant portray in 'Night and Day'? "Name four of the Cole Porter songs in 'Night and Day'," and similar queries.

Each of the merchant's ads also worked the film title into its copy. In the ad of a ladies' shop, the catch phrase was "Be Lovely to Look at Night and Day"; an insurance firm, "Our Policies Will Protect You Night and Day"; a service station, "We're Open to Serve You Night and Day."

line, "Open Your Eyes to New Adventure," obtained a large size co-op which plugged the film's advent at his house. Then a paraphrase on "Gable's Back and Garson's Got Him" appeared in Reading newspapers as "Quality's Back and Merritt's Has It!" All of these co-ops used a good portion of space to tell the newspaper-reading populace that the picture was playing at the local Loew house.

Many other illustrations of how co-ops have been obtained by Loew managers are included in the booklet. Some of them include the following subjects on which the tieups have been based:

Fur storage, costume jewelry, engagement and wedding rings, oculists, recordings, hearing aids, hair-dos, dancing schools, restaurants, furniture stores, food shops, book stores, florists, electrical appliance shops, milk companies, bridal shops, bathing suit and sporting goods stores, dance halls, luggage shops, finance companies, photo studios and photo supply stores, and many other types of commercial establishments.

Advice to readers of the booklet includes the information that tieups can add an "enormous volume of linage to any campaign." And it adds this important warning: "Improperly handled, it can only add up to grief."

Items emphasized in the booklet's preliminary advice to managers and publicity men included:

"No ad must ever suggest or imply the endorsement by any player of any product.

"No ad should appear to suggest that the player is wearing or using a product.

"No player's picture should be used to illustrate an advertisement for a product not in keeping with that person's dignity and position nor should a valuable property be cheapened by association with an inferior, second-rate store.

"There are exceptions to the first two rules, when a player is paid to endorse a product. There is no exception to the third rule. . . ."

The booklet points out that it can be done, however, and that the space obtained for this type of tieup is worth much more than the effort put forth to obtain it.

Beyond the Call of Advertising

For the second time in five weeks, MGM's Mairship has proved its worth beyond the call of advertising.

Last Sunday the advertising dirigible joined the hunt over the swamplands of Secaucus, N. J., for two-year-old Douglas Koenemund, who had been lost for three days. The crew of the blimp cooperated with Police Chief Arthur Temple and worked with him by radio, flying over swamps which could not be penetrated by humans or bloodhounds.

Early in September the Mairship rescued eight passengers aboard the helpless 32-foot cabin cruiser Man-Pat-Jim, six miles off Sandy Hook.

Music, Radio Tieups Top Promotion On Republic Film in Philadelphia

Seeking to make Philadelphia "I've Always Loved You"-concious, Everett Callow, Warner Theatres advertising head there, and Max Miller, new field representative for Republic in that territory, put on a campaign that consisted chiefly of tieups with the leading merchants and all the local radio stations.

Full window displays were promoted in the leading department and women's apparel stores, using fashion and music as the themes of the displays, which were set up a week prior to opening and remained in during the first week of the engagement. Cooperating stores included John Wanamaker's Snellenburg's, Gimbel's, Bonwit Teller and Lousols. Using music displays in their windows were Steinway & Sons, Weymann Company, Heppe, Presser's, and Al Held's Music House.

Special screenings were held for movie and music critics of all the daily papers, disc jockeys, radio commentators and approximately 150 RCA Victor record dealers.

Through a tieup with the Department of Visual Education of the School District of Philadelphia, letters prepared and paid for by the school system were sent to superintendents and directors, principals of senior high, junior high, vocational and elementary schools, and music heads inviting them to a special screening of the picture in the auditorium of WCAU. A meeting of all music teachers was also called, and the musical education values of "I've Always Loved You" were stressed in a talk by Dr. Charles Hoban, special assistant director of the Department of Visual Education. He also made a talk before the screening. As an added appeal to teachers, an ad was placed in the Teachers' Association monthly magazine.

The Dr. Sigmund Spaeth five- and 15-minute transcriptions showing how modern composers have made hit tunes of classics were distributed to schools for use in music appreciation classes. The Director of Visual Education was also given a copy of the Study Guide for his use. Two large displays were used in the Dobbins School and the Spaeth records were placed before a general assembly of 2600 pupils. The records were also featured on stations WDAS, WPEN and WIBG as an educational feature, being broadcast four times during the week prior to the opening and as many times during the first week of the picture.

Professional copies of the title song were distributed to singers throughout the city, and they were requested to mention the picture when presenting the song before the public. Two radio contests were arranged. Radio station WPEN, which features classical music, conducted a one-week letter-writing contest on the subject, "I Like Classical Music Because. . . ." A dozen albums of the Artur Rubinstein recording of the Rachmaninoff Second Piano Concerto were given away as prizes. Th other contest on WFIL, the Philadelphia Inquirer station, was a popular vs. classical music contest conducted by LeRoy Miller on his early morning show. Prizes were guest tickets to see the picture.

All radio stations were tied in with the picture, and special record shows as well as live shows by commentators were promoted.

Callow and Miller also accorded "I've Always Loved You" the usual newspaper advance publicity and advertising, 24-sheet posting and the placement of cards in hotels.

BUCOLIC BROOKLYN. When RKO's "The Kid from Brooklyn" played the RKO Albee—also in Brooklyn—two of the theatre's girl ushers. Gertrude Hanstick and Theresa Rivers, put on a milking contest in front of the theatre. The Sheffield-Farms company sent over a cow and provided an expert milkman, Bert Phillips, as judge. Now don't fool yourselves; the girls, although bred in Brooklyn, both proved they could milk, and the cow took it like a lamb (this is known as a mixed metaphor). At any rate, New York dailies took up the stunt in fine fashion, which was the chief idea.

$250,000 Ad Budget Set on Del Ruth Film

The largest advertising appropriation ever set for a single Monogram picture was voted at the Chicago meeting of the company's franchise holders, it is announced by President Steve Broidy.

A total of $250,000 will be spent on a nationwide campaign for "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," current film being produced and directed by Roy Del Ruth. Newspaper advertising on a national scale will be utilized by the company for the first time.

Reade Urges Managers Hold Children's Shows

Special emphasis on children's shows in their situations was urged by Walter Reade, Jr., at a meeting of city managers of Walter Reade Theatres in New York this week. At the same time Reade also announced the winners of last month's exploitation contest. First prize went to Jimmy Mullens of Freehold, N. J., while Roy Blumenheim, of Long Branch, and Tony Hunting, of Red Bank, tied for second place.

Two new managers, Murray Meinberg and Ray Penbarn, were assigned to the Strand and Paramount theatres, respectively, in Plainfield, N. J.

In attendance at the meeting were: Jimmy Mullens, Freehold, N. J.; Robert Case, Kingston, N. Y.; Roy Blumenheim, Long Branch, N. J.; Tony Hunting, Red Bank, N. J.; Hal Martz, Plainfield, N. J.; Julius Daniels, Perth Amboy; Nick Schermerhorn, Asbury Park, N. J.; Guy Hevia, Morristown, N. J., and Rocco Dilione. From the home office: Pete Gage, Jim Watson, Steve Brener, Jack Harris and David Kearney, manager of the new Park Avenue theatre, soon to be opened.

New England Stores in 'Night and Day' Tieup

A poster showing Jane Wyman at the Warner Bros. studio commissary and featuring "Night and Day," in which Miss Wyman is currently being seen, is on display in more than 1500 leading variety stores throughout Boston and New England.

The posters are being distributed by a local beverage company, Laurel Club, and includes space for a local imprint.

SHOWMAN SAM SAYS: It's still true that it's hard to get deliveries on new projection equipment; but honestly I haven't seen many theatres closed for that reason. Those old machines were well made.

LEG ART. We have to hand it to, not only Manager John Schaftleutzel of the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb., but also the Baker Shoe Store for this eye-catching tieup stunt. The three gals in shorts are painting the sign ballyhooing MGM's "Easy to Wed" and the shoe store on top a false front erected while the store was being remodeled.

CANADIAN SHOWMEN DISCUSS POP CORN PERCENTAGE CONTRACTS; TORONTO WOULD BAN SMOKING

Discussion of the new distributors' contract which reportedly would attempt to collect a share of candy concession, subsidiary and advertising revenues from theatres, took place this week as the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries met. The matter is expected to come up again when the Ontario Motion Picture Theatre Owners meet in Toronto on Oct. 22. To date the distributors have not replied to the exhibitors protests and have made no offer to discuss the matter, but meanwhile the present contracts, without the added concession profit clauses, remain in effect.

A fight has developed between the Ontario Theatres Association and the City of Toronto over the question of permitting patrons to smoke in any part of a theatre, local fire officials having recommended that the privilege be banned entirely because a fire which occurred in a cinema last June. The Ontario MPTA has engaged Joseph Singer, K.C., as legal counsel for the issue. The Ontario association opposes the proposal in the belief that if the Toronto civic administration imposes a prohibitory law, other municipalities will take similar action, to the detriment of the whole theatre business.

STREET CAR STRIKE STRIKES DOWNTOWN BOX OFFICES, HELPS NEIGHBORHOODERS SLIGHTLY

Columbus' street car strike has cost downtown theatres as much as 50 per cent of their ordinary business, a survey here shows. Neighborhood shows indicated there was some increase as a result of the fact that audiences could not get downtown with any ease, but declared the business was only "about normal or a little better."

Theatres are operating under normal schedule since the strike does not involve the power division of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company which operates the transportation system.

Also hit by the strike are theatre employes, who are having difficulty getting to work, with one woman walking about six miles daily to and from her downtown house job. Absenteeism has been slight.

LOEWS BOOKS 'HANGMEN' FILM TO LINK UP NAZI HANGINGS; HOLIDAYS QUIET FILM ROW

Apparently believing its theme—the assination of a Nazi bigwig sadist in Czechoslovakia—will be timely when the war guilt hangings are carried out in Nuremberg, Loew's has booked a reissue of United Artists "Hangmen Also Die" in 32 of its theatres around New York, starting Nov. 7.

Film Row was quiet this week, with Jewish holidays accounting for almost deserted film exchanges Friday afternoon.

Sam Stern, who used to peddle film for United Artists in this area, is now peddling tobacco from behind a counter to the boys of film row—and the gals what smokes too. He recently purchased the cigar stand at West 44th Street opposite Film Center building.

When those Christmas Day bells ring out they'll also be playing a wedding tune for Republic booker Hannah Echstein, who will say "I do" to Herman W. Fishbein. And over at Republic Manager William Murphy proudly announced that the altar trip he had taken had stuck for 21 years. The Murphys celebrated their anniversary last Thursday.

Twentieth Century-Fox sales supervisor Moe Kuntz became a grandfather for the first time this week. Carmen Edwards, secretary, is ill in the hospital and it may be some time before she comes back. Pinch hitting for her is lovely to look at Sophie Shefrin, former secretary to Booker Seymour Florin.

SAFETY SLOGAN CONTEST HELD BY THEATRE HELPS BOOST RECEIPTS

A safety slogan contest held by the Badger Theatre, Merrill, Wis., has been a very successful method of filling the show houses with good box office results. In addition to safety awards, signed by the governor of Wisconsin, Walter Goodland, and two other state officials—the head of the motor vehicle department and the director of the safety division, to the winners of the contest, the following prizes were awarded: First prize, a 17 jeweled watch; second and third prizes, new bikes and fourth prize, a pen and pencil set. To get started, 800 free admissions to boys and girls were given, for the show "Boys' Ranch" at the Badger Theatre. According to John G. Kemptgen of MGM, this was one of the most productive campaigns ever tried in this territory. The exploitation was handled directly by Louis Orlove of MGM.

Overtime is being put in on the work of remodeling and redecorating the new Towne Theatre (United Artists, formerly Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Co.), which has been leased by Spheeris Bros., Milwaukee merchants, for a term of 25 years. In addition to the street car and bus placards drawing attention to this remodeled first-run show house, as a United Artist outlet, billboards all over the area call attention to the Towne. Only the one word "Towne" in two foot letters is shown on each billboard, with a couple of dozen question marks strewn over the balance of the billboards, to make the public Towne conscious, asking each other what it is. This will be followed later by explanatory advertising, with the word Towne standing out.

The man chosen to manage this new first run theatre is the same one who has managed the Miller theatre (old name for the Towne) for years—Jack Heinemann. He is supervising the remodeling and redecorating job, and hopes to have all in readiness by the end of November.

GOLDWYN GIRLS WELCOMED IN ENGLAND. Furthering the cause of international goodwill and understanding—particularly the latter—Sam Goldwyn's glamorous Goldwyn Girls have registered a solid hit in England. They are seen above at the London studio of BBC where they did a television show. They made several personal appearances before leaving for a sojourn of the provinces—from which they will return to the big town for the London premiere of "The Kid from Brooklyn."

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

RKO-Rank Film, One of 25 Now in Work at English Studios, Finds Smooth Sailing; 'Blue Skies' Is Well Received at Premiere; Katina Paxinou Feted

By JOCK MacGREGOR

I have been touring the British studios where a line-up of some twenty-five pictures is in various stages of production. Of the greatest interest to American showmen will be "So Well Remembered" which J. Arthur Rank is financing in conjunction with RKO Radio.

With Phil Gersdorf, who has come from Hollywood to handle the American publicity, I went to Denham and found the RKO unit under producer Adrian Scott and Director Edward Dmytryk well up to schedule.

This is a truly Anglo-American effort with John Mills, Pat Roc and Trevor Howard representing the home team and Martha Scott and Richard Carlson the visitors.

Martha Scott is well satisfied with her role in this James Hilton story as she appears a hard bitten mother and feels that it is giving her a first opportunity to act.

Richard Carlson was so convincing made up with a scar that a number accept it as a war wound. The romantic interest is being provided by Pat Roc who is a British actress with a future. Already known to Americans for her work in "Canyon Passage," she will soon be seen in "Wicked Lady." At present she is concurrently playing in two other films, "The Brothers" and the Technicolor "Jassy."

Elsewhere at Denham, the Boulting twins were both directing sequences for the Howard Spring story, "Fame is the Spur" in which Michael Redgrave appears with Rosamund Johns. This story of the rise of a Labor leader sounds an unconventional subject. In the studio John (or was it Roy?) was surrounded by sets depicting Downing Street, Holloway Prison and a North Country town. On the lot, Roy (or was it John?) was filming a dream sequence with 100 lovelies.

Crazy things always happen in studios. There was a man leading a horse from set to set. He swore that somebody had engaged them for a day, but nobody would own them.

At Shepherd's Bush, I found David MacDonald directing "The Brothers." It is his first film since demobbing from the Army and he has gathered around him a team of ex-service personnel. They are going all out to prove that they have lost nothing through their absence from the studios and Dave is so satisfied that he believes he will complete the picture three weeks ahead of schedule. Will Fyffe, Pat Roc, John Laurie and Maxwell Reed play the leading roles.

On the exhibiting side the highlight was the premiere of "Blue Skies." Setting a precedent for an American picture, the London trade and press spontaneously applauded Fred Astaire during the screening. A luncheon followed with W. E. Hutchinson as an admirable host, and Peter Barnes carrying on skillfully in the absence of Tony Reddin in New York.

Two Cities entered the reception field with a gathering at the Savoy for Katina Paxinou who has come here to appear in "Uncle Silas," a thriller in which she will appear as an evil governess. Madame Paxinou tells me that she is due back in Hollywood to appear with Rosalind Russell and possibly James Mason in "Mourning Becomes Electra" for RKO in January.

It was good to welcome back from the services W. H. Jameson, who was with Odeon and is now with John Myers, and to say howdy to Steve Miller who has arrived to bolster up J. Arthur Rank's American publicity detachment.

A neat little monthly has arrived on my desk from British National—"The Elstree Independent." This is an informative publication for press and showmen and an outside feature is a cartoon and pen picture of a leading exhibitor. This month Basil Fortescue is presented. It is the sort of thing that will be taken home for the missus to see.

THIS ADVERTISING BOARD PAYS FOR ITSELF. Water-colored wall board, a little lettering and some stills make up this attraction sign in the lobby of the Jefferis Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. "I realize this is a very moderate display when compared with large city operations, who have a sufficient budget to make some really attractive advertising," writes Manager A. B. Jefferis, "but in a town of a thousand the advertising budget must be kept to a minimum." We still believe, whether the city be large or small, that a few stills are just as effective as a lot of fancy lettering. Congratulations to Jefferis on his fine showmanship.

This feature of STR sets up a new milestone in projection progress in America. Through the unselfish generosity of these eminent Supervisors of Projection the smallest theatre can now have the benefit of the combined talent, skill, experience and opinion of the men who direct sound and projection for the largest theatre chains.

No such massing of expert opinion on these matters has ever before been available. In the name of its readers, STR extends their thanks and its own to these gentlemen.

Projection Room Safety Is The Manager's Duty

He Should Learn the Safety Rules and Enforce Them, Council Holds; Discipline Projectionists When Needed, Disregard Competition

A 15-year old boy, working as sole projectionist in a Louisiana theatre, was killed last month in an heroic effort to fight a film fire. Before he died he told hospital attendants: "I was thinking of the children in the audience. I thought my kid sister might have been down there." (Further details will be found in STR for September 14th, Page 4).

The Projection Advisory Council this month discussed that shocking tragedy, and what can be done to prevent such occurrences. They overhauled the problems of safety regulations, qualifications of the projectionist, construction of the projection room and its exits, law enforcement, two-men crews, and detailed methods of fire fighting.

First of all, they agreed, the manager is the key man in projection room safety. Local and State codes, and the National Underwriters' regulations, are complex and technical. Nevertheless the manager should learn them.

"It is his duty; he is responsible."

"The manager should know the requirements, and see that they are carried out in his projection room."

"This is the manager's personal responsibility."

Agreement was not completely unanimous, however; there were two dissenting voices. One held that in such technical matters it is the projectionist who should familiarize himself with the regulations, and if the manager will not comply with them (this member believes) the projectionist should appeal to his union. The other suggested that the manager (instead of adding a knowledge of the complexities of fire codes to his infinite number of other headaches) rely on the help of reputable supply concerns, who are well equipped to advise him in such matters.

"The Competition Doesn't"

The Council was totally unanimous in holding that what the competition does about safety makes no difference at all.

"Certainly any manager can compete and still keep his projection room safe. Safety isn't that expensive. Good port shutters, good ventilation, and good film cabinets are the main requirements. They don't add significantly to the cost of running a theatre."

"Competition should never enter into the thought. It is the duty of every theatre to protect its patrons from panic and injury."

"It is imperative to protect life—that is a must."

"We believe in safety for our projectionists and patrons, regardless of the attitude of the competition."

"It is entirely practicable to keep the projection room safe and still compete with anyone. Hazards should not be permitted."

"Certainly it is practicable, and desirable, and should be considered an absolute necessity."

"Of course the real answer lies with the public authorities, who should compel safety in all theatres. It may seem revolutionary for a theatre manager to fight for more rigid enforcement, but if necessary he should. I wish we had more 'State of Connecticut' enforcement. I take off my hat to Earl Morin." (STR for June 22, Page E-4).

Careless Projectionist?

This Council, many of whose eminent experts were at one time just projectionists working in a theatre, many of them still members in good standing of the IA, was absolutely unanimous in favor of severely disciplining any projectionist caught violating safety rules.

Said one IA member:

"I wouldn't discipline him—I'd fire him."

Another member echoed:

"Right. Throw him out."

"Yes. If he has no regard for his per-

MEET YOUR COUNCIL

Col. Frank Cahill

Frank Cahill was just getting around to thinking that business might be more interesting than teaching engineering at Columbia University when First National Pictures asked for a man to start a statistical department. Columbia referred the request to Cahill, who jumped at the chance. Within a year he was Assistant Treasurer. The following year he went to the Coast as assistant to Studio Manager Watterson Rothacker. When Warners took over First National, Col. Cahill was assigned to organize a Sound and Projection Department, and he is still its director. His hobbies are taking his family driving, and photographing and projecting his own 16-mm. sound pictures. When he visits the theatre for his own entertainment, his choice is "a good musical."

POSTWAR PROJECT

William Goldman's new Philadelphia theatre embodies ideas and innovations that architects, designers and engineers developed during the war, and laid on the shelf for use after hostilities ended. Construction was begun 24 hours after the announcement of V-J Day, and required a full year to complete.

Among the striking features of the new house are the easel-type screen, three-color seating, auditorium lighting intended to facilitate traffic movement by means of psychology, a name sign that required passage of a special municipal ordinance, and acoustic control achieved by means of convex auditorium panels covered in doeskin.

The name sign towers to 72 feet above ground, and was illegal in Philadelphia until a special law was passed to permit its erection. Each of the seven letters of the word "Goldman" is in a different color. Each letter is independently hinged so that it may be swung backward into the body of the sign, permitting workmen to stand on an inside platform instead of an outside ladder while carrying out repairs.

The box office is placed flush with the sidewalk line, giving passersby no distance to walk if they decide to buy a ticket and no time to change their minds.

Psychological Lighting

The auditorium lighting scheme was designed by psychologists, who worked toward the dual objectives of a pleasant interior and a light-and-color design that would psychologically stimulate movement of traffic during breaks, to minimize delays at he exits. The walls and ceiling are finished in soft, forest green. Thin gold striping on the ceiling marks its location and gives the patron a sense of its height. In contrast to these gentle color tones, the rear wall is finished in brilliant red, yellow, green, blue, tan, brown and black, on the theory that this contrast with the colors of the rest of the auditorium tends toward a speeding of movement by outward-bound patrons.

The seating—consisting of 1500 Kroehler push-back chairs—is upholstered in three shades of blue. Deep sapphire is used at the front of the auditorium to absorb the spill of light from the screen; a softer blue at the center and light blue tinged with green toward the rear. Through differential light absorption these chairs tend to look more alike in the darkened theatre.

RCA laboratories in Indianapolis and Camden planned the acoustic treatment, which consisted of molding the auditorium wall surfaces into a large number of rectangular, convex panels, covered with doeskin. Sound not absorbed by the doeskin is broken up as to wave form by the shape of these panels and scattered.

Carpeting is not confined to the aisles, but extends under the seats in every part of the orchestra and balcony. Stairs likewise are carpeted.

Stairways are figured in terra cotta, with a color scheme of aquamarine, gold and light blue. Lounge rooms are decorated in sprightly, outdoor colors.

Air conditioning is by Carrier: a remote control system designed to adjust itself automatically to the presence or absence of crowds in different seating sections and to maintain a one-degree variable throughout the orchestra and balcony at all times.

The Goldman is equipped with three Brenkert projectors, and RCA sound system. A feature of the projection room is the use of optical glass for glassing in (soundproofing) the projection ports. The screen is an extra-heavy RCA Snowhite with surface specially treated to reduce glare without sacrifice of picture definition.

BOX-OFFICE: located right at the street line, where passersby can obey that impulse before they have time to change their minds.

The Owner

William Goldman, President of William Goldman Theatres, Inc., opened his theatrical experience in St. Louis in 1910, showing four one-reel pictures at a five-cent admission, and considered a $3.00 daily gross a good box-office average. His theatre was a tent. Goldman still recalls the thrilling day when crowds came in droves and he grossed the amazing total of $15.00. He was subsequently associated in exhibition with Skouras Brothers.

In 1928 Goldman came to Philadelphia as general manager for Stanley in Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. In 1933 he re-entered business in his own name, and with his own company and properties.

The structure housing the new Goldman Theatre also contains the Goldman offices (complete with modern electrical kitchen, dining room and cocktail room) and a preview room with Brenkert-RCA projection and sound equipment.

David Supowitz, of Philadelphia, is the architect of the new Goldman. Muller-Barringer, interior decorators, arranged the interior details; and developed the doeskin wall-covering, which has won the praise of RCA's acoustical engineers. Actual construction was done by Golder Construction Co., of Philadelphia. (#2.)

WHAT A DIFFERENCE HIGH INTENSITY MAKES!

● The quality of Simplified High Intensity Projection is so clearly superior, with so little difference in cost, that, soon, no theatre — large or small — will even consider operating without it.

This is apparent when you weigh the definite effects, for example, of One-Kilowatt High Intensity Projection on your screen . . . on your audience . . . and on your box-office receipts.

A New Principle In Projection

Mechanism By Makers of Norden Bombsight Alters Projection Frequency to Permit Use of A.C. At the Arc

A new projector by a new manufacturer, designed to produce a flickerless screen image with poorly filtered d.c. or even a.c. at the arc, has been completed through the working sample stage and will be on the market in approximately six months.

The projector utilizes a principle not previously employed in the theatre, but similar to one used in projectors built for picking up television images from motion picture film.

In conventional projection, each frame of film is exposed twice; in this new mechanism alternate frames are exposed twice and three times, respectively. The result is that projection frequency is synchronized with a 60-cycle power frequency and single-phase rectifiers or raw a.c. can be used at the arc successfully.

At a demonstration held for an STR representative, a picture was projected with a.c. at the arc, with very satisfactory screen results.

The Men Behind It

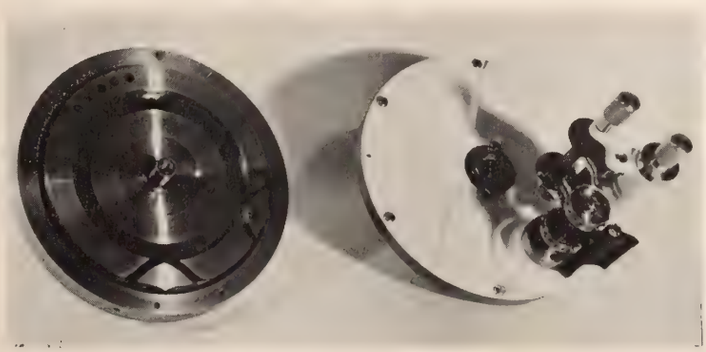
The producers of the new mechanism are Manufacturers Machine and Tool Company, Inc., wartime makers of all the parts used in the Norden bomb sight. The president of the company, Paul H. Berger, was connected with the design and manufacture of projectors as long ago as 1911, has been associated in development work with Vanoscope, Inc., and with Urban Motion Picture Industries; and in the late Twenties he built the first Grandeur projector.

More directly responsible for the mechanism is inventor Ewald Boecking, who holds a total of 54 patents connected with motion picture projection. He was employed as mechanical engineer by International Projector Corporation from 1927 to 1939. In the latter year he accepted the post of chief engineer of Century Projector Corporation, where he designed the Century models C and CC mechanisms, as well as mechanical features of the Century-Westrex soundhead.

Manufacturers Machine and Tool Company have bought and are currently readying an enlarged plant at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., where the M.M.T. mechanism will be produced.

Ewald Boecking And His New Baby, The Forthcoming M.M.T. Projector

How It Works



The advent of sound made it necessary to standardize projection speed, so the pitch of the recorded sound would be the same in all theatres. The standard then established was (and is) 18 inches of film, 24 frames, per second. The projector shutters darken the screen while the film is in motion. To prevent shutter flicker, they also darken the screen midway during the projection of each frame. Thus, the screen is illuminated 48 times per second.

Since power supplies in most parts of the United States are 60 cycle, the projection frequency and power frequency are out of step with each other. If the arc is operated with line a.c. this lack of synchronism between projection and power results in an eye-straining screen disturbance called stroboscopic flicker.

Two methods of avoiding stroboscopic flicker are in use. The usual method is to equip the projection room with devices that convert the line power to d.c. Since d.c. has no frequency, a picture projected with a d.c. has no stroboscopic flicker. The converting device may be a motor-generator or a rectifier. Single-phase rectifiers, however, tend to deliver d.c. with a ripple frequency which may be strong enough to cause some flicker; hence the more complex three-phase rectifier is widely used in theatres today.

One other method of avoiding stroboscopic flicker is utilized by an arc lamp manufacturer who supplies a special frequency converter with his lamp. This converter changes the frequency of the power

the EQUIPMENT SHOWCASE

If patrons are to forget themselves in their absorption in the picture—and that is what they come for—they must also be able to forget the chair they sit in, and the occasional inconvenience of allowing others to pass in or out. The chairs must both be comfortable, and comfortably spaced.

American Seating Company's Bodiform chair is typified by the 1946 model illustrated at upper left. The foundation of the seat is of heavy, formed steel, streamlined to protect the front edge of the upholstery. As the occupant rises the seat folds gently to ¾ position where it is out of the way between the standards, thus leaving a clear space between rows for future patrons, and to facilitate cleaning. Both seat and back are upholstered without tacks or wood parts. Seat unit and back panel can be removed and recovered by an attendant in a few minutes, eliminating the inconvenience of having damaged seats out of service while parts are sent to an upholsterer's for repair.

Ideal Seating Company manufactures the chair shown at upper right, which is being supplied by Joe Hornstein, Inc., for

Push-Back chair is pictured at bottom right. The newest and most modern type of welding is used to bind the metal components firmly together. With this chair, a gentle movement of the body causes the seat to slide back, allowing adequate passing space. Relaxing the body sends the seat forward again to its original position, where it remains permanently until the patron again retracts it. (#4.)

Walter Reade's new super de luxe subscription theatre on Park Avenue, New York. One of these chairs will be reserved for each patron who buys an annual ticket—there will be no other patrons.

In the center of the page is Grigg's Equipment Company's No. 12ABW chair. The seat is built on a fully enclosed frame of heavy kiln dried hardwood, with luxuriously upholstered spring unit covered in plastic material.

At bottom, left, is an all-steel Heywood-Wakefield chair, so designed that coil spring comfort is distributed over the full area of the seat. The one-piece, all steel back is securely riveted to the wing channel, and positively bolted to the standards, assuring a tamper-proof, permanently rigid back.

Comfort Comes First In Theatre Seating

Experts Frown on Close Spacing, Narrow Chairs, Careless Maintenance

Audience comfort is more important than anything else in planning seating. The Council agreed, practically unanimously, that it is better to space seats more comfortably and have fewer to sell, than to crowd them in for the sake of increasing capacity. It is better to use seats of comfortable width, than narrower ones which would enable the theatre to accommodate more patrons. Chairs, furthermore, must not only be comfortable, but be kept so; the Council unanimously favors very frequent inspection and immediate repair of any fault found.

That the trend of the industry is in favor of installing fewer seats per theatre, for the sake of more comfortable spacing, was agreed with almost total unanimity. A single dissenter thought the trend at present is dubious, with a slight edge in favor of more seats and closer spacing; but this member did not himself approve of what he felt to be the trend; his preference, like that of all the others, was in the opposite direction.

"As soon as the building freeze is over," one commented, "I am sure all modern theatres will not only have but feature spacious seating facilities."

"Yes, the industry must provide more comfortable spacing and more accessibility to aisle space than at any time in the past. Patron comfort and added service and safety will be paramount in theatre operation from now on."

Spacing and Width

This feeling on the part of the Council members was reflected in their recommendations for spacing between rows. The minimum spacing suggested by any member was 32 inches; and only one favored that. The majority preferred more than 33 inches. The following spacings were suggested: 32 inch minimum; 32-34 inches; 33-34 inches; 33-36 inches; 34-36 inches; 36 inches; 34-37 inches; 36-40 inches; 40 inches.

The legal minimum of 30 inches specified in many building codes was not so much as mentioned.

One member added: "Where area is seriously limited a minimum spacing of 32 inches may be tolerated, but we prefer 33 to 34 inches."

Another uses 34-inch spacing in the first one-third rows in the orchestra, 37 inches throughout the rest of the orchestra; 36 inches in loges; 32 inches in balconies.

20-21 Inch Seat Prime Favorite

The Council members overwhelmingly favored a seat width of 20-21 inches. Only one suggested 19-20 inches, while several preferred 21 or 22 inch widths. No one even referred to the existence of 18-inch chairs.

Oversize chairs and so-called "love seats" were not generally approved. Most of the members do not use them in their theatres. A few make limited use of them.

"We use chairs 24 inches wide or wider in a few de luxe operations, in the loge sections."

"Only in loges of de luxe houses."

"In some installations, but we find love seats are not popular."

"We use very few chairs 24 inches wide or wider; only in special loge sections with higher admissions."

"In loge seat sections."

"In our opinion, oversized chairs are not necessary and are not desirable."

"The stagger system used on our lower floors requires a 30-inch chair at each end of alternate rows of the center bank."

Upholstery

Heavily upholstered chairs were not popular. Almost all members favored medium softness. One, however, noted that his preference depends on location, type of audience and admission price. Two others use medium-upholstered chairs in orchestra and balcony, heavily upholstered ones in loges. One prefers heavy upholstery on the seats, light on the backs of the chairs.

Foam rubber was preferred as against the conventional type using padding and springs, but with some qualifications.

"If the rubber is available," one member added.

"For seats only, not for the entire chair."

"If the cost is not prohibitive."

"Yes, but we recognize there is an inflammable condition, and residual matter after fires, with this material."

"We would prefer a combination of foam rubber and springs."

A minority, however, were strongly in favor of conventional upholstery.

In the matter of chair covering, there was again almost complete agreement. A large majority want fabric backs and some type of leatherette seats, or leatherette seat tops with fabric panels for the sides of the seats.

"Short nap mohair on backs, fabricoid on top of seat with fabric sides."

"Leatherette or plastic-coated fabric for

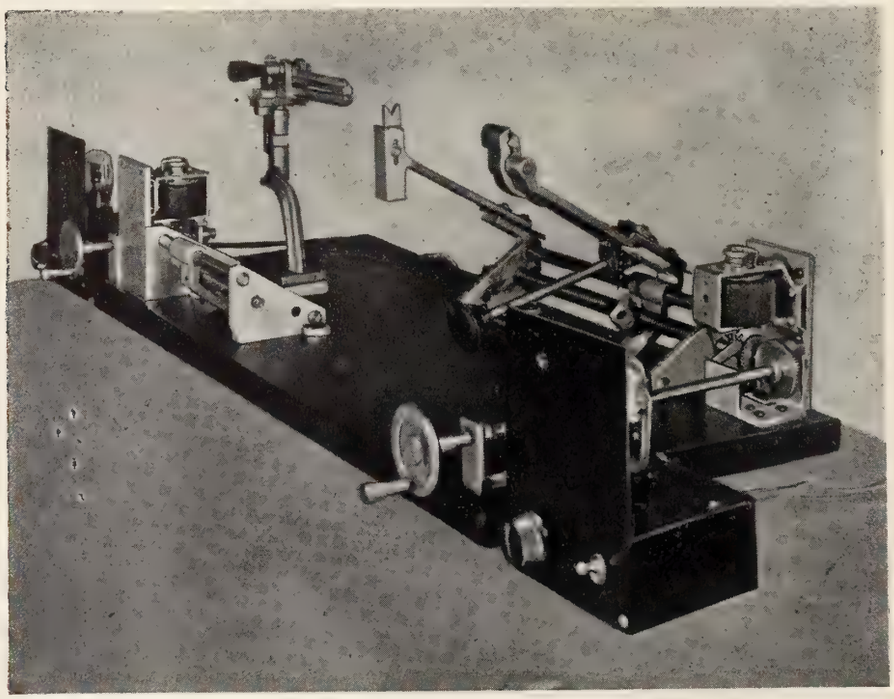
Electronic Control of Carbon Feed Features New Projection Lamp



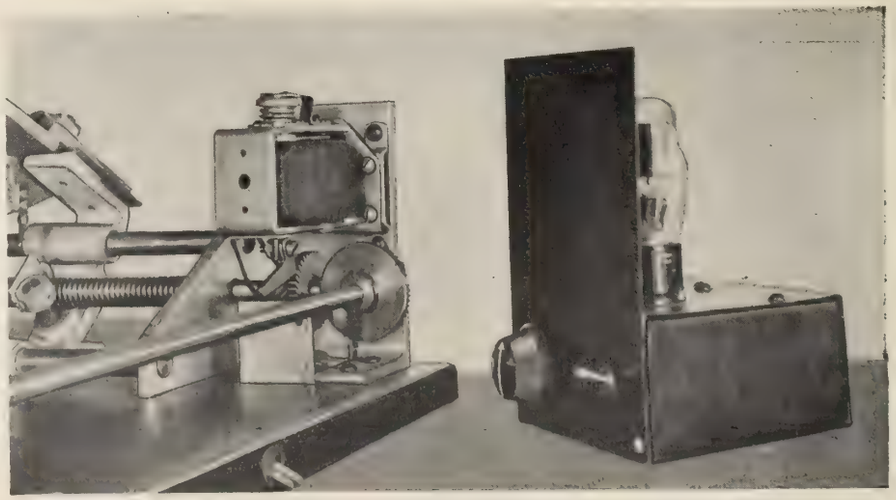
Positive and Negative Carbon Controls Completely Independent of Each Other And Separately Governed By Two Electronic Devices

A completely new method of feeding carbons in the arc lamp, having for its objective the creation of steadier and more perfectly focussed screen illumination, has been announced by Forest Manufacturing Corp. It is embodied in a new lamp, now in production, known as the Forest Electronic Arc.

The new lamp is the result of experiments which J. K. Elderkin, President and Chief Engineer of the Forest organization, has been conducting assiduously ever since V-J Day. Early in 1946 experimental models of the control device were demonstrated to the trade press and to a number of persons in key places in the industry. Publication of the details has now been authorized.

The new lamp has no carbon feed motor, no gears and no clutches. Mechanisms for feeding the two carbons are completely separate from each other, mechanically and electrically, and subject to independent adjustment for control of the rate of feeding.

Each carbon carrier is mounted in association with a worm screw, rotation of which causes the carrier to move toward the arc, thereby feeding carbon to the arc. Mounted on the same shaft with the worm screw is a ratchet wheel. A pawl which engages one tooth of the ratchet wheel causes the wheel (and therefore the worm screw) to rotate through a small fraction of one complete rotation. The pawl is actuated by a solenoid. The solenoid is energized periodically by current derived from an electronic "pulse generator"—a type of circuit very commonly used in modern television apparatus.



BED PLATE of the lamp, with the separate controls for each carbon mounted on it diagonally opposite each other, and the pulse generators for each carbon placed (for pictorial purposes only) at opposite ends of the bed plate.

The lower picture shows two different components of the feed mechanism. At right: one electron tube pulse generator unit with its control knob and switch. At left, in the same picture, is seen one corner of the bed plate of the lamp. The worm screw is seen running off to the left; directly above it and parallel to it is one of the two slide rods on which each carbon carrier rides, and along which it is moved by rotation of the worm screw. A portion of one carbon carrier can be seen at extreme left.

At the extreme right end of the worm screw is the ratchet wheel with its associated pawl. Above ratchet wheel and pawl is the solenoid. When the pawl moves, ratchet wheel and worm screw are rotated in a counter-clockwise direction. Running obliquely left, at right angles to the worm screw, is the shaft of the hand control that can be used to adjust the position of the carbons manually in order to bring them into operating position quickly when trimming the lamp.

The upper picture gives a more complete view of the whole bed plate, including both carbon holders. The complete separation of the two worm screws, ratchets and solenoids at diagonally opposite corners of the bed plate is plainly visible. One electronic control unit is photographed at either end of the bed plate,

Glorifying the Lights and Shadows

Typical of the beautiful photography in current releases is this scene from the RKO Radio Picture, "Sister Kenny" starring Rosalind Russell and Alexander Knox.

Film producers spend millions to give you productions which are examples of the best in photographic art. To realize their great potentials on your screen, however, you must project them with the same brilliant, snow-white high intensity light that is employed in film production. Only then can you obtain for your patrons all the highlights, deep shadows and intermediate values necessary to pictures of depth and fine definition.

Strong High Intensity Lamps deliver double the light of low intensities at a cost within reach of the most modest theatre. Sold by independent theatre supply dealers everywhere.

EQUIPMENT LITERATURE BUREAU

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW maintains a well-stocked library of literature pertaining to theatre equipment and the maintenance thereof. Theatremen are urged to use this service to keep themselves informed on new equipment, improved equipment and methods of maintaining the showhouse in an efficient and economical manner. There is absolutely no obligation involved in your request for the booklets described below. Information on items of equipment not listed likewise may be requested and we will endeavor to obtain for all theatremen the desired material. Readers who desire special information on any subject may address such requests to the bureau, where they will receive prompt attention. In requesting literature or other information of this Bureau, please write name, name of theatre, and address plainly. Our only request is that the name of the theatre as well as street address must appear on all blanks or letters.

ACOUSTICAL MATERIAL. With today's sound equipment, acoustics rather than apparatus constitute the greatest single cause of poor sound. Moreover, the theatre that was acoustically satisfactory for the limited-range sound of older systems may not be suited to later, improved sound quality—the absorbing materials of the auditorium may be inadequate at the higher frequencies. Materials for acoustical correction, and for quieting machine noise or street noises, are described and illustrated in detail in a booklet issued by Armstrong Cork Company, which is yours for the asking. (#1).

AIR CONDITIONING. Varieties of conditioning equipment, ranging from simple blowers, coolers and air washers to complete "package" units that refrigerate, de-humidify and all but manufacture new air, cover an enormous range of mechanical devices and contrivances. Every theatre cannot use the same conditioning apparatus. Location, availability of cold well water, type of patronage and many other factors enter into the problem of intelligent selection and should be matched against the nature and capabilities of equipment available. A number of very different devices for securing desirable air conditioning are described briefly in a folder issued by United States Air Conditioning Corp. Compact and easily read, this folder will give any theatre manager an outline of methods and equipments, to help him choose those best suited to his own circumstances. (#2).

CURTAIN CONTROLS. Curtain sizes vary from theatre to theatre; the type of drape desired in the curtain varies according to the decorative scheme; therefore curtain control equipment must partake of the nature of a tailor-made proposition, with the length and type of curtain track, size and type of motor, location and nature of controlling switches, all adapted to particular requirements. The flexibility with which standard units can be combined to meet individual needs is well set forth in a pamphlet issued by Automatic Devices Company. If you are planning a new theatre, re-modeling an old one, or merely having trouble with your existing curtain machinery, this pamphlet may help you materially. (#3).

DEODORIZING DEVICE. A mechanical, automatically acting deodorizing device that needs no electrical connections is described in an illustrated bulletin issued by S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corp. Known as "Lavador", it fastens to the top of the rest room door somewhat in the manner of an automatic door-closer. Opening and closing the door operates a small plunger, thus allowing some of the deodorizing gas to escape. The chemical used is a solid, slowly evaporating block of aromatics and perfumes compounded with paradichlorbenzene. A full description is contained in the two-color illustrated folder, which we will gladly send you on request. (#4).

DRIVE-IN THEATRES. Very detailed information about the planning, construction and operation of drive-in theatres is given in a booklet prepared by RCA, copy of which we will be glad to send you without obligation at your request. It includes diagrammatic plans for a suggested layout of the theatre ramps, of the projection-and-rest-room building, of the screen position and of the in-car speaker wiring. Equipment requirements are discussed, and average temperatures in every part of the United States, every month of the year, are tabulated in detail. (#5).

FURNITURE. It all depends on the decorative scheme, but if your lounges and foyers are modern in styling you can't do better than to furnish them with modern chairs and tables. Metal furniture consisting of tubular chrome plated or aluminum frames is the most easily maintained, and the most nearly indestructible, of any furniture ever made. Doehler Metal Furniture Co. has brought out a full color booklet illustrating chairs, chair groups and settees upholstered in natural leather, duPont Fabricoid or the customer's own material. They are pictured in all shades of the rainbow, to aid you in judging for yourself how they will look in your own theatre. (#6).

LIGHTING. The modern theatre lures with light, decorates with light. Two booklets by Westinghouse Electric Corp. cover the subject of theatre lighting exhaustively and from every angle. (They are yours for the asking). In them you will find details of lamps available, and suggested lighting schemes for the theatre front, the marquee, foyer, lobby, rest rooms, auditorium and stage—a number of illustrated suggestions for each. Types of lighting fixtures suited to every location in the theatre and every type of lamp are illustrated in full detail. There is also a very complete discussion of fluorescent lamps, their method of operation and conditions for best life performance. A full page is devoted to germicidal ultra-violet lamps. For all the competently attractive and easy-reading presentation of the material in these booklets it is remarkably detailed. Persons who are well-equipped with lighting knowledge can still leaf through their pages with advantage and benefit; to others they should prove very highly valuable indeed. (#7).

MARQUEE (CHANGEABLE) LETTERS. Most theatres derive a substantial portion of their revenue from mere transients—people who stroll past or near the theatre and decide to go in after they see what's playing. The changeable letters tell them. The letters must be eminently visible. They must be attractive. And immune to weather. We can send you a full-color, staple-folder of Wagner Sign Service, Inc., which includes very complete and thoroughly illustrated descriptive material, mounting instructions, lighting instructions, and highly helpful suggestions for preparing attractive and informative "copy." Are you certain you are getting the utmost possible advertising value out of your own changeable letters? (#8).

MOTOR GENERATORS. Century-Roth has brought out an attractive two-color, illustrated folder setting forth the characteristics of their arc supply generators (marketed through RCA). Two-bearing and four-bearing types are listed, including a four-bearing type for low power high intensity lamps which needs no ballast resistor (#9).

MOTOR-GENERATOR. One of the favored methods of providing the projection lamps with the kind of power they need. Illustrated literature of Hertner Electric Co. describes these machines and their associated control equipment. (#10).

POWER PLANT (FOR EMERGENCIES). If you are certain the utility employes in your location will never go on strike and that power lines will never break under stress of weather in your part of the country, then you will not want the bulletins of the Consolidated Diesel Electric Corp. They detail the kind of mechanical insurance available to you against a day (or a week) of no business owing to power failure. In these bulletins you will find complete ratings, illustrations, specifications and installation requirements for diesel or gasoline-driven eletcric generators ranging in output from 10 to 50 kilowatts, 50 or 60 cycles. (#11).

PROJECTION LAMP. High intensity projection lamps drawing up to 70 amperes at the arc are described in a folder issued by Strong Electric Corp. Four models are discussed, together with rectifiers for supplying them with operating current and reflectors for utilizing their light at maximum efficiency. (#12).

PROJECTION LAMP. The Brenkert Enarc lamp for 6 or 7 mm. negative and 6, 7 or 8 mm. positive carbon trim is pictured in detail in a booklet in which the component parts of the lamp interior and control mechanism are exposed, and identified in a series of detailed illustrations. Operating features of the lamp, the advantages claimed for it, and the Brenkert attachment for controlled ventilation also are treated. These lamps are merchandised by RCA—the booklet is available through STR's Equipment Literature Bureau. (#13).

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. The heart of every theatre is the hard-working machine that puts the picture on the screen. It must do a job of very rapid, incessant start-stop action on a tenderly fragile strip of film and still be as nearly immune to breakdown as human ingenuity can contrive. An illustrated pamphlet issued by Century Projector Corp. sets forth many of the details of one recently-designed model; it describes the machine that creates the show. (#14).

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. Constructional and operating features of the Brenkert "80" projector are detailed pictorially in an 8-page two-color booklet that will be of interest and value to anyone using the Brenkert and anyone contemplating purchase of now projectors. Both the operating and gear sides of the mechanism are shown photographically with doors open so that construction and design are clearly revealed; additionally, a number of the more important components, including the film trap and the intermittent movement are shown in separate pictures. The accompanying text explains the sealed-in "splash" type automatic lubrication, the framing provisions, gearing features, double shutter action and intermittent construction. Specifications included set forth the length, width, height and weight of the mechanism, its shipping dimensions, shipping weight, and lens requirements. (#15).

RADIO PARTS useful in the projection room and the theatre generally are listed in an 8-page illustrated flyer issued by Radio-Wire-Television, Inc. Tubes, fluorescent lighting fixtures, test meters, non-synch equipment, headphones and speaker units are included, along with repair parts such as resistors, condensers and transformers. (#16).

RECTIFIERS. Since most projection lamps need d.c. and most power companies supply only a.c. some kind of power converting device must be maintained by the theatre. Tube-type rectifiers are among the most popular units for this purpose. A data sheet on Baldor rectifiers sets forth power ratings and operating details of four such units, adapted to projection lamps of different sizes and requirements. Information given includes not only the electrical requirements and power output of each of the units, but the type of lamp and the carbon trim for which each is designed. (#17).

SCREENS. A folder describing the RCA Snowhite screen includes a sample of the actual screen material. If you are using the Snowhite in your own theatre this sample, pinned against your screen when no audience is present, will enable you to check accurately the progress of deterioration and soiling since it was first installed. The same sample, preserved in case a Snowhite screen is bought, can be used for future tests of the same nature from time to time. The pamphlet describes the construction and quality of the screen material and offers definite, quantitative, statements as to its reflection efficiency and sound transmission—in figures. (#18).

SOUND EQUIPMENT. A number of different components—soundheads, amplifiers, speakers, power units, etc., must be combined to make one sound system. Manufacturers build these components in models of different power and sometimes of different quality, and then combine them according to the needs of the theatre and the price it is willing to pay. In careful buying it is necessary for the purchaser to inform himself as to what component items, of what power and quality, go to make up each of the systems he has under consideration. A well-printed booklet on Motiograph-Mirrophonic sound apparatus has been issued by Motiograph. It first describes each component unit and illustrates it in detail; then lists five separate systems, setting forth just which of the previously described components goes into each. The power output and distortion rating of each system is also stated, as well as its capacity in terms of the number of seats it can serve under the recommendations of the Academy Research Council. (#19).

VOLTAGE REGULATORS. Equipmet life is shortened, and repair and replacement costs increased, wherever the power company is unable to hold its voltage constant. In many communities, today especially, the power company simply doesn't have the equipment to do it. Individual consumers (such as the theatre) who may suffer substantially from voltage fluctuation have in such communities no practical alternative except to install small devices to regulate their own supply as it leaves the power main, or a portion of their supply as it approaches apparatus particularly sensitive to unsteady voltage. Manual and automatic regulators for this purpose are listed and illustrated in literature of American Transformer Co. Theatres operating under the handicap of poor regulation should by all means use the coupon below (#20).

Maintenance Memos for PROJECTIONISTS

OCT. 14

Check up on tool supply; make sure EVERY tool that may be needed in emergency is available.

OCT. 15

If floor paint is worn through and cement dust is being scuffed into the equipment, re-paint.

OCT. 16

Test volume controls. Correct or replace any that are not COMPLETELY noiseless in operation.

OCT. 17

Test each loudspeaker unit INDIVIDUALLY for volume, quality and rattle-free operation.

OCT. 18

Are projection, sound optical surfaces CLEAN—mirrors free from defects of silvering?

OCT. 19

If your projection ports have glass soundproofing check cleanliness of the glass—clean as needed.

OCT. 20

Is the takeup action smooth and correct; are belts or chains taut and not excessively worn?

OCT. 21

Is projector vibration increasing? Check carefully for the cause and remedy it promptly.

OCT. 22

Using a watch, check the starting time of both projector motors. Have they slowed down? Find cause.

OCT. 23

Is sound track alignment the best possible to avoid sprocket hole and frame line noise?

OCT. 24

Is rectifier cooling fan behaving normally—rectifier operating at the proper temperature?

OCT. 25

Check readings of tube meters; replace tubes as necessary for best quality and reliable operation.

OCT. 26

Inspect all projector and soundhead parts for mechanical wear. Order needed replacements.

OCT. 27

Check all motor-generators for cool bearings, commutator condition, freedom from sparking.

OCT. 28

Is your stock of spare parts COMPLETE? Have you enough carbons—for ALL needs?

OCT. 29

Check all oil cups, oil reservoirs, grease cups, other lubricating points. Lubricate as needed.

OCT. 30

Inspect tungar rectifier tube filaments; replace all tubes that show any serious filament sag.

OCT. 31

Check film guides, tension shoes, idlers, aperture plates, for wear. Order replacements now.

NOV. 1

Examine all sprocket teeth in projector and soundhead for signs of wear or undercutting.

NOV. 2

Watch the screen carefully during showing of titles for even slight travel ghost.

NOV. 3

Examine the asbestos-covered leads to all lamphouses. Are they still in good condition?

NOV. 4

Test fire shutters of projectors for reliability; check action of port safety shutters.

NOV. 5

Examine carbon jaws in all lamphouses. Sandpaper as necessary to remove all roughness.

NOV. 6

Insert the pre-focussed exciter lamps in operating position. Are they in perfect focus?

NOV. 7

Listen to sound critically; any flutter or wows? Remedy cause in soundhead or projector.

NOV. 8

Test volume controls. Correct or replace any that are not COMPLETELY noiseless in operation.

NOV. 9

Test each loudspeaker unit INDIVIDUALLY for volume, quality and rattle-free operation.

NOV. 10

Are projection, sound optical surfaces CLEAN—mirrors free from defects of silvering?

PROJECTION SAFETY IS MANAGER'S DUTY

sonal safety, we still want to protect our patrons and our equipment."

"We do not permit violations. Neither does the law."

There was no dissent from anyone.

We then asked the members whether their union contracts permitted disciplinary action or discharging a man, for neglect of safety. One member snapped back emphatically:

"There isn't any union that will fail to back the manager in a case like that."

Another added:

"Our contracts allow us to fire any man, for any reason."

"The matter is not specifically covered in our contracts, unfortunately, but it can be included under some of the provisions against violations."

Again there was no dissent; no member envisaged a case in which action could not be taken against any employe who violated safety rules.

Two-Men Crews

"Do you believe that in a properly built and properly equipped projection room, the use of a two-man crew does or does not materially improve the safety factor?" we asked.

Opinion was divided.

Said one member: "One man has to go to the toilet. Then who is there to protect the audience or the theatre's property?"

'Two men who are attending to their work will materially lessen any fire danger. There is too much tendency to let the machines work unattended while the projectionist engages in other activities."

The majority, however, felt differently.

"One man is enough if the projection room is modern and properly equipped."

"We have had very satisfactory results with one-man projection rooms."

"One man is enough if he is a good man, and experienced."

Doors and Ladders

The Council was strongly in favor of adding a second exit to the projection room where none now exists, and unanimous on behalf of replacing ladders with regular stairs wherever at all possible.

"Statistics show that many a projectionist has been trapped in the far end of a room when a projector nearer the door caught fire."

"A second exit is very strongly desirable."

"We are trying to add exits in all cases where the physical layout of the building makes it possible."

Only one member thought there is no need at all of a second exit; and one thought there not sufficient need to justify altering existing theatres although he is in favor of putting two into all new construction.

On the desirability of replacing vertical ladders leading to the projection room there was no difference of opinion at all; a number of members did note, however, that there are theatres in which such a change is just not physically possible.

Boy Projectionists?

The Underwriters prescribe that no minor shall be employed as a projectionist. The majority of the Council agrees. A minority set the age of 18 as the minimum at which a youth can be trusted with projection work.

"Minors as projectionists?—ridiculous. I watch a show for my entertainment—and the theatre endangers my life by putting a boy in charge!"

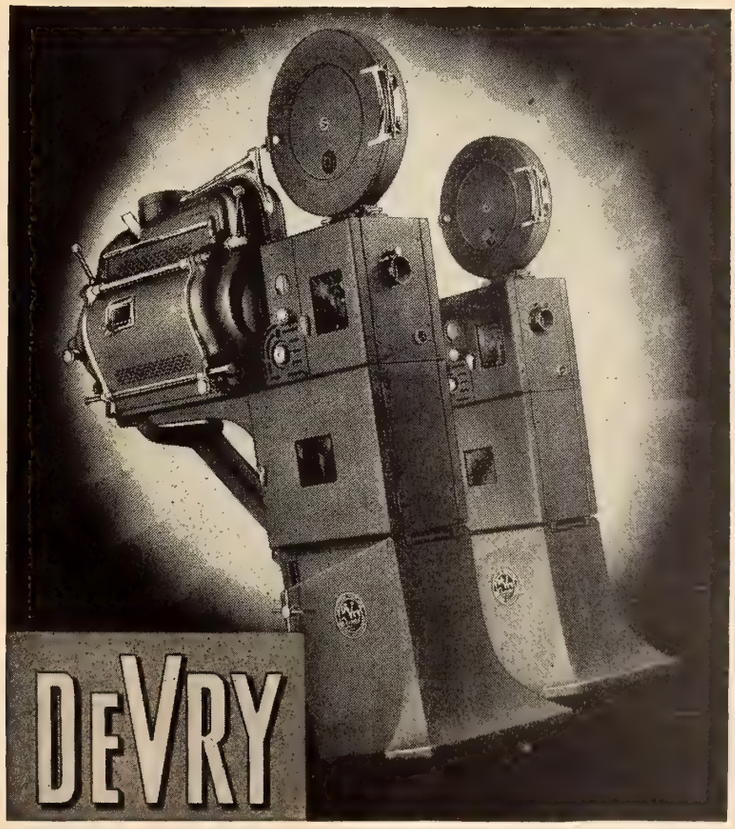
"No one should be allowed to operate a projection machine unless he is at least 21 years of age and has had proper training and good supervision for at least two years apprenticeship."

"Projectionists should not be minors."

One member added that he is also opposed to employment of women as projectionists. But if they must be hired, he continued, compel them to wear slacks at work—no dresses under any circumstances.

The Council split sharply on the question of the Underwriters' recommendation that projectionists in case of fire should operate the safety devices and then leave the projection room.

"Emphatically right."



"We insist that the projectionist leave immediately after operating the safety devices."

One member held a completely opposite view.

"The projection room should be properly built, properly equipped, properly operated and diligently inspected, and there can't be any fire serious enough to require the men to leave. With fireproof film cabinets, good shutters, adequate ventilation, there will be no fumes, no explosion, nobody killed—any fire will promptly burn itself out."

"He should operate the safety devices

PROJECTION SAFETY

and then use his best judgment, according to the circumstances."

"Let him check the shutters and put the house lights on, then leave if the fire is beyond control."

"Well, yes, the Underwriters are correct, but. I would expect him to use an extinguisher first if conditions permit. If he has any doubts about his own safety he certainly should not stay."

Further divisions of opinion appeared with reference to fire extinguishers, but it developed that the members were talking about different types of extinguishers. With respect to the carbon tetrachloride type, a number felt it should not be allowed in the projection room or at least not used for film fires.

"CT releases poisonous gases when used on a film fire," one stated.

"No carbon tetrachloride," agreed another. "But Foamite makes an excellent blanket for film fire."

The reverse belief was also voiced.

"I have seen fires of minor importance quickly extinguished with carbon tet. Had they been allowed to develop the theatre would have had to be emptied, with some risk of panic."

"There are other types of fire beside film fire, and they should be fought by the projectionist."

"We do not believe extinguishers should be used for film fire, but they could be used for fire in other equipment."

"No carbon tetrachloride, Foamite for film and Pyrene extinguishers for electrical fires."

Those members who approve of carbon tet extinguishers in the projection room were emphatic on the importance of preventing depletion of the extinguisher through use of the fluid for cleaning purposes.

"Our projectionists can have CT by the gallon if they so request. Fire Department inspections and house fire drills should prevent any use of the extinguisher contents except for fire."

"We try to keep one gallon of tet in each projection room for cleaning. It is ordered with the regular projection room supplies. This plan seems to work out. Extinguishers should be inspected and refilled at regular intervals, and a tag with the date of refilling should be attached to each one."

"Provide separate cleaning fluid and prohibit the use of extinguishers except in case of fire."

"Check the extinguishers monthly. Under no conditions should their fluid be used for any other purpose." (#1).

Urges Film Industry To Watch Television

"Do not judge the future of theatre television by the kind of televised image you may have seen in pre-war days," warns Ralph B. Austrian of RKO Television Corp.

"Knowing the industry's apathy to the advent of sound pictures some twenty years ago, I would like to go on record, as an enthusiastic believer in television, as having called its attention to a development that is certainly going to have a great effect on it," Austrian asserts in a letter to Charles E. Lewis, publisher of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

Austrian believes that all who are in the production, distribution and exhibition branches of the motion picture industry owe it themselves and their companies to see the latest postwar equipment and to keep up with television progress. (#7).

FIRE DAMAGE

Two thousand, one hundred fires, causing a total damage of more than three and a quarter million dollars, occurred in American theatres during the year 1945, according to the National Fire Protection Association. Loss of life and personal injuries are not tabulated (#8).

Set 36 New Papers For SMPE Meet

Thirty-six papers on projection, sound, television and related subjects will be read and discussed before the 60th Semi-Annual Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at Hollywood, October 21st to 24th.

Byron Price, Chairman of the Board of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and wartime censor chief under President Roosevelt, will address the gathering on October 21st. (#9).

Cahill Honored by Standards Association

Col. Frank Cahill, Director of Sound and Projection for Warner Theatres and a member of STR's Projection Advisory Council, has been presented with a citation by the American Standards Association in recognition of his work in organizing projection and photographic standards.

Cahill was instrumental, during his service with the Army Signal Corps, in organizing standardization procedures of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Academy Research Council on behalf of the Army, Navy and Marines. (#10).

Martin Bennett Joins RCA Staff

Martin Bennett has joined the staff of RCA Manufacturing Company. He was formerly, and for the past 14 years, with Warner Brothers sound and projection department, in full charge of the department during the absence of Col. Cahill with the armed forces. Bennett will now represent RCA in New England, in the sale of sound equipment to theatres. (#11).

the seat cushion, fabric covering for the seat back."

"Fabric for backs, plastic-coated fabric for seat cushions."

"Plastic cushions with fabric boxing and fabric backs. In loges we prefer all fabric."

"Leather covered seats and fabric covered backs."

"Mohair for backs, leatherette seat with fabric box panels."

"Fabric for back, leather for seat."

One member, however, preferred the entire chair covered in plastic-coated fabric.

Slip covers found few supporters. Some members use them in loges only, or in summer only, or in de luxe houses only, or only in cases where a fabric-covered chair "bleeds."

"We don't use them, and don't consider them practical."

"We prefer to keep after the cleaning staff for frequent vacuuming of chair backs."

"Laundry service is too uncertain these days."

"Too many of them are stolen."

Maintenance

The majority favor daily inspection of chairs for loose parts, worn fabric or loose anchorage.

"This is one of the theatre's musts."

"Daily inspection—chairs should be checked as floors are swept."

"Our janitors make a daily inspection of theatre seats and the manager or assistant make a weekly inspection."

"Daily inspection for cut or worn fabrics, weekly inspection for loose parts or loose anchorage."

No member recommended neglecting chair inspection for any interval longer than one week.

"Almost daily," one suggested.

"Twice weekly."

"At least weekly."

"Weekly—and a thorough inspection."

A substantial majority also felt that any faults should be repaired with no delay.

"Immediately."

"As soon as discovered."

"Any torn or loose theatre chairs are repaired at once."

"Remedied as soon as found."

"At once."

"As soon as possible."

"Most chair difficulties should be repaired immediately they are discovered; but some faults are not serious enough for that."

"Hazardous chairs must be taken care of immediately."

Other comments were:

"Repairs should be made daily. Each theatre should have spare seats and backs for this purpose."

"We have a few extra cushions on hand at all times, for immediate installation. Weekly maintenance and repair is no doubt the best system; normal wear and tear being taken care of by our maintenance staff. Upholsterers are sent in when the overall condition of the theatre calls for a large amount of repair work."

"Occasional repairs are handled by the house staff, who keep a supply of seats on hand. When a sufficient number of bad seats have accumulated upholsterers are called in." (#5).

WINNING PROJECTIONIST

Arthur L. Melton, IATSE Local No. 281, won the $100 Victory Bond offered by L. D. (Larry) Strong of Essanay Manufacturing Company for the oldest operating Strong changeovers. Melton submitted a pair that had been in use in the Columbia Theatre, Paducah, Kentucky, since 1928, or for an estimated 70,000 working hours.

Film Men Appraise Sovocolor Process

The "Natural Sovocolor" process recently developed in Russia appears to be superior to American color prints only in distance shots. In such, in the opinion of experienced observers, the Soviet method results in greater naturalness of color tones. Otherwise the Russian print appears to be less satisfactory than domestic color, and moreover is not consistent.

The Sovocolor process was used in making Artkino's "Russia on Parade" which opened at the Stanley Thatre, New York, on September 7th. (#14).

H. Van Nieman of Motiograph, Inc., and Will DeVry of DeVry Corporation are among members of the Chicago chapter of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers who will attend the SMPE convention in Hollywood. (#15).

Tesma Show A Sellout

"A complete sell out—over fifty member manufacturers have reserved display space," is the report of Oscar F. Neu, President of the Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturer's Association on the forthcoming TESMA convention.

The convention will be held in Toledo, Ohio, November 8th to 11th, simultaneously with the annual convention of the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association. More than 400 persons, representing all phases of the motion picture industry, are expected to attend.

"Our good friends in Toledo like Harry Strong, head of the Strong Electric Company, and Harold Wendt, made it possible for both associations to get accommodations at the Commodore Perry and Secor hotels, which are opposite each other and under the same management," Neu said. (#16).

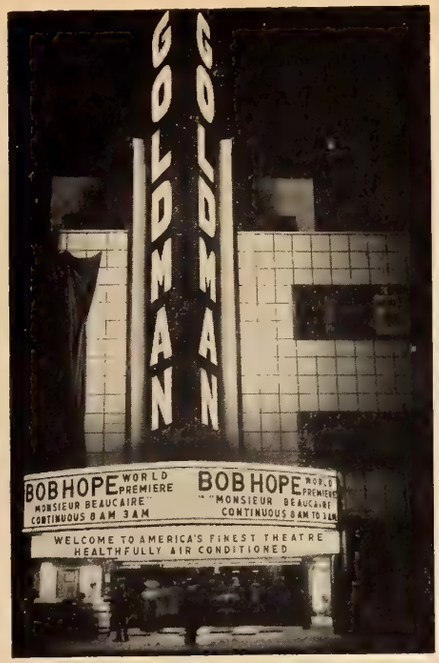
Expert Advises on Promoting Candy Sales

"Get your candy as close to the box office as you can, so the customer has no chance to stow away his change too securely, and make the display as bright and attractive as possible," advised S. H. Cady, Jr., director of the Council on Candy of the National Confectioners' Association, at the Allied Motion Picture Exhibitors meeting in Boston.

"Candy is an impulse item," Cady explained, "A survey made recently disclosed that candy is the most impulsive, so to speak, of all impulse items."

Although candy is still in short supply the industry is past the low point, and output is definitely increasing, Cady disclosed. He expects substantial increases in supply in the course of 1947.

Theatres account for about four per cent of the country's retail candy sales, Cady added, but could sell much more than that.



"You might suggest to your friends the producers," he declared, "that actors and actresses be shown eating candy occasionally. The sight of candy being enjoyed on the screen might persuade some of your audience to go and do likewise on the way out." (#17).

2,000 Theatre Voices

"Voice of the Theatre" installations throughout the country have now passed the 100,000 mark, Altec Lansing Corporation announces. Latest were in the Atlantic City Auditorium, Atlantic City, N. J.; The Gardens, Pittsburgh, Pa.; and Hershey Auditorium, Hershey, Pa. (#18).

Reopens Burnt-Out Theatre

George Genapolis has reopened his 550-seat Strand, at Brookfield, Ill., after completing fire repairs. Ideal chairs, Altec Lansing speakers, Kollmorgen lenses and a Dalite screen were among the new items installed. Abbott Theatre Supply Company furnished the equipment. (#19).

To Show Advances in Air Conditioning

New air conditioning systems, designed to filter and purify air as well as control its humidity and temperature will be displayed at the fourth annual exposition of the Refrigeration Equipment Manufacturers Association, to be held in Cleveland October 29th to November 1st at the Public Auditorium.

New types of compressors and other component parts of conditioning systems also will be on display, as well as unit types and remote control types of water coolers.

The occasion will be the first complete showing of such products since January, 1941. More than 160 manufacturers will be represented. (#21).

New projection and sound equipment has been installed and is operating in four Missouri Theatres—the Regal at Elvins, the Roseland at Flat River, Grand at Desloge and Ritz at Farmington. Plans have also been completed for new air conditioning. The houses are affiliates of the Karsch Circuit. (#22).

Chicago Theatre Supply Company has contracted to furnish 650 International chairs to the new Lake Theatre; 800 to the Temple Theatre at Miroqua, Wisconsin and 600 to the Relda Theatre, Marshfield, Wisconsin. (#23).

Edward H. Wolk, manufacturer of theatre equipment and parts has just completed an addition to his plant at 1241 S. Wabash Ave. in Chicago, and is now occupying these new premises. (#24).

Star popcorn machines have been installed by Abbott Theatre Supply Company in the River Park and Cozy Theatres, South Bend, Ind., and in the Granada Theatre, Granville, Ill. (#25).

ELECTRONIC CONTROL OF CARBON FEED

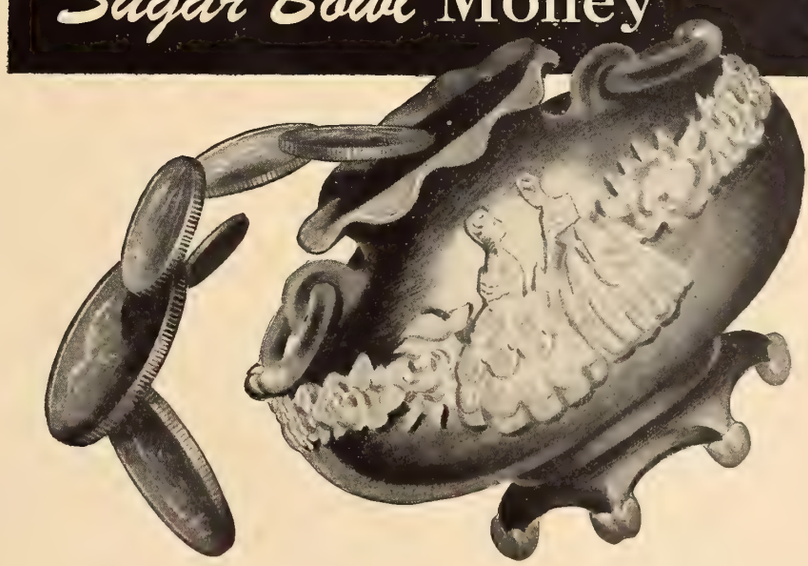
but (unlike the other components) these were placed in the locations shown for pictorial purposes only.

The photographs do not clearly reveal the fact that the pulse generator control knobs are calibrated. They are, however. Carbon feed is regulated by adjusting each knob, according to its calibration, to the rate of feed desired. When the pulses succeed each other more rapidly, the solenoid and pawl act on the ratchet wheel more times per minute and the carbon is fed more rapidly. If the pulse frequency is slowed down by the control knob, the rate of feed will be slower.



The rate for each carbon is set accurately and separately in advance, but can also be altered at any time by a touch on the knob.

Pulse frequencies available range from 20 to 120 per minute, in other words, the highest speed obtainable is six times as great as the lowest—a range of control greater than will ever be needed in any projection room.

This new, electronic, arc control is the subject of a pending patent.

The manufacturer claims that the arc can readily be held in optimum focal position at all times under all circumstances, and that the width of the gap similarly can be held constant, with consequent improvement in the steadiness and brilliance of the light on the screen. It is asserted that these improvements result from the complete separation and independence of the positive and negative feed mechanisms, which permits the rate of feed of either carbon to be set or altered as that carbon requires, without influencing the other carbon in any way. The total divorce of the two control mechanisms makes it impossible for the rate of feed of one carbon to react upon the rate of the other. (#6).

Who Is To Blame For Fire Tragedies?

By IRL GORDON
Member, STR's Projection Advisory Council

Film fire is a dangerous thing. Just inhaling the fumes, when not immediately fatal, causes trouble later. The panic caused damages the whole theatre world.

There is a long gap between what should be done to prevent projection room fires and what is done.

There seems to be a lot of buck-passing, too.

Film exchanges, the condition of whose product causes the fire, seem to go on and on without any risk of ever having to pay damages. Yet some of their film is a crime and a potential danger.

So are some of their excuses.

Bad splices, poor cement, poor inspection and "beating out" of prints are the basic causes of fires.

But the common way out seems to be the one of putting the horse behind the cart and trying to prevent panic and audience injury by confining the fire to tight rooms.

Then again, when it comes to confining fires, some managers seem to be spending their money in the wrong direction—spending it not to fix up the projection room but to get out of having to fix it up. I have talked to some inspectors . . . maybe the expression "We got to eat" will subtly explain.

It is heartening to see so much new construction being done right, but lax inspection can turn any place into a fire trap. Sticky port shutters, doors blocked open to get ventilation, long hours of work without relief that would make anyone groggy . . . good construction is no guard against these menaces; laws and their enforcement are needed. It seems strange that in some places enforcement is fine and in others it just "isn't."

Force the film exchanges to ship only GOOD prints. Hold them financially responsible for what happens if they don't. This may be wishful thinking, but if human life is to be spared, there's part of the solution.

The theatre also should be held responsible; compelled to keep its equipment in good shape or lose its operating license, and liable for damages if an unsafe condition results in fire in which anyone is killed or injured. Perhaps one way would be to require that fire department file written inspection reports with the city, with the theatre, and with the union. When a theatre has a fire, and the last filed report shows that it was in unsafe condition, then permit the injured party, or the heirs of the deceased, to get a GOOD settlement via the courts.

If enforcement officials also could be sued (where it could be shown that they tolerated an unsafe condition) enforcement would pick up surprisingly.

The officials, exchanges and theatre all should be held responsible. Local laws and local enforcement are too spotty to do it. What is needed to enforce responsibility is a GOOD STIFF FEDERAL LAW, uniform for all projection work ANYWHERE.

from 60 to 96 cycles. Since 96 is twice 48, the power frequency at the arc and the projection frequency on the screen remain in step with each other.

In the M.M.T. system, projection frequency is altered to bring it into step with the power frequency. The speed of the film remains standard. Film leaves the upper magazine at 18 inches, 24 frames, per second; and it enters the soundhead at 18 inches, 24 frames, per second. In passing through the projection gate, however, its motion is varied, this alteration being taken up by the expansion and contraction of the upper and lower loops.

The Splash-Lubricated Driving Side of the New Mechanism

The details of what happens at the projection gate can readily be understood by considering a full cycle of operation involving the complete projection of two frames.

Starting at the pull-down, the screen is dark for one-120th of a second while the film moves. Frame No. 1 is then exposed for one-120th second; the screen is darkened; the frame is exposed a second time; the screen is darkened, the same frame is exposed a third time. All these intervals of light and darkness occupy one-120th second each. After the third exposure the screen is again darkened and the film moves. Now Frame No. 2 is exposed; the screen is darkened; the frame is exposed a second time; and there is no third exposure in the case of Frame No. 2. After it has been projected for the second time, the film moves and brings Frame No. 3 into the aperture.

Thus, Frame No. 1 has remained motionless in the aperture during five 120th-second intervals—three light and two dark—while Frame No. 2 was in the aperture for only three such intervals.

The entire action takes place at one-120th second intervals, and since 120 is exactly twice 60, the projection frequency stays in step with the power frequency.

At the same time, the complete projection of two frames occupies ten of these 120th second intervals; five of them for Frame No. 1; three for Frame No. 2, and two for the pull-down of the two frames. The whole interval of time occupied is ten times one-120th second, or 1/12th second. This is equivalent to 1/24th second for a single frame, hence the film enters and leaves the mechanism at the standard projection speed.

This unusual film action naturally requires a special intermittent movement. The basic principle of the M.M.T. intermittent is entirely similar to that of the old Powers projector. In place of a cam and Geneva cross, this intermittent uses a cam and pin cross. In standard projection, as with the Powers, the cam actuates the pin cross once in each full revolution of the cam; but in this special M.M.T. intermittent the cam actuates the pin cross twice in each revolution, and at unequal intervals.

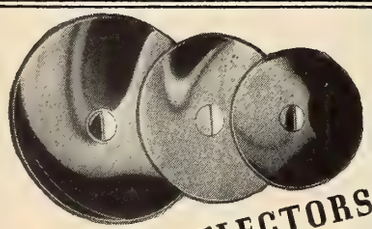
In the illustration, the cam is shown at the left. At the bottom of the cam, and again at its right, are the two regions which, when they revolve into contact with the cross, set it into motion. At right in the picture is the intermittent sprocket and the intermittent case cover. The pin cross is hidden under the case cover; it is mounted on an extension of the intermittent sprocket shaft—or to say the same thing another way, the sprocket mounts on the shaft of the cross. (The five black circles at the top left of the cam are merely counterweights that balance it statically and dynamically).



The M.M.T. mechanism is lubricated by the splash system but the driving side of the casing is not sealed. The upper two thirds of the casing on the driving side consists of a door which can be opened at any time. There is an oil reservoir at the bottom of the mechanism, the gauge for which can plainly be seen from the operating side while film is being threaded. Double shutters operate in opposite directions at the rear of the mechanism.

Among other unusual features of the new projector, the film gate is not straight, but is slightly curved convexly toward the lens, so that film does not run straight down through the gate, but is held taut around a curved path.

The lens barrel is equipped for oversized lenses in the event 50 mm. film comes into use; the entire projector has been designed to be readily adaptable to wider film by mere substitution of wider sprockets, shoes, idlers, and gate.

PROJECTIONIST'S HOBBY

Collecting technical literature of the motion picture industry is the hobby of Anton F. Bruns, projectionist at the Crenshaw Theatre, Los Angeles. Bruns has old volumes on projection dating back as far as 1912; and Vol. 1, No. 1 issues of technical magazines, including the now non-existent Projection Engineering and Motion Picture Projectionist. He considers some of the latter to be collectors' items worth $50.00 apiece or more.

Monogram Sets Film Based on Tchaikovsky

Following Hal Wallis' announcement last week that he has placed "The Life of Tchaikovsky" at the head of his 1947 production schedule for Paramount release, another studio, Monogram, revealed that Benjamin Glazer, scenarist, and Nathaniel Finston, musical director, had formed Symphony Films to film a life of Tchaikovsky under the title of "The Tragic Symphony" for Monogram release. With the screenplay and musical score completed by Glacier and Finston, respectively, production is scheduled to get under way in November for Monogram release.

A spokesman for Wallis declared last week that the Paramount producer will go ahead with his preparations for the Tchaikovsky picture despite the Monogram project. A preliminary screenplay has been prepared by Walter Abbott, and Ayn Rand has been assigned to write the final draft.

Wangers to Participate In British Benefit

Walter Wanger, representing the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and his wife, Joan Bennett, leave for London October 24 to participate in a Command Performance for the King and Queen, for the benefit of the British Dramatic Trade Benevolent Fund, to be held at the Empire Theatre on November 1.

Wanger was scheduled to return to Hollywood this week from New York in order to be present for the final cutting of "Smashup," his newest production at Universal-International. The Wangers will leave again for New York on October 20 and proceed from there to London.

Tracy as Van Gogh

Screen rights to Irving Stone's fictionalized biography of Vincent Van Gogh, "Lust for Life," have been acquired by MGM as a starring vehicle for Spencer Tracy. Richard Llewellyn is writing the screenplay and Sam Zimbalist will produce the picture, which will be made next year.

Haskin to Direct

Byron Haskin has been assigned by Hal Wallis to direct "Deadlock," forthcoming screen version of Theodore Reeves' 1945 Broadway play, "The Beggars Are Coming to Town." Robert Smith is writing the screenplay, and production is scheduled for December. Christine Miller and Kirk Douglas will appear in the film.

Brisson Returns

Frederick Brisson, president of Independent Artists, the company formed by Rosalind Russell, Dudley Nichols and himself to produce pictures, returned to Hollywood this week from New York where he discussed the future release of the trio's pictures and consulted on literary and stage properties.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Strike Spreads to Republic and Hal Roach Lots, With Independents in Its Threatening Path; Most Studios Are Active, Though Not at a High Peak of Efficiency

Although the Hollywood jurisdictional dispute spread to Republic and Hal Roach last Friday and threatened to hit the independents, all studios claimed that production was normal. It was obvious, however, that picture-making was being affected by the picketing, since inexperienced replacements for the striking Conference of Studio Union craftsmen are unable to do the work on the basis it was done heretofore. Also, replacement costs are high. Observers were pretty safe in concluding that no picture at any studio was being produced with 100 per cent efficiency. Uncertainty still reigns as far as future plans are concerned, with studios reluctant to state definitely the starting dates of projected productions.

MGM Hard Hit, But Active

The fury of the CSU has been unleashed against MGM more than any other studio. Scenes of dramatic intensity were daily occurrences at Culver City, despite an injunction issued by a Superior Court judge. However, the studio remains active, with more than a half-dozen pictures going. Kathryn Grayson and Johnny Green's orchestra pre-recorded The Bell Song from "Lakme" for "It Happened in Brooklyn," which Richard Whorf is directing. Katherine Hepburn returned from a Connecticut vacation to start preparations for her part in "A Love Story," based on the life of Robert Schumann. Robert Walker and Paul Henreid will co-star.

Director Roy Rowland continues to have "The Romance of Rosy Ridge" cut as the picture's shooting progresses at its Santa Cruz location. Duncan Richardson, three-year-old, is doing swimming and diving scenes for "This Time for Keeps." The little phenomenon does intricate dives from a 21-foot board. Louis Mason and Britt Wood, who together represent 57 years in show business, are the latest in the list of oldtimers being put into Red Skelton's "Merton of the Movies." Bill Roberts, another veteran performer, also appeared in the silent version of "Merton" back in 1923.

Republic Under Fire

With the firing of its CSU painters and carpenters, Republic came under fire October 3, with nearly 1,000 pickets shifting their weight to the Yates lot. Violence occurred in the morning, but by noon production was back in gear. Republic gathered its workers together in five busloads and jammed 'em through the picket-lined gates. Still going are "Hit Parade of 1947" and "Outlaws of Sioux City," much postponed, but finally under way. Latter is a Red Ryder, featuring Allan Lane, Bobby Blake and Martha Wentworth, and directed by R. G. Springsteen.

Hopes were high for getting two more films rolling, but no definite prediction would be issued. The duo were thrice-delayed "Web of Danger," for which Adele Mara has been cast, and "Along The Oregon Trail," a Monte Hale-Adrian Booth Trucolor western musical.

WB Filming Seven

The strikers let up at Warner Bros., originally the scene of bloodshed and focal point of last year's rioting. (The studio is still contesting suits brought against it by workers, allegedly injured in the 1945 melee.) Seven films are rolling at the Burbank film factory, including "The Woman in White," to which veteran actress Emma Dunn has just been added. Peter Godfrey is directing. Others that started, despite the strike, were "My Wild Irish Rose" in Technicolor, and "Deep Valley," being produced by Henry Blanke, who is also producing "Woman."

Token Picketing at U-I

Universal-International has been very quiet, with only token picket forces in evidence. On their way to Republic strikers assembled at U-I but did little. Perhaps it is because production is so slow at this time. With the completion of "Slave Girl," formerly called "Flame of Tripoli," just one film is going. It was hoped to start "The Egg and I" on October 7, but it was highly indefinite. When the high-budgeteer gets rolling, Chester Erskine will be directing and Fred Finklehoffe producing. Both collaborated on the screenplay. Lone film shooting is "I'll Be Yours."

Roy William Neill, producer-director-writer, left U-I and terminated his contract. His new affiliation has not been announced. Players Jane Adams, William Brooks and Patricia Alphin had their options picked up.

Enterprise Starting One

According to the studio, Enterprise will "definitely" start "The Other Love" on October 14, with Barbara Stanwyck, David Niven and Joan Lorring. Andre De Toth will direct for producer David Lewis. Another month or more of shooting is in store for "Arch of Triumph."

Schwarz's First for SG

Jack Schwarz was scheduled to start his first production "Buffalo Bill Rides Again," for Screen Guild on October 10. "Queen of the Amazons" and "Renegade Girl," recently finished, are being edited.

UA Units Still Active

United Artists' production units, at this point, remain untouched, with a few exceptions. Picketing began at Hal Roach, who is making "Who Killed Doc Robin" for UA release; and "New Orleans," Jules Levey Production,

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Columbia Renews Option on Alexander Knox Pact; Tim Holt Back to Screen in RKO's 'To the Last Man'

Alexander Knox, whose next assignment at Columbia is the starring role in the screen adaptation of Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People," had the option in his term contract picked up for another year by the studio.

After 30 years in the thetare, Edward Arnold has been cast for his 101st role in films. He will portray a newspaper publisher in MGM's Technicolor picture, "The Birds and the Bees," musical starring Jeanette MacDonald, Jose Iturbi and Jane Powell. Joe Pasternak will produce.

Hal Chester, Monogram producer of the Joe Palooka pictures, has started preparations on the third in the series, tentatively titled "A Guy Named Joe Palooka." Joe Kirkwood and Leon Errol are co-starred in the screen versions of the comic strip.

Olga San Juan was assigned the top comedienne role in "Variety Girl," Paramount's all-star musical comedy. She will be teamed with Mary Hatcher, star of the Theatre Guild's "Oklahoma!" Practically all the stars on the Paramount roster will appear in this picture which George Marshall will direct with Daniel Dare producing.

Jane Peters, who was signed by 20th-Fox after winning a beauty contest at Ohio State University, will be launched on her career in an important role in "The Hollywood Story," which Sam Engel will produce.

Johnny Berkes and Vic Potel have been engaged as the comedy Indians, "Geoduck" and "Crowbar" in "The Egg and I," Universal-International production starring Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray.

Maria Palmer will have the important role of Huberta, assistant to the doctor played by David Niven in "The Other Love." Barbara Stanwyck will star in the David Lewis production for Enterprise.

Alan Hale celebrates his 35th year in show business by being cast in United States Pictures' "Pursued." He plays the part of a gambling house proprietor in the Warner release which stars Teresa Wright and Robert Mitchum.

"Panic," Jack Wrather Productions initial film for Monogram, co-starring Bonita Granville and Don Castle, will go before the cameras early in November. Bob Presnell, Sr. is completing the screenplay from the Cornell Woolrich detective yarn.

Jessica Tandy, recently signed to a long-term contract by 20th-Fox, was given an important supporting role in "Forever Amber." She was chosen by director Otto Preminger and producer William Perlberg for the role of Nan Britton, Amber's faithful maid. Film stars Linda Darnell and Cornel Wilde.

Robert Stebbins, Ralph Rodgers, Leon Tyler and Mickey Roth have been added to the cast of MGM's "It Happened in Brooklyn." They join Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson, Jimmy Durante and Peter Lawford, with Richard Whorf directing.

Tim Holt returns to RKO to continue his Army-interrupted screen career as the star of a new series of dramatic western pictures. Three film versions of Zane Grey novels are in preparation for the young actor. First of these, "To the Last Man," will be produced by Herman Schlom, with Lew Landers directing.

Jacob Gimpel, concert pianist, makes his debut before the cameras in the Joan Crawford Van Heflin-Raymond Massey starrer, "Possessed," at Warner Bros. Gimpel plays an important role in the concert hall sequence of the film being directed by Curtis Bernhardt and produced by Jerry Wald.

Gilbert Clark will produce "Riders of the Lone Star," as the final picture in the current series of "Durango Kid" Westerns, co-starring Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette.

Gay Forrester, Clinton Rosemond and Keith Hitchcock have been cast by 20th-Fox in the Technicolor film, "The Homestretch," which co-stars Cornel Wilde and Maureen O'Hara. Bruce Humberstone directs.

John Taintor Foote will produce the forthcoming W. R. Frank feature, "Dan Patch." Frank will confer with Harold Savage, son of the one-time owner of the great pacer, on plans for the picture.

George Cleveland and Gino Corrado were signed by Warners for roles in "My Wild Irish Rose," starring Dennis Morgan and Andrea King. Film is directed by David Butler and produced in Technicolor by William Jacobs.

Finds Lost Chord

Ragtime ivory-tickler Jimmy Durante is going classical. The popular comedian will play The Lost Chord in MGM's "This Time for Keeps.' When questioned by Esther Williams about the tune Durante replied: "Until Melchior tells me different, I'm thinkin' da Lost Chord wuz a missing automobile."

Lewis Directs Publicity For Story Productions

Armand S. Deutsch, president of Story Productions, announced this week the appointment of Bernard Lewis as publicity director for the company, with headquarters in New York.

Initial vehicle of the Hal Horne-Deutsch company will be the screen version of Taylor Caldwell's novel, "This Side of Innocence." Leonardo Bercovici, who wrote the screenplay for Samuel Goldwyn's "The Bishop's Wife" and collaborated on the script of "Moss Rose" at 20th-Fox, has been signed by Horne to do the screenplay on "Innocence."

U-I to Film 'River Lady'

"River Lady," a lusty story by Houston branch of rugged Mississippi River logging days of around 1860, has been purchased by Universal-International for writer-producers Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano as their first production for 1947. The picture is to be filmed in Technicolor and will star Yvonne De Carlo, Rod Cameron, Ann Blyth and Dan Duryea.

Morley Opposite Dix

Karen Morley will have the leading feminine role opposite Richard Dix in "The Fugitive," next in Columbia's "Whistler" series.

Fifth 'Road' Film to Start in November

Fifth of Paramount's popular "Road" series, "Road to Rio," definitely has been scheduled to start next month and will again team the same trio which launched the series with "Road to Singapore" in 1939—Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, the studio announced over the weekend.

Norman McLeod wil be borrowed from Rainbow Produtcions to direct "Road to Rio" which will be jointly produced by Bing Crosby Enterprises, Inc., and Hope Enterprises, Inc., and will be produced at Paramount for release by the same studio. As such, it will mark the first co-production effort of the two companies, which recently completed "Abie's Irish Rose" and "My Favorite Brunette" respectively.

Siodmak Re-Assigned To Direct Field Story

Robert Siodmak, who returned to Hollywood this week following a vacation in New York, has been re-assigned by William Goetz, president in charge of production at Universal-International, to direct "Time Out of Mind," the Rachel Field novel which is to star Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton, Ella Raines and Eddie Albert.

Frank Ryan, who took over when Siodmak went to New York, will get another assignment.

Cast in 'Intermission'

Anne Triola, who scored in her first picture "Without Reservations," has been signed by Jesse L. Lasky and Walter MacEwen to a new long-term contract. Her next assignment will be "Intermission," the Lasky-MacEwen production for RKO Radio release. Camera work is scheduled for November.

Kelly, Allyson Teamed

Gene Kelly and June Allyson will be teamed for the first time in MGM's "Cabbages and Kings," in which Cyd Charisse will dance with Kelly and Jimmy Durante will have the comedy lead. George Sidney will direct and Joe Pasternik will produce.

Jack Paar Tested

Jack Paar, favorite GI comic signed recently by RKO Radio, is being tested for one of the featured roles in "Rich Man, Poor Man," the Eddie Cantor production in which Cantor will co-star with Joan Davis.

Gets First Screen Role

Rosalie Crutchley, Shakespearean actress, has been given her first screen role in Cine-guild's "Take My Life." She plays the part of Elizabeth Rusman.

20th-Fox Releasing 3

"My Darling Clementine," "Margie" and "Wanted for Murder" will be released by 20th Century-Fox during November.

HOLLYWOOD

Jerry Wald Assigned 12 WB Productions

Twelve stories have been assigned Jerry Wald at Warners for 1946-47 productions in addition to "Possessed," now before the cameras, and "Humoresque," which is completed. Two of the pictures, "The Dark Passage," starring Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, and "The Unfaithful," with Ann Sheridan and Zachary Scott, are slated to start shooting this month.

Other ten properties are "Serenade," to star Miss Sheridan and Dennis Morgan; "Need for Each Other," starring Joan Crawford; "Mr. Broadway," based on the life of Sime Silverman; "Silver Lining," based on the life of Marilyn Miller; "The Adventures of Don Juan," starring Errol Flynn, "The Life of Will Rogers;" "Rebel Without Cause," from Dr. Robert M. Lindner's book; "Quietly My Captain Waits," from Evelyn Eaton's novel; "Calamity Jane" and an untitled script by Curt Siodmak.

Stack in 'Other Love'

Robert Stack will star with Barbara Stanwyck and David Niven in "The Other Love," unpublished Erich Maria Remarque novel, which is scheduled to begin filming at Enterprise Oct. 14 as a David Lewis production under the direction of Andre de Toth. Ladislas Fodor wrote the screenplay.

Rampart's First Film

First picture of the newly formed Rampart Productions, of which William Dozier is president and Joan Fontaine vice-president, will be an original by Sheridan Gibney, tentatively titled "Possession," in which Miss Fontaine will star for Universal-International release. Gibney will also write the screenplay and produce the picture.

Year Off for Bette

Because of her approaching motherhood, Bette Davis, Warner Bros. star, is taking a year off starting immediately. Miss Davis, who is married to William Grant Sherry, has just finished "Deception," in which her co-stars are Paul Henreid and Claude Rains.

'Black Gold' Stylist

Having completed the fashion supervision of "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," current Roy Del Ruth production for Monogram, Lorraine MacLean has been named stylist for "Black Gold," Jeffrey Bernerd film scheduled to start in November.

Back from Conference

Edward Norris, co-starred with Jean Gillie in Monogram's "Decoy," has returned to Hollywood from Chicago where he conferred with his partners in North American Skylines, in which he owns a substantial interest.

Sign Agnes Moorehead

Agnes Moorehead has been signed to a multiple-picture contract by Warner Bros. Her first appearance under the new pact will be "The Woman in White."

Jergens' Option Lifted

Adele Jergens has had the option on her term contract picked up by Columbia.

is also affected since it is being made at the Roach lot. Levey and director Arthur Lubin have been shooting street scenes at night, with 500 extras on hand. "Vendetta," Preston Sturges picture, has been back and forth from locations; it shoots on the Goldwyn lot for interiors. Also on the Goldwyn lot, which was still absented by pickets last week, is Harry Joe Brown's "Twin Sombreros," being made for Columbia release. Howard Hawks' "Red River" is still on location near Tucson, Ariz., where the company has had weather troubles.

20th-Fox Filming Three

Three films are going at 20th-Century Fox, where pickets are few. The trio is "The Homestretch," "Boomerang" and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now." "Boomerang" is being shot in its entirety at Stamford, Conn. Sol M. Wurtzel completed "Backlash."

Director Henry King and his production staff for "Captain from Castile," scheduled to start next month, returned to Hollywood after three weeks in Mexico searching for locations from the air. King's company will travel 2,000 miles, using seven different locations.

Western Scheduled at RKO

RKO, another studio that has escaped punishment to any degree from the strikers, hopes to get a western, "To the Last Man," under way by October 10, but hopes and reality may prove two different things. Still rolling are "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer," "A Time to Kill," "They Won't Believe Me" and "Banjo." Latter has been on location and "Time to Kill," an independently-made Hakim-Litvak production, has been alternating between the home lot and RKO Pathe in Culver City.

Sol Lesser made a deal with Cole Brothers Circus for 12 elephants for "Tarzan and the Huntress," which was stopped a short while last week by rain while locationing. Lesser will send a camera unit to the circus winter quarters in Louisville, Ky., to film sequences.

Argosy Pictures signed a releasing deal with RKO. The company is headed by John Ford and Merian C. Cooper, and intends making four top-budget pictures.

Monogram Unaffected

Monogram, while threatened by the strike, is at this date unaffected in its production. "Cisco and the Angel" has been completed, leaving "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" as the sole occupant of the studio's stages—and that's the plural because production on the Roy Del Ruth film is overflowing the lot.

Johnny Arthur, who last appeared for producer-director Del Ruth in the original "Desert Song" in 1929, is back in "Fifth Avenue." Leo Penn, 24-year-old Actors Lab star, was signed to a long-term contract by Monogram and will appear in "Cocaine," soon to go. Clem McCarthy, famous race announcer, came to Hollywood to confer with producer Jeffrey Bernerd and director Phil Karlson on his scheduled calling of race scenes in "Black Gold."

PRC at Production Peak

PRC is currently at its production peak, with plenty of activity on all fronts. "Philo Vance's Gamble" has just been completed, having been shot at the Eagle Lion lot. Meanwhile, "Red Stallion," first of the studio's half-million dollar efforts, is on location in northern California, under the direction of Lesley Selander. Also scheduled to roll was the Eddie Dean outdoor action musical, "Wild Country," with Doug Fowley a last-minute addition. Jerry Thomas produces and Ray Taylor directs.

Columbia Keeps Rolling

Outside of some continued isolated cases of strike trouble, Columbia has kept rolling. Sam Katzman's "Last of the Redmen" was hampered temporarily by rain on its Lake Arrowhead location, but managed to be completed. Also finished is "The Lone Hand Texan," Charles Starrett-Smiley Burnette western. And just started were two films, "The Lady from Shanghai" and "The Hunter Is a Fugitive." Orson Welles, who is producing and directing the former, returned from San Francisco where he selected locations for the film, in which he co-stars with Rita Hayworth. Besides downtown San Francisco locations, sites were also picked in Chinatown and other districts. Richard Wilson, Welles' longtime Mercury Theatre associate, and William Castle are associate producers on the film. "Lady" spent a week at the Columbia Ranch, shooting exteriors under the direction of William Clemens.

Lee Bennett, whose father is William Crespinel, Cinecolor president, was added to "Twain Sombreros," Harry Joe Brown production for Columbia release. The film, incidentally, is in Cinecolor. Vernon Cansino, younger brother of Rita Hayworth, was one of the last additions to "Last of the Redmen." Columbia picked up actress Leslie Brooks' option.

Paramount Going Strong

Paramount is another studio that has been fortunate in evading trouble in the strike. The studio's action team, Pine-Thomas, completed its first Cinecolor effort, "Adventure Island," battling a hot spell on its Sunland location. Last of the shooting was shifted so the cast and crew could work in water sequences, with stars Rhonda Fleming, Rory Calhoun and Paul Kelly swimming in a lake for color scenes.

Additions to cast of "Golden Earrings" included Georgia Backus, who plays the wife of an anti-Nazi conspiring against the Germans; and Ivan Triesault, enacting a Gestapo chief in the Ray Milland-Marlene Dietrich starrer.

Publicity Dept. Moves

The PRC Studio publicity department, under direction of Studio Publicity Director Robert Goodfried, has moved to the new PRC executive office at 6066 Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood.

Monogram Releasing 4

Four Monogram pictures have been set for October release. They are "Gentleman Joe Palooka," "Dangerous Money," "Wife Wanted" and "Beauty and the Bandit."

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

Sing While You Dance

Columbia Musical 72 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Slow-moving, mediocre musical handicapped by an implausible story.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Lower half of dual bills.

Cast: Ellen Drew, Robert Stanton, Andrew Tombes, Edwin Cooper, Robert Stevens, Ethel Griffies, Amanda Lane, Eddy Waller, Paul Burns, Eddie Parks, Bert Roach. Credits: Producer, Leon Barsha. Director, D. Ross Lederman. Screenplay, Robert Stephen Brode. Suggested by story by Lorraine Edwards. Photography, Allen Siegler.

Plot: Two young people, song pluggers, are searching an isolated hamlet for an unknown songwriter. They discover he was a millionaire, now dead, and they land in jail for poking among the effects in his mansion. When his widow learns of this, she helps them out of jail so they can publish her husband's songs.

Comment: When all the faults of this musical are added together they all reflect back to the entirely inadequate story, which is sad in more ways than one. Everybody and everything in the film are handicapped by the story frame. Because of this the players seem wooden because of the incredible situations thrust upon them. Ellen Drew, making a screen comeback, doesn't screen too well and Robert Stanton makes one feel his collar is too stiff for him. Best bit is offered by oldtime comic, Bert Roach, cast as a small town songwriter. Photography is hazy at times and direction is somewhat slow—but, then again, the poor script might be the cause. It is merely something to sit through—and not too easily—waiting for the main attraction.

My Darling Clementine

20th-Fox Western Drama 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) One of the finest westerns produced in many a moon. (One of the best of any type, for that matter). Should thoroughly entertain all types of audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Top marquee names coupled with energetic selling of the film as a "big" picture should bring this to much better than average business everywhere.

Cast: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell, Victor Mature, Walter Brennan, Tim Holt, Cathy Downs, Ward Bond, Alan Mowbray, John Ireland, Roy Roberts, Jane Darwell, Grant Withers, J. Farrell MacDonald, Russell Simpson, Don Garner, Francis Ford, Ben Hall, Arthur Walsh, Ronald J. Pennick, Louis Mercier, Mickey Simpson, Fred Libby. Credits: Directed by John Ford. Produced by Sam Engel. Screenplay by Sam Engel and Winston Miller. Based on a story by Sam Hellman from a book by Stuart N. Lake. Music, Alfred Newman. Director of photography, Joe MacDonald.

Plot: Headed toward California with their herd to establish a cattle ranch, the four Earp brothers, led by famed frontier marshal Wyatt Earp (Henry Fonda) make camp near Tombstone, Arizona. The youngest brother is killed and the cattle rustled during the absence of the three older brothers in town. Earp accepts a job as marshal of Tombstone, with his remaining two brothers as deputies. In a feud with the Clanton family, headed by renegade Walter Brennan, Virgil Earp (Tim Holt) is killed and dancer Linda Darnell fatally wounded. Doc Holliday (Victor Mature) performs an unsuccessful operation on the girl and when she dies, joins with the two Earps, (Fonda and Ward Bond) in a gun battle with the Clantons in which they wipe out the entire family. As they leave Tombstone, Wyatt Earp promises to return, at the behest of school teacher Cathy Downs.

Comment: A few westerns, such as "Stagecoach" remain in the minds of persons who have seen them, as classics. And "My Darling Clementine" may well be placed in that category. It is one of the finest combinations of story, production, directing and acting to be seen on the screen in many a moon. Top-notch photography of gorgeous location scenery may be added to the film's attributes. With all due credit to the factors that make this an outstanding picture, it might well have been just another western without the painstaking directorial chore of John Ford and the acting ability of Henry Fonda, Walter Brennan and Victor Mature. And not to make a pun, Victor has matured much in acting stature since his return from Uncle Sam's service. There is everything to be praised in "My Darling Clementine" except, perhaps, the inept title. Nevertheless, this is an outstanding film, certain to do much better than average business everywhere. It can't miss.

Traffic in Crime

Republic Drama 54 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Should satisfy the action fans, who are not too discerning in their screen fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will fare best as a secondary feature in action-type theatres.

Cast: Kane Richmond, Adele Mara, Anne Nagel, Wilton Graff, Roy Barcroft, Arthur Loft, Wade Crosby, Dick Curtis, Harry Cheshire. Credits: Producer, Donald H. Brown. Director, Lesley Selander. Screenplay, David Lang. Original story, Leslie Turner White. Photography, Bud Thackerey.

Plot: A newsman is hired by the Chief of Police to clean up the crime elements in town. Incognito, he begins to create suspicion and strife between the two crooked factions until they all but kill themselves off. The truth is published, the town is redeemed, and the scribe marries the editor's pretty daughter.

Comment: Although weak in its construction, this gangster-type melodrama should find satisfied audiences in those situations where such films are exhibited. The script is spotty, with dramatic punches telegraphed well ahead, and there are other inconsistencies; but the so-called "action fans" don't mind so long as there's action. Kane Richmond is competent in the lead, while Adele Mara displays ample physical charms as the moll. The film's pace might have been accelerated, but this is not too objectionable considering the film's short running time.

Dangerous Money

Monogram Mystery 66 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Though not as fast-moving as its predecessors, this latest Charlie Chan picture should entertain those who follow the series.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do the same business as others in the series.

Cast: Sidney Toler, Gloria Warren, Victor Sen Young, Rick Vallin, Joseph Crehan, Willie Best, John Harmon, Bruce Edwards, Dick Elliott, Joe Allen, Amira Moustafa, Tristam Coffin, Alan Douglas, Selmer Jackson, Dudley Dickerson, Rita Punay, Flaine Lange, Emmett Vogan, Leslie Dennison. Credits: Produced by James S. Burkett. Directed by Terry Morse. Based on the character created by Earl Derr Biggers. Photography, William Sickner.

Plot: A Treasury Department agent enlists the aid of Charlie Chan to solve a mystery of stolen currency and art works. On board a ship bound for Samoa, the agent is murdered. The detective's son and his servant fingerprint all the suspects and come to the conclusion that two missionaries are leaders of the gang.

Comment: In spite of its obvious weaknesses, "Dangerous Money" will probably garner the same business at the box-office as any previous Charlie Chan offering, for it has the suspense and murders, plus the usual by-play betwen Chan's son and his colored chauffeur. Entire locale of the story takes place aboard a ship, which naturally confines the action and makes the picture a little slower than most, but this shouldn't hinder its acceptance. Smooth and able in a role that seems to have become second nature to him, Sidney Toler is again the brilliant Chinese sleuth, while in supporting roles satisfactory portrayals are turned in by Gloria Warren, Victor Sen Young, Willie Best and Bruce Edwards. Picture was directed by Terry Morse and produced by James Burkett.

Gas House Kids

PRC Drama 68 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) With a new slant on the various "kid gang" series, this picture is genuinely entertaining. If the rest in the probable series are as good as this, PRC's clients should be delighted.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Title may be either a blessing or a curse. As it is now, the film is suitable as a supporting feature.

Cast: Robert Lowery, Billy Halop, Teala Loring, Carl Switzer, David Reed, Rex Downing, Rocco Lanzo, Hope Landin, Ralph Dunn, Paul Bryar, Nannette Vallon, Charles Wilson. Credits: Screenplay by Elsie and George Bricker and Raymond L. Schrock. Original story by Elsie and George Bricker. Produced by Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Sam Newfield. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh.

Plot: Ex-policeman and crippled war veteran Robert Lowery returns to his home in Manhattan's lower East side. Embittered by his helplessness he refuses to marry his sweetheart, Teala Loring, until they can be established on a chicken farm, where his disability will not affect his ability to make a living. Billy Halop and David Reed, Teala's brother, conspire to raise enough money for a down payment on a farm. Billy finds a satchel full of money thrown out a window by a rent collector as he is about to be killed by gangsters. Billy is captured by the murderers, gets away, leads police to their capture and with the reward money loans Lowery enough to buy the farm, with the boys going to work there as his assistants.

Comment: This a surprisingly interesting and entertaining film, considering that apparently there never was any intention of making it anything more than just another program picture. The team of producer Neufeld, director Newfield and photographer Greenhalgh have done a fine, convincing, light treatment of an unimportant but excellently done screenplay by Elsie and George Bricker and Ray Schrock. Although this has many of the basic ideas associated in films about youngsters brought up on the lower East side of New York, it has a new slant: that the youngsters concerned are basically sound and honest and the victims of their environment in whatever deviltry they may become involved. That their deviltry is more mischievous than vicious is another important slant from a sociological aspect. Whatever hidden "message" may have been intended by the writers is not permitted to affect the story, however. The dialog of the supposedly tough youngsters is remarkable for the absence of "dese, dose and dem." Rather, the kids speak in the careless manner natural with boys of their environment. There is a nice bit of entertainment contained in "Gas House Kids" that might be carefully nurtured into box-office value by enterprising showmen.

Vacation in Reno

RKO Radio Comedy 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) What should have been a comedy turns out to be just another program picture which less discriminating audiences may find entertaining.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Where Jack Haley has a following, this should attract, but it needs the support of a stronger feature.

Cast: Jack Haley, Anne Jeffreys, Wally Brown, Iris Adrian, Morgan Conway, Alan Carney, Myrna Dell, Matt McHugh, Claire Carleton, Jason Robards, Matt Willis. Credits: Produced and directed by Leslie Goodwins. Executive Producer, Sid Rogell. Screenplay by Charles E. Roberts and Arthur Ross. Based on a story by Charles Kerr. Photography, George E. Diskant.

Plot: After Haley quarrels with his wife and she goes back to her mother, he goes to Reno on vacation. There he gets mixed up with a bank robbery, another woman, and a deputy sheriff who causes him no end of trouble. He not only catches the bandits and reaps a reward but also gets his wife back.

Comment: What was meant to be a comedy, with Jack Haley in the leading role, in this instance misses the point and turns out to be just another picture. The fault lies with the story: a time-worn one with so many oft-repeated gags and situations that there is scarcely a laugh left in them. Such comedy cliches as the jealous husband, the man running around without his pants, and the mother-in-law complaint, have been hopefully combined to entertain the average audience, but to little avail. However, Haley is an experienced trouper and he does well with his share of the proceedings. It is no fault of his, and for that matter, no fault of any of the players that the comedy is lacking. They all do the best they can with their assignments. Less discriminating audiences will accept the film in their stride, and Jack Haley's name should attract where he has a following. However, in most spots, "Vacation in Reno" will need the support of a stronger feature.

A Lady Surrenders

Universal Drama 113 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An English picture that might have been considerably entertaining with less footage and dialog. But it does have a romance, good performances and familiar background music.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Best suited for the second half of a dual bill in most communities. May attract those moviegoers who are discriminating in their choice of good dramatic fare, regardless of box-office names.

Cast: Margaret Lockwood, Stewart Granger, Patricia Roc, Tom Walls, Reginald Purdell, Moira Lister, Dorothy Bramhall, Vincent Holman, Joan Rees, Walter Hudd, Bryan Herbert, A. E. Matthews, Josephine Middleton, Lawrence Hanray, Beatrice Varley. Credits: Directed by Leslie Arliss. Screenplay by Leslie Arliss and Doreen Montgomery. From a short story by J. W. Drawball. Additional Dialog by Rodney Ackland. Photography, Bernard Knowles. Produced by Harold Huth.

Plot: A young pianist learns that she hasn't long to live because of a bad heart, so she decides to take a holiday. At the Inn where she stops she meets a young man with whom she falls in love. He in turn is going blind but neither tells the other of their doom. Numerous complications arise before they decide to marry regardless of their time.

Comment: By noting the running time of this picture, one can immediately see that unless a film has exceptional merit, the time element can be a hindrance to its reception. And this is only too true with this English production, for it is much too long and too talky to be readily accepted by the average moviegoer. A little editing, though, to quicken the tempo and shorten the running time, might aid it for it does have the romance that usually appeals to the feminine contingent and excellent performances for those who enjoy good dramatic fare. British players that are beginning to become more familiar to most patrons have the leading roles: Margaret Lockwood, Stewart Granger and Patricia Roc. Miss Roc, especially, is gaining recogntion, for she made her American debut in the Universal picture "Canyon Passage." In one of the top supporting roles Tom Walls attracts enough attention to have the public look for him in future English productions.

Fool's Gold

United Artists Western 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Extremely well produced western that should please Hopalong Cassidy's legion of fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should rake in extra dollars for the average exhibitor who uses action product.

Cast: William Boyd, Andy Clyde, Rand Brooks, Robert Emmett Keane, Jane Randolph, Stephen Barclay, Harry Cording, Earle Hodgins, Bob Bentley, William "Wee Willie" Davis, Fred "Snowflake" Toones. Credits: Producer, Lewis J. Rachmil. Director, George Archainbaud. Original story and screenplay by Doris Schroeder. Based on characters created by Clarence E. Mulford. Photography, Mack Stengler.

Plot: Hopalong Cassidy and his two pals help regenerate the son of an army officer. The son has unfortunately been lured into a circle of bad men and is hiding out with them, evading a courtmartial. Posing as a cattleman, Hoppie heads for the forbidden territory and his cohorts join him later, in different guises. Before Hoppie and the boys uncover the gangleader and his men, Hoppie and his sidekicks are almost killed. However, all ends well with the officer's son saved from the gang's clutches, the desperadoes' leader slain by his own machinations and the gang incarcerated for its attempts to defraud the government.

Comment: From a production standpoint, it is quite evident that the Hopalong Cassidys are well made. In this new release, producer Lewis J. Rachmil doesn't spare the horses, literally and figuratively, thus providing action fans with a smooth-as-silk outdoor film. George Archainbaud's direction keeps the story moving at a fast clip and the cast is better than average for such offerings. Andy Clyde registers strongly as the comic, and of course Bill Boyd himself is letter-perfect as the renowned Cassidy. Like Old Man River the Hopalongs keep rolling along—and, as this offering shows, with good reason.

Park Avenue to Show Films of All Nations

A policy of the best in foreign films as well as domestic releases, and some of the innovations that will mark the house as a distinctive showplace were announced for the new Park Avenue Theatre this week by Walter Reade, owner. The Park Avenue is the first theatre to sell seats on a yearly subscription basis, thus eliminating the necessity of patrons waiting in line to be seated.

Elaborating on the policy of the best in both foreign and domestic films, Reade said the Park Avenue would be referred to as "The Theatre of All Nations" and emphasized that "all pictures shown will be of acclaimed merit, being previously tested by critics and other audiences." He added that in order to preserve the "Theatre of all Nations" setting, flags of all countries whose pictures will be shown will be suspended from the Park Avenue side of the four-story building and will be visible for many blocks in the vicinity. The flags will be those of England, France, Russia, Mexico, Holland, Sweden, Czechoslovakia and Italy.

One of the innovations of the new showplace will be the presence of a beautician in the ladies' lounge at all times. Now being trained in the art of makeup by Charles of the Ritz, the beautician will be able to offer make-up suggestions to patrons and supply them with Charles of the Ritz cosmetics in individually wrapped packages at no cost to women who request them. Motif of the beauty lounge will be pink with dusty rose carpeting and pink leatherette walls. There will be two Charles of the Ritz recessed display cases, as well as glass shelf dressing tables.

A series of bi-weekly art exhibitions, including rare art treasures, paintings, water colors, etc., is also planned for the Park Avenue.

Up to press time the new sister of five-year-old Patricia Ann Lewis had not been named—"Chick' and his family still mulling a formidable list in search of an equivalent in feminine terms of the name chosen in advance of the event.

SHORT Subject REVIEWS

Fair and Warmer (Fast)

WB (2708) Technicolor Cartoon 7 mins.

This is a film counterpart of the technique made famous by "The House That Jack Built" and other stories of cumulative style. There is an apple, a worm goes for the apple a bird goes for the worm, a cat goes for the bird, a dog goes for the cat, a dog-catcher goes for the dog. This procession then puts on one grand, chase back and forth, only to be routed by a skunk. The worm gets his apple—it is the only apartment left in town. This is fast and furious with expert animation and many good comedy touches. You can't go wrong.

Racketeer Rabbit (Excellent)

WB (2723) Bugs Bunny 7 mins.

Bugs Bunny, asleep in an abandoned house, is disturbed by two gangsters—Ed Robinson and Peter Lorre in Technicolored ink. They divide the swag, with Bugs getting more than his share. Lorre takes him for a ride, but only Bugs comes back. The rabbit then hoodwinks Robinson into believing the police have arrived and hides him in a trunk. Then Robinson gets the beating of his life as Bugs drags the trunk up and down stairs, finally handing Ed a bomb. Robinson ends by running out of the house yelling for the police. You know Bugs, and he's just as sassy as ever. They can all take this one.

Hobo Hound (Interesting)

Univ. (1373) Person Oddity 8 mins.

Butch, a St. Bernard, is shown as the true hobo he is. The enormous dog visits everyone in the town of Glen Cove from time to time, parks himself in the middle of any thoroughfare and has been adopted as the town's pet. In Lindsboro, Kansas, the homemade automobile of Henry Lungstrom is shown with the camera shifting to Denver where Mrs. Bernice Hathaway shows her drawings of Coats of Arms, on which she is an authority. Then in San Antonio four-year-old Connie Ann Gallagher stands nonchalantly against a board while her mother throws knives into the board around her.

Operation Holiday (Very Good)

Univ. (1352) Variety View 10 mins.

This shows Yank servicemen on leave from duty in European occupation zones who have been invited by the Swiss Government to see some of Switzerland's most beautiful sights. The film shows rural Switzerland as well as Berne, Zurich, St. Moritz and Geneva. Glaciers, waterfalls and the Alpine Peaks are others of the famous views afforded the Yank tourists and audiences.

Rural Rhapsody (Interesting)

Univ. (1375) Person Oddity 7 min.

Paul Whiteman is seen on his 100-acre Walking Horse Farm which the musician manages and makes pay dividends. The camera shifts to an old sourdough who still prospects successfully for gold in small quantities and then shows the Bachant triplets in New York who now serve as photographers' models. In Texas Universal shows the pet steer of Mrs. Noble Blakely who puts the animal through some of his tricks.

Noisy Neighbors (Noisy)

RKO (63,406) Edgar Kennedy 17 mins.

Edgar's brother-in-law has mulcted him out of his old car with the plea that he can get more for it than by turning it in on a new car. Then the family starts fixing it up—that's where the noise comes in. Neighbor Dick Wessel can not sleep and in revenge busts up things a bit. When they can't get the horn to stop blowing, he wrecks the car. Just then the new one arrives and its horn, too, goes off. Things look black for a minute, but Edgar backs down in the traffic, and it does seem to be much safer. Run-of-the-mill Kennedy, so you know what use you can make of it.

White House (Historic)

RKO (63,112) This Is America 19 mins.

Here, recorded on film, is a permanent impression of the White House as it is during the Truman administration—an historic subject that can be used in time to come for an impression of 1946. The documentary, arranged by George Dorsey, Washington bureau head for Pathe and ex-president of the White House Press Photographers Association, takes the audience through the various rooms of the famous residence of the President from the entrance hall even into the private bedroom of visiting dignitaries. The shots are impressive and make up a fine and dignified subject for any program in any good theatre.

Golden Slippers (Excellent)

Para. (FF5-6) Musical Parade 17 mins.

This Technicolor featurette, done with A-1 production values, has an effective little story about a couple facing loss of their night club jobs because the boss is being forced out. The boss is killed (off-stage) but leaves a will that clears everything up and the two can get married. The star of this number is Mary Edwards, who plays the girl singer with good looks and real personality. Alfred Ryder is a good foil and Mikhail Rasumny does the sacrificial owner to fine effect. Miss Edwards sings several numbers nicely in a straight, clear voice, and she wears some gowns that will have the girls very envious indeed.

A Bit of Blarney (Good)

Univ. (2381) Sing and Be Happy 11 mins.

The singers, four tenors dressed as cops in a police station, deliver The Same Old Shillelagh, Too-ra-loo-ra-loo and I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen in the manner now familiar to listeners to Fred Waring's Glee Club on the air. The boys do a nice job, but the comedy surrounding the story is not too good. The audience is asked to join in on the singing, with superimposed verses egging them on. Good entertainment.

Mr. Chimp to the Rescue (Amusing)

Univ. (1353) Variety View 10 mins.

The ability of Shorty, who spends the afternoon at the fire house, to jump into landing nets and walk wire stands him in good stead when he goes out with the fire fighters. His comedy is good all the way through. Good for any program.

Monkey Businessmen (So-So)

Columbia (7407) 3 Stooges 18 mins.

The zany trio are in the electrical repair business and, staggering under the heavy load, select a fake sanitarium with a quack doctor as its head, for a rest cure. They discover the fakery, pose as surgeons themselves, and with the usual melee accidentally cure a legitimate patient who pays them. They get away themselves—too bad.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

BACKLASH (Fox) Mystery. Principals: Richard Travis, Jean Rogers, Larry Blake. Director, Eugene Forde. Plot: A murdered man is identified as a criminal attorney, and his wife and partner are suspected of the killing, among several others. Two police detectives go on the trail of the killer and in a surprise move at a mountain cabin, they find the attorney, very much alive. He isn't alive long though, for he is killed by the police in a gun battle in the darkened room, and the case is solved.

HONEYMOON (RKO) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Shirley Temple, Guy Madison, Franchot Tone. Director, William Keighley. Plot: An American girl goes to Mexico to marry a soldier with a three-day pass. Complications arise in the form of housing shortage, official red tape, etc., but the handsome assistant in the American Consulate takes over their problems and almost loses his lovely Mexican fiancee in the hectic process of dealing with the unpredictable youngsters. All ends happily with an elaborate wedding.

CIGARETTE GIRL (Col.) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Leslie Brooks, Jimmy Lloyd, Joan Barton. Director, Gunther Fritsch. Plot: A cigarette girl in a night club is in love with an oil field worker in South America. But each has lied to the other—she has posed in her letters as a famous singer, while he has referred to himself as the president of the oil company. When he returns home, all sorts of complications arise, with each of them trying to keep up the pretense. In the end, they explain things to each other and are married.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This is a new service feature which will be expanded. Its purpose is to supply theatremen with the classifications as to audience suitability, by age groups, of national reviewing committees which are independent of the industry. This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that in advertising, as well as in response to requests of local groups or individual parents, the theatreman may state the facts about the suitability of a given feature for showing to children as determined not by himself or any industry agency but by organizations maintained for the service of the public.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Strange Voyage	Family	.....	Adults	.....
Gallant Bess	Family	12-14	General Patronage	.....
The Bachelor's Daughter	Family	.....	Adults	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Foundid in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

America finds a new, easy way to save

OUT of the war has come one blessing—a lesson in thrift for millions of those who never before had learned to save.

Enrolled under the Payroll Savings Plan in thousands of factories, offices, and stores, over 27 million American wage earners were purchasing "E" Bonds alone at the rate of about 6 billion dollars worth a year by the time V-J Day arrived.

With War Bond Savings automatically deducted from their wages every week, thrift was "painless" to these wage earners. At the end of the war, many who never before had bank accounts could scarcely believe the savings they held.

The moral was plain to most. Here was a new, easy way to save; one as well suited to the future as to the past. Result: Today, millions of Americans are continuing to buy, through their Payroll Savings Plan, not War Bonds, but their peacetime equivalent—U. S. Savings Bonds.

From war to peace! War Bonds are now known as U. S. Savings Bonds, bring the same high return—$25 for every $18.75 at maturity.

Out of pay—into nest eggs! A wage earner can choose his own figure, have it deducted regularly from earnings under Payroll Savings Plan.

New homes to own! Thousands of new homes, like this, will be partially paid for through Bonds wisely accumulated during the next five to ten years.

Keeping cost of living in check! Buying only needed plentiful goods and saving the money which would bid up prices of scarce goods keeps your cost of living from rising. Save automatically—regularly.

Weekly Savings	SAVINGS AND INTEREST ACCUMULATED

Just a Football

As things stand at the moment the film industry is just one badly-battered football being booted about in what seems a reckless game for a sort of winner-take-all stakes.

Because of the rancor between large segments of the distributor and exhibitor groups, the gridiron was in perfect condition for just such a game.

For a while we thought that the Department of Justice was going to act as a referee, with all the others feeling a sort of restraint and remaining conscious of the fact that a game with certain rules was being played and that the regulations should be observed. Now, it looks as though everybody and his grandpop is in there mixing it up as the industry gets a bruising and battering such as it has never had in a long history of plenty of rough and tumble at its expense.

Months have elapsed since the decision in the anti-trust case, and here, on the eve of hearings set by the Court for a final decree to be written (per the Court's order), there is less—if that's possible—agreement between the industry elements vitally concerned than existed even before the trial started.

If one were to try to evaluate the score as it stands now, the tally might read something like this: Department of Justice, 28 points; Distributor Companies, 14 points; Exhibition Branch, zero.

This free-kicking, free-for-all rhubarb could be funny, were the consequences not so terribly serious to a whole industry, which stands to suffer injuries that could handicap it for years to come.

We wonder if those valiant "defenders of the exhibitors" who did their best to encourage outside regulation of the industry "to protest" the dues-paying members of their organizations are now proud of the situation they sought to bring about.

Field Day for Oldies

Pick up any newspaper and look over the theatre advertisements and you'll probably be surprised at the high percentage of re-issues being offered as attractions at local movie houses.

The guy who said that one man's cake is another man's poison did not have movies in mind, but the phrase certainly fits. What may not be so good for the major distributors is turning out to be mighty fine for the re-issue exchanges because they are doing a terrific business right now and should continue to do so until the entire product situation is straightened out—court-wise, distributor-wise and, especially, exhibitor-wise.

We only hope the cash customers are not going to rebel over having so many of the oldies forced upon them, the good with the bad and the entertaining with the clucks. It stands to reason that an awful lot of turkeys are going to be pushed along with the good ones and the less scrupulous exchanges may be quite willing to talk some exhibitors into playing re-issues that might better be forgotten.

Best proof of the value of this lucrative market is the fact that practically all the major distributors are making a concentrated effort to sell the re-issues in a reach for some of the rental money which is out begging for product to round out a week's bookings. Several of the bigger companies are pushing the oldies as strong or stronger than their new product of which there is not an abundant supply now available.

There is, definitely, a grave danger to the flooding of picture screens with this form of entertainment and that danger has nothing to do with the value and quality of the occasional re-issue which many theatres have found profitable and satisfactory to play. The point is: will it drive large numbers of patrons to some other form of entertainment or keep them at home on some nights when they should be at the movie theatre?

The entire subject has been emphasized by the almost unlimited number of major re-issues now available and, as stated before, the tremendous number of them being exhibited in theatres all over the country. It is all right to talk about a "new" audience having grown up for those oldies, but it is common, horse-sense that a greater majority of the moviegoers are of the age when they can well recall having seen that picture before.

Looks to us like the goose is getting a workout that could exhaust its golden-egg-laying powers.

No Peace

The Hollywood strike situation has not improved. Street fights are still breaking out wherever the pickets gang up and, in the meantime, the AFL keeps fiddling while the industry burns.

We still think the best solution is to shut down the studios until the union factions settle the dispute among themselves. This would probably be done a lot sooner than anyone imagines because thirty thousand non-participating employes whose rights now are being utterly ignored, might make themselves understood as to how they feel about the whole thing.

Drastic Court Order Limits Chicago Runs, Bans Clearance

Jackson Park Defense to Appeal Restriction of Loop Runs to 2 Week Maximum

In a revolutionary injunction which totally overthrows Chicago's present release system, Federal Judge Michael Igoe, Wednesday, drastically limited the length of Chicago's downtown or loop first runs to two weeks. The maximum length of first subsequent runs was set at one week and clearance or dead time between any run was abolished.

Grants 30 Day Suspension

Judge Igoe later suspended the date his injunction would take effect for 30 days in order to allow defendant attorneys to consult with the New York home offices on the nature of an appeal.

The Judge's order resulted from an appeal for injunction relief filed by the Jackson Park Theatre as a result of its United States Supreme Court Victory over the defendants in its anti-trust suit—Paramount, RKO, Vitagraph, Loew's (MGM), 20th Century Fox, Balaban & Katz and Warner Theatres.

Double features, insofar as they might interfere with the Jackson Park Theatre's obtaining enough films for its program, are forbidden to the defendant exhibitors.

The injunction further restrains arbitrary clearance, conditioning, and maintenance of minimum admission prices.

Day and Date

Insofar as the major subjects of the injunction are concerned, Judge Igoe closely followed the suggestions set forth by Jackson Park Attorney McConnell. He did not however order B&K to divest itself of the Maryland Theatre or Warners to divest themselves of the Jeffrey.

It granted the Jackson Park Theatre, according to Attorney Thomas McConnell day and date bookings with the Warner Bros. Jeffrey in the same zone and gave Jackson Park one week's run ahead of the Balaban & Katz Maryland, also in the same zone, provided the Jackson Park pays a reasonably higher film rental.

Jackson Park Theatre Attorney Thomas McConnell told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW Wednesday night that the immediate effect of the injunction should "increase the flow of pictures through all of the runs."

"The loop houses," he continued, "were blocking off the market with their extended runs and there was a film famine here," he declared, adding that the present set-up might also open loop houses to independent producers who had not been able to book them due to the extended run policy.

The Jackson Park Theatre case has already proved costly to its defendants. Filed by the theatre's owners (Florence Bigelow, Marion B. Koerber, John E. Bloom and William Bloom) in 1942, the original petition stated that the Jackson Park had lost $125,692 in a five-year period from 1938 to 1942.

Claimed Conspiracy

The petition claimed the loss had been caused by the actions of the distributor defendants in favor of the Maryland and that this difficulty in getting product had been increased when the Maryland and the Jeffrey went dual.

The federal jury in Chicago returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, with damages for $120,000 whereupon Judge Igoe, under the punitive provisions of the Sherman-Clayton act, tripled the damages to $360,000. The defendants appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which reversed Judge Igoe.

The plaintiffs carried the case to the United States Supreme Court which in the latter part of April, 1946, upheld Judge Igoe's ruling by a 7-1 ruling (Justice Jackson not voting, Justice Frankfurter dissenting.) The distributors paid the damages.

Jackson Park Theatre then went into court for injunction relief against the practices which had been ruled against by the court and filed an additional $600,000 for damages incurred from the time the suit had been filed to the present. McConnell said he would ask Judge Igoe shortly to set the damage hearing on his calendar.

Says Theatre Video Waits for Improvement

Practical theatre television must await further engineering development and basic research, James D. McLean, General Electric electronics department executive told the Television Broadcasters Association at its annual conference in the Waldorf-Astoria at New York last week.

The ultimate goal, McLean said, were television pictures as large and as brilliant as those now obtained in actual theatre film projection. To date television pictures 18x24 feet, with good definition, have been obtained in the laboratory, he told the conference.

Monogram Net Up 129.76%

Net profit for Monogram for the fiscal year ending June 29, 1946, after deducting taxes was $379,474, an increase of 129.76 per cent over the net for the previous year of $165,161. The common stock has been increased from 500,000 shares to 721,118¾ shares by conversion of the preferred.

E. M. Loew Joins Allied

The E. M. Loew circuit of 40 houses this week joined the Independent Exhibitors Association, a unit of national Allied.

Hollywood Hopes Strike Arbitration in Sight

Hollywood hoped this week that its expensive jurisdictional strike, caused by a disagreement between the Conference of Studio Unions United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, might be settled by arbitration.

The hope, based largely on reports from Chicago where the American Federation of Labor, to which both unions belong, was in convention this week, came as an unexpected shift in the labor front successfully slowed down most production and almost stopped all color processing. This was a refusal of the processing technicians, members of Local 683, IATSE, to cross CSU picket lines despite orders from their national body to do so. The IATSE national officers took over the union "emergency" powers and were scheduled to try its officers for their revolt against the parent body's orders.

The action of some 1,500 processing technicians, who develop and print films, in refusing to cross picket lines forced some studios to

His first association with the Paramont Theatre was as a temporary doorman—a bit of the practical experience phase of his course in the Managers' School. That was in 1926. A year later Weitman was appointed manager of the Rialto Theatre, and two years after that he took over as head man at the Brooklyn Paramount, which recently again came under his supervision. Rush to Get Under Wire for Decree Hearings

Gov't Suggests Flat Rent Instead of Percentage As Solution to Auctioning

Legal decks were being cleared for action in New York this week as the statutory court's anti-trust suit hearings on the proposed decree were scheduled to start in the federal court house at Foley Square.

Brief totalling mountains of words were submitted to the court during the week with the Conference of Independent Exhibitors; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Radio Center, Inc., an individual exhibitor organization in Newark; the Society of Independent Motion Picture and Vanguard films, all seeking to become a friend of the court in the case.

Favors Divorce

The CIEA told the court that it favored divorce and was against auctioning but submitted a suggestion in part as to how auctions might be conducted if the court ordered them.

In its brief, the MPTOA told the court that it was the general impression in the industry that competitive bidding meant auction selling and asked the court not to restrict selling to any one method and above all not to consider auctioning at all.

The MPTOA brief stated that the practices which the court found unlawful could be restrained by injunction and the industry left free to progress toward trade practices through competition. It supported the government proposals to prevent overbuying and backlogging but asked the court to extend the time in which an exhibitor must book a picture after it is made available from 30 days, as suggested by the government, to 45 days. (Explanation was made that 30 days was too tight presented problems since four musicals might become available at the same time.)

Backs Some Run

The MPTOA brief also supported the Government proposals for "some run," but took issue with the Government on abandoning arbitration and asked that it be retained, using arbitrators "who possess active industry background and experience" and that the arbitration system should not be financed by the distributor defendants and that the "exhibitors be given a voice in the determination of the system."

The 30 exhibitor members of the Confederacy of Southern Association who seek to intervene in the suit filed a brief supporting their motion Wednesday and the American Theatres Association, which also seeks to intervene, was reported ready with its supporting brief. Intervention if granted, will place the intervenors in the position of defendants.

In the CIEA brief, filed on behalf of its membership which includes Allied units, by Allied General Counsel Abram Myers, the CIEA declares its opposition to auction selling terming it "an exercise of legislative power rather than judicial power" and asks the court

The Score To Date

Lawyers expected Thursday that the hearings on the various decree proposals in the federal statutory court might take the whole of next week, but were almost certain that the hearings on intervention and amicus curiae briefs would be cleared in a single day.

To date there are two petitions for intervention—those of the American Theatres Association and of 30 exhibitor members of the Confederacy of Southern Associations.

The amicus curiae briefs totaled five, consisting of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, which seeks to be exempted from the decree provisions on the grounds that they are not defendants; Vanguard Films, which seeks road showing with "Duel in the Sun" in mind; the Conference of Independent Exhibitors Association, suggesting divorce and a plan for auction selling which it opposes and asking that cross licensing be banned; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, fighting any exclusive method of competitive bidding, auctioning especially and supporting its "some run" suggestion, retention of arbitration; Radio Centre, lessee of the Mosque at Newark, N. J., supporting auction selling together with a ban on cross licensing.

Hearings for intervention and amicus curiae briefs are set for Oct. 21. Hearings for the Government and defendant decree proposal will start Oct. 22.

Vanguard Asks Court to Approve Roadshows, Cites 'Duel in the Sun'

David O. Selznick's Vanguard Films, Inc., Tuesday sought to appear in the anti-trust suit as a friend of the court in an effort to get permission to roadshow "Duel in the Sun," forthcoming Selznick picture which the court was told had cost to date over $5,500,000.

The Selznick action followed preliminary conversation with the Department of Justice in which the Department reportedly gave Vanguard no hope for a roadshow permit.

In its petition Vanguard claims that it stands to lose if the expensive "Duel" cannot be roadshowed, cites that pictures which have advanced the motion picture art from "The Birth of the Nations" through "Henry V" have all been roadshown, and claims that the present objections to road showing and price fixing favor the theatre owning Big 5, since under the court opinion they can play their own pictures in their own houses under whatever prices and conditions they please.

The Vanguard petition asks the court to return to the consent decree definitions of roadshowing ("A public exhibition of a motion picture in a limited number of theatres, in advance of its general release, at admission prices higher than those customarily charged in first-run theaters in the areas where they are located.") Such showings the Vanguard says were permitted under the consent decree and if additional clarification is required, it suggested following requirements: (1) the negative cost shall be one and a half times more than the average cost of a company's 'A' feature; (2) the roadshow admission must be at least one-third more than the theatre's usual admissions for 'A' pictures; (3) No producer shall roadshow more than two pictures within a 12-month period and there shall be no dualling on roadshows.

As an alternate plan Vanguard suggested: (1) to free the three minor defendants from roadshow restrictions; (2) to permit roadshowing any costly picture "the substantial expense of which was incurred before June 11, the date of the court's opinion." (This would allow "Duel in the Sun" to be roadshown.)

Decree Hearings Monday Mark New Step in 8-Year Old Anti-Trust Suit

Three federal judges and a corps of lawyers will face each other again Monday in federal statutory court at New York as the year-laden federal anti-trust suit against eight major motion picture distributors enters another chapter—a chapter which observers believe will be but a preliminary to others in the marble-walled halls of the United States Supreme Court.

On July 20, 1938, the Government, which had been prodding around the edges of the film industry seeking Sherman anti-trust act violations, filed suit in an effort to end allegedly monopolistic practices.

Five of the defendants—Paramount, RKO, Warner Bros., Loew's (MGM), 20th Century-Fox—who were immediately dubbed the Big 5. —after protracted litigation agreed with the government to revise their trade practices.

This agreement filed on Oct. 29, 1940, became a consent decree on Nov. 21, 1940.

The remaining three defendants—Columbia, Universal and United Artists, called the Little 3, refused to be part of the agreement.

The consenting five, under the terms of the decree approved by the court, abolished block booking in favor of selling in groups of five and provided against blind buying by setting up trade screenings at which exhibitors might see what they were going to try to buy.

After a trial period, the Government became convinced that the consent decree did not achieve what it was seeking and reopened the case over the protests of the defendants. This time the Government made a plea for divorce, claiming that only by separating distributor-exhibitors from their theatres, could competition be restored.

The case came to trial in January, 1946 and the court rendered an opinion in mid June, of not to put it into effect prior to an appeal against the court's decision.

If the court orders auction selling the brief states, the CIEA suggests that sealed bids be submitted by exhibitors within 10 days after a picture is offered, opened on the eleventh day and held afterward for inspection by bidders. The plan provides that distributors be directed to set national release days on all pictures and offer them in all territories "within a definite period thereafter" and that "no offer on the next succeeding run be made until a license has been granted on the immediate preceding run."

The brief supports the Government's position on a cross-licensing ban stating that "so long as the defendants retain their theatre chains and are permitted to cross license each other, no bidding system can possibly serve to restore competition.

"Any claim by the theatre owning defendants that they can not operate their theatres without cross licensing must be taken as an admission of (1) the magnitude of their distribution magnitude and (2) the feebleness of the competition offered by the independent first runs in metropolitan areas who rarely have more than one of the big five product and often have none."

The brief further suggests that flat rentals would be preferable to percentages under auctioning and in addition would end "forced partnerships with independent exhibitors resulting from the defendants' insistence upon percentage playing." The CIEA supported the Government's "some run" proposal.

Seeks Exemption

The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, which calls itself the Independents in its petition, seeks to enter the case as a friend of the court on the ground that the decree will have an effect on its members because the decree will "serve as a blueprint for the operation of the entire industry."

The Independents declared to the court that at the present time they took no stand on question of divorce or the dissolution of theatre chains but that they were concerned with the problems their members might face under the decree.

They seek principally to be exempted from the court opinion on auction selling, fixing of minimum prices with an exhibitor, and roadshowing, and claim the right to sell pictures as they see fit.

The Independents for whom the brief is filed are: Constance Bennett, Benedict Bogeaus, William Cagney, Charles Chaplin, Walt Disney, Edward A. Golden, Samuel Goldwyn, Sol Lesser, Jules Levey, Hal Roach, Nero Films, Mary Pickford, Rainbow Production, Charles R. Rogers, Story Production, Edward Small, Andrew Stone, Hunt Stromberg, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, California Picture Corporation.

Laboring its point that they will be affected by the decree, the Independents acknowledged in their brief that only the Big 5 and the Little 3 are parties, but add:

" . . . the opinion of the court foreshadows a decree designed to set up an industry-wide pattern which may draw into its web the independent producers. It needs no emphasis that the Independents are not parties to the case, are not affiliated with the parties in any way other than in the relationship of the producer and distributor, and were not and could not be found to be guilty of any of the practices which gave rise to the law suit and were condemned in sweeping terms by the court."

Distribution Limited

The petition asserts that the Independents must distribute through one or the other of the defendants to get the widest distribution.

"None of the members of petitioner (Independents) is a party to the instant suit. None of them exercises any actual or potential power over the motion picture market by ownership or leasing of theatres. None of them has been accused or found guilty of engaging in any unlawful trade practices such as have been condemned by the court in its opinion. . . .

"Since the defendants in the instant suit dominate the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in the United States, the court must deal with the functioning of the industry as a whole. The decree will necessarily serve as a blueprint for the operation of the industry. Independent producers, each and every one of whom must of economic necessity distribute through one of the defendants, will be affected by a decree having such scope, the strictures made applicable to the defendants by reason of their theatre holdings and horizontal trade practices are inapposite to independent producers.

"Because of the necessarily broad scope of the decree, the court by inadvertence or silence may cause irreparable injury to independent producers. Actually, the court's failure at this juncture affirmatively to protect the independent producers may well place them in even a worse competitive position vis-avis the defendants herein than they occupied prior to the institution of the present action."

The brief claims that as long as the Independents are innocent of any of the practices condemned by the court and are not attempting to restrain trade or foster monopoly, they should be free to handle their product as they see fit and "to do anything which the owner of a copyrighted article may normally and lawfully do." The court is asked to make this clear in the decree.

Right to Contract

The three points which the brief suggests the court clarify are:

(1) The right of the Independents "who have not been found by the court to have conspired among licensors and licensees," to be freed to contract for the exhibition of their films under such terms "including the maintenance of minimum admission prices as they may individually establish."

("This includes," the court is told, "the freedom on the part of Independents to exhibit their own films in any theatre which they may own or lease on terms agreeable to themselves. It includes the freedom on the part of Independents to license their own films for exhibition in theatres owned by any of the defendants on such terms as the Independents may individually establish by contracts with the defendants or their subsidiary theatre-owning entities—and here the Independents may, if they chose, disregard auction and insist upon minimum admission prices, clearances, etc., not necessarily in conformance with the restrict rules laid down for the defendants as licensors.")

(2) That right of Independents to dispose of their product upon such terms as they see fit "should not be abridged because, as a matter of economic necessity they are compelled to use the defendants as distributors—retaining to themselves, however," control over the terms in the exhibition contract. This point reiterates the statement that the Independents are compelled to use the defendants as distributors to get wide distribution. It argues further the provisions against the defendants, if applied against the Independents, would be discriminatory since the Big 5 defendants, who are theatre owners, may fix prices, clearance and the like on their own pictures playing their

B'klyn House Charged With Fraud

Suit charging fraud against the Argosy Amusement Company, the Apollo Theatre Corporation, the Momart Theatre, Inc., the Alda Theatre Corporation and George Stamatis, individually, as the major stockholders of the corporations, was filed in federal district court in New York Monday by Loew's Inc.

The suit charges that through false box-office returns from January, 1941 to the present, Loew's was induced to accept lower returns on both flat rental and percentage pictures. It also accuses the defendants with falsifying records and bribing checkers. Regular and punitive damages are asked as well as an injunction against destruction of records. Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin and Krim represented Loew's. Theatres involved are the Apollo, Momart and Lyric, all of Brooklyn.

Morals in Movies

Tribute to the movies as a method of moral education was made this week in Memphis by Juvenile Judge Camille Kelly, at a dinner given in her honor by United Artists.

"I have known of but one boy who could in any way blame his acts of juvenile delinquency upon a motion picture, an excellent record I'd say inasmuch as I have dealt with literally thousands of delinquents," Judge Kelly said.

"I feel," she continued, "that the motion pictures are a great instrument of education, particularly moral education."

Col. Cecil Vogel, manager of Loew's Palace, was toastmaster at the dinner.

THE first contribution of Leo Spitz and William Goetz to the Universal-International program should get the new combine off to a flying start at box-offices. Beyond living up to the highest standards of psychological mystery melodrama, it emerges as the screen's most penetrating study of twins and, beyond that, as a heart-breaking exposition of human jealousy. Thus, all sorts of audiences, attracted by the drawing power of Olivia de Havilland and Lew Ayres, undoubtedly will find this a good film to shudder through, to weep at and to discuss after seeing.

Nunnally Johnson's screenplay and production are almost impeccable, breathing simplicity and warmth at every turn into what might have been pretty academic material. And Robert Siodmak's talent for directing this sort of thing is imprinted throughout. His cameras focus most of the time upon the two principals, playing three roles, with occasional support from Thomas Mitchell, but they turn out an unlimited range of scenic and emotional variety.

Gov't Suggests Flat Rentals As Workable Auction System

own theatres. The Independents, it is pointed out, have no theatres.

(3) The right to roadshow. The court is asked to make a rule that Independents can roadshow pictures and fix the prices of the showing since "roadshows are peculiarly important in connection with the films of independent producers."

The individual corporation request to appear as a friend of the court and speak on behalf of cross-licensing bans and in favor of auction selling comes from the Radio Center, Inc., reported to be lessors on the 3,365-seat Mosque at Newark. The house had been leased to the Griffin foundation.

It seems to have opened some 20 years ago with motion pictures, closed during the depression, reopened as a picture house from 1934 to 1938 and then dropped films. Recently it played stage attractions and the understanding is that if Radio Center can get first run product, it will restore the Mosque to a picture policy.

Prefers Dismissal

The Government rejected both the decree proposals of the Little 3 and the Big 5, centered its fire on those of the Big 5 and apparently for the first time suggested the possibility of flat rentals instead of percentages in auctioning together with a hint that official minds might be considering the right to audit an exhibitors' books and the knowledge of profits as a deterrent to a fully competitive market.

The Government told the court that the Little 3's proposal for dismissal was preferable to those of the Big 5 since in the former event "the suit might be said to have failed as a means of applying the Sherman Act to the defendants, but it could not be said to immunize them from future applications of the act."

Of the Big 5 proposals, which would allow the price an exhibitor charged to be one of the factors in accepting a bid—a view which some sources believe might nullify the court's price fixing opinion—the Government said that such a decree would be a "structure of affirmative sanction" to "continue profitable exploitation of their (the Big 5's) superior competitive position and maintain the substance of the illegal practice which protects it."

Touching upon the subject of flat rentals and auction selling, the Government said:

". . . the defendants are obviously not disposed to adopt the one simple rule under which auction selling would be fairly conducted without elaborate administrative supervisions, that is the requirement that all bids be in terms of a flat sum. Under such a system there could be no question as to whose was the high bid and all other factors would be eliminated. If there were any doubt on the score or ability of exhibitors to pay, the print could be delivered C.O.D.

"Such a rule would mean depriving the distributors of the right to audit the exhibitor's books on a percentage picture and thus gain accurate knowledge of his business, which gives them a substantial advantage in bargaining with him as to future terms. Any distributor is of course interested in knowing the drawing power of his pictures and they have traditionally employed agencies such as Confidential Reports, Inc., jointly owned at the time of the trial by the five major defendants, to check theatre attendance. Reliance on such checking and the right to audit granted by their license agreements for assurance that they are receiving a fair film rental assures that such rental may not be assured by licensing competition. . . .

Audit Alternative

"The alternative to a flat rental system of auction selling is a public audit of the receipts of the winning bidder. While the decree does not so specify, we assume the defendants' rules would make available to the losing bidders inspection of the winning bid, but if it were stated in percentage terms, the loses would still not have sufficient information to know whether the bid was actually the high bid. Only when the sum had been considered and the final settlement made, would anyone know what the winner paid in film rental and to make this information available, his competitors would necessarily be informed as to precisely what his receipts were."

The other Big 5 proposals on bidding, pools, road showing, (SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, Oct. 12, p. 9) also met with Government criticism.

Says Right to Cancel Is Law in Australia

Right to cancel films bought under contract is provided for by law in many Australian states with the cancellation privilege running as high as 25 per cent of the total, Stanley Higginston, Australian managing director for Warners, in New York for business conferences, said this week.

"Shorts," Higginston declared, "in some instances are included in the total amount. If he (the exhibitor) buys 30 shorts and 10 features, he can reject the whole 10 features."

Higginston saw no possibility of a rapid expansion in Australia due to lack of equipment, especially for processing.

"If they turn out six pictures in 12 months, they will be doing well," he said.

Allied IOTA Meet Oct. 22

A committee meeting between the Independent Theatre Owners of America and national Allied to discuss the possible entry of the IOTA into the Allied fold has been set for the Hotel Astor in New York today (19). IOTA has membership largely in New York and New Jersey. Allied has no New York unit but has an important Jersey set up.

Universal Makes $3,206,354

Universal this week announced a consolidated net profit for 39 weeks ending Aug. 3, 1946 of $3,206,354 after all charges had been deducted, and compared with $2,955,829 for the same period in 1945.

Termers Like 'Em Varied

Even in the Ohio penitentiary they like their entertainment diversified. Here is a list of pictures the inmates voted they would like to see: "The Postman Always Rings Twice," "Flame of the Barbary Coast," "Smoky," "Mildred Pierce," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Night in Casablanca," "My Pal Trigger." "Two Sisters from Boston," "Cluny Brown," "Humoresque," "Shady Lady," "Two Guys from Milwaukee," "Easy to Wed," "The Time of Their Lives,' 'The Showoff."

Father Paul G. Corbett, Catholic chaplain of the prison, in whose chapel the films are shown, declared the preferences seem to be for light or moral entertainment. Two of the most popular features shown he said were "Junior Miss" and "The Keys of the Kingdom."

Decree Hearing New Round in 8-Year Case

the same year—the opinion which found that there had been practice in apparent violation of the Sherman Act but that the Government plea for divorce was too severe a remedy. The court ordered a new program for selling pictures, the auction selling phases of which soon became its most vigorously attacked feature.

To Write Decree

The court has yet to write a decree. All parties involved—government and defendants—have submitted their drafts for a decree (SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, Oct. 12, p. 9). Two other groups,—the American Theatre Association and 30 exhibitor members of the Confederacy of Southern Associations—seek to become party to the suit through intervention, and at least five more parties seek to be heard as a friend of the court.

The court will write its decree after hearing arguments in support of the proposals by the parties concerned.

SMPE Opens 5-Day Meet on Coast Monday

The role the motion picture played in the recent atomic bomb tests at Bikini will be discussed by Lt. Col. Richard J. Cunningham of the Army Air Forces as the first technical paper in a series to be read at the 60th semiannual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers which opens Monday in Hollywood for a five day run.

Other papers touching on theatre television, color processes, magnetic recording and 16-mm. problems, will be heard during the meeting. Convention Vice-President William C. Kunzman, said. Byron Price, vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers will speak at the opening day luncheon.

Virginia Morris in New Post

Virginia Morris, long associated with the industry and one of its foremost specialists in trade advertising, this week joined Paramount's advertising staff, which is headed by Stanley Shuford.

Miss Morris' previous association was with 20th-Fox, where she was in charge of trade paper advertising for two and a half years. Prior to that she handled trade and consumer advertising for United Artists for 11 years.

Hot Film Case On; Court Sentences First Offender

Investigation of the unauthorized use of 16-mm. versions of major companies features was reported continuing in several sections of the United States this week as Assistant United States Attorney Matthew F. Fagan told the federal district court that there were a pending number of other 16-mm. hot film cases in which sources of supply and possible thefts of government property might be involved.

Fagan made his statement to the court on the same day that Joseph Bitto was sentenced on his guilty plea to criminal infringement of copyright on 20th Century-Fox's "Song of Bernadette." He had been charged with renting a 16-mm. version of the film to an individual on or about March 21, 1946. The film itself was said to have been stolen from the Army Signal Corps plant in Astoria, N. Y., but Bitto was not charged with any part in the theft.

Bitto was sentenced to six months in prison and fined $250. The prison sentence was suspended pending good behavior during an 18-month probation period.

Independent Artists Sign 5-Year RKO Deal

A five year deal covering release of possibly ten pictures under a $17,000,000 budget was closed this week between RKO and Independent Artists, RKO President N. Peter Rathvon and Independent Artists President Frederick Brisson announced jointly.

N. Peter Rathvon

The deal adds another independent producing group to the RKO release roster which already includes Walt Disney, Samuel Goldwyn, Liberty Films, Rainbow Productions and Argosy.

"The newly formed Independent Artists Company," the announcement reads, compoesed of Rosalind Russell, Dudley Nichols, Frank W. Vicent and Frederick Brisson, has consummated a deal with RKO Radio Pictures for the release of the new company's product.

"Independent Artists will initially supply RKO Radio with four pictures, all of them to start before March of 1949. It is aimed to produce six other top-budget attractions within a five-year period after the start of the first picture. No definite starting date has been set for the first picture."

What, No Sherman Act?

Apparently bucked by the Japanese Toho and Shochiku circuits, which produce and distribute, as well as exhibit Motion Picture Export Association this week in New York announced that it had stopped distributing through them and would turn to independent circuits and exhibitors. MPEA General Irving Maas said that Toho and Shochiku had resisted MPEA's requests for additional outlets on the grounds that this would be at the Japanese film industry.

They're in the Money

Although only about one tenth as many producers as exhibitors filed excess profits tax returns in 1943, their combined net income was reported at $126,090,000 compared with a net of only $136,843,000 for the exhibitors, it was revealed in Washington. These figures, including returns from 277 producers and 2620 exhibitors, showed compiled receipts of $608,574 and $712,962.000 respectively—for a total of $1,321,536.

In addition, no-net-income returns from 244 producers and 764 exhibitors recorded another combined gross of $66,014,000.

While the producers with net income paid a higher income tax than the exhibs—$23,202,000 against $21,133.000, their total tax payments of $69,022,000 were considerably below the exhibitor total of $78,377,000. Both groups in combination showed a total of $127,495,000 subject to excess profits taxation.

Hollywood Hopes Strike Arbitration in Sight

almost stop production completely.

Up to now the IATSE had been replacing CSU carpenters and other strikes with their members, but the processors, highly skilled technicians, are almost irreplaceable and since all film is processed within a day after shooting to permit a study of rushes for retakes, lack of laboratory workers slowed production to a standstill. Producers were planning to rush film to New York and other places with printing and developing facilities by plane.

Police meanwhile, faced with armies of pickets, had resorted to mass arrests before the Columbia studios. Pickets here were charged either with contempt of an injunction limiting the number of pickets or with disturbing the peace. Those who allegedly violated the injunction were released under $500 bond; those who allegedly disturbed the peace were released on $100 bond.

Pass SAG Measure

In Chicago the American Federation of Labor convention passed the resolution of the Screen Actors Guild for arbitration machinery in jurisdictional disputes.

The Screen Actors Resolution, however, was amended so that such jurisdictional arbitration might be set up in industries only with the "sanction and agreement" of the unions working in the industries. While some observers believed this was an attempt by the AFL to avoid the issue, others pointed out that the AFL really has little authority over its national unions, being more in the nature of a confederacy and that each national union reserves powers to itself within its field. This, it was said is one of the basic difficulties in the Hollywood matter.

More encouraging, according to some observers, was the report that both the Carpenters and the IATSE were weary of the Hollywood situation and were said to be willing to talk it over.

The convention cheered Screen Actor Guild Speaker Edward Arnold when he told it arbitration was an American principle and must be carried out by the AFL "because we do not want government referees nor government regulation in our own family quarrels."

Screen Guild Stockholders Back 2-Way Expansion

Screen Guild's original stockholders Wednesday had decided to increase their original stock purchases by 50 per cent in order to finance an expanded production and distribution program.

John J. Jones

According to President John J. Jones, who arrived at the Hollywood Screen Guild home office after a meeting with the board of directors in Chicago, plans call for:

(1) A distribution program establishing four major sales districts immediately with a district manager in charge of each under supervision of General Sales Manager F. A. Bateman.

(2) A production program of 20 new pictures, nine of which have been recently completed by eight producing units who are turning out product exclusively for Screen Guild distribution. The new features will be in addition to the 12 Hopalong Cassidy reissues distributed each year.

Jones also announced that Distribution Vice-President Robert L. Lippert had been tended a five year contract and that the New York exchange would open Nov. 1. The Chicago meeting was attended by some 40 directors, stockholders and franchise holders.

Loew's Planning New Music Firm With Warren

Loew's Treasurer Charles C. Moskowitz this week was conferring in Hollywood with Song Writer Harry Warren over establishing a new music publishing company to be known as Harry Warren, Inc., which when set up, will increase the MGM music publishing firms to four.

Moskowitz will be president of the new firm.

Shuberts Sue Columbia Over 'Jolson Story'

Lee and J. J. Shubert, together with the Trebuhs Realty Company, owners of the Winter Garden in New York, this week filed a suit for $500,000 in the state supreme court against Columbia in connection with "The Jolson Story."

The suit, which also asks an accounting of profits on the picture, claims the picture leads to the belief that the Shuberts authorized the use of their names and the Winter Garden with the film and seeks an injunction to stop its exhibition and promotion.

Good Reason

The good old British policy of questioning officials from the floor of the House of Commons brought forth quick answers from Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer. Asked why part of the American loan to Britain is used to pay for rentals on American films especially in view of the food shortage, Dalton answered:

"Because the British people like American films."

Get Advertising Back Into Theatres, Bergman Urges

The time to rehabilitate our point of view on theatre advertising is now, while we can afford to be experimental and do different things, Maurice A. Bergman, Universal - International eastern advertising and publicity director, told managers of Neighborhood Theatres at their meeting held in Richmond, Va. this week at the Hotel John Marshall.

Maurice Bergman

Delivering his address, "Selling the Show," in connection with preparations for the circuit's 20th Anniversary Celebration to be held during November, Bergman pointed out that since new audiences have been gained, the question arises as to whether or not the industry can hold on to these new patrons when strong competition develops for the entertainment dollar.

The motion picture industry, Bergman said, is now entering the era of public service, culture and information as its fourth important era. He characterized the three previous stages as the storeroom, ballyhoo and boom eras.

"Theatre advertising must keep ahead of the public taste," Bergman declared, "since ours is the responsibility to educate the public as well as to sell. In this connection he outlined a number of objectives in theatre advertising: to get advertising back into the theatres where it belongs; to localize its point of view; to create an institutional pattern; to abandon the common denominator and the superlative; to keep the advertising on a family or cultural level; to make the theatre the focal point of the advertising; not to be afraid to be different; to be truthful and reveal what the picture is about; not to let our prejudices influence our advertising; and to condition the community to better pictures.

Continued the U-I executive: "The creative advertiser knows the value of an interesting format, but unfortunately the amusement pages generally look the same all the time. The first prerequisite of advertising is to be as entertaining as the commodity you are advertising, but unfortunately we have failed in this respect.

"You gentlemen in the theatres should rebel against the stereotype. To sell the show you must be imaginative. You must repudiate the cliche in advertising. Where to sell the picture is just as important as how to sell it. Theatremen should start selling a picture with the screen and the lobby, advancing the institutional factors of the motion picture industry." Concluding, Bergman reminded his audience: "The theatre manager's personality must be reflected in the theatre. We are the original personality business."

Art Gallery Display

For "Caesar and Cleopatra," Jim McCarthy, Warner Strand, Hartford, manager, promoted a display in a local art gallery of ancient Egyptian jewelry and art.—HFD.

One Shortage Solved

Faced with a problem familiar to many other exhibitors, Fred R. Greenway, manager of Loew's Poli Palace, Hartford, Conn., arranged to run the following copy on the theatre page of his local newspaper: "Fred Greenway wants Palace patrons, past, present and future, to know that the current co-feature film is Republic's "The Mysterious Mr. Valentine'."

Reason for the newspaper plant: Greenway's marquee wasn't large enough to accommodate the word, "mysterious."

See Three Films, Then Meet on Promotion Plans

Warner Bros. field public relations representatives for the eastern territory met at the home office on Friday and Saturday to discuss campaigns on three forthcoming pictures, "Deception," "Never Say Goodbye" and "The Verdict."

Among those in town for the sessions were Art Moger and Phil Spiegel, from Boston; George Fishman and Ed Maillard, Philadelphia; Richard Stephens, Buffalo, and Herb Pickman, New York Metropolitan area.

The men attended screenings of the pictures, discussed advertising plans with Gil Golden, national advertising manager, and then conferred with Larry Golob, eastern publicity director, and William W. Brumberg, manager of the field staff on promotion plans.

Al Zimbalist Named PRC Press Book Editor

Al Zimbalist, for the past year advertising and publicity director for Film Classics, has been named press book editor of PRC Pictures, and will begin his new duties on October 21.

Prior to his Film Classics affiliation, Zimbalist spent four years in the publicity and exploitation department of RKO Theatres. Previous to that, he was for five years publicity manager for Warners' Philadelphia Theatres, and for two years of this time was president of the Warner Club of Philadelphia.

Few Using Radio

A checkup in Vancouver, B. C., Canada, shows that comparatively few theatres are using radio as a means of selling their attractions to the public. Exhibitors have been flooded with requests for tieups with local stations involving the giving away of free tickets, but they are not sold on the idea, it was learned.—VAN.

PRC Exploitation Adopts Sneak Preview Technique

Pre-tested exploitation campaigns for top pictures, introducing "sneak-preview" techniques to the exploitation field, have been inaugurated by the new PRC, according to Arnold Stoltz, national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

Under the set-up devised by Harry H. Thomas, PRC president and general sales manager, field and exploitation representatives will work out trial campaigns to sell high quality pictures in selected localities. Careful sampling of audience reactions plus box-office returns will serve to measure the efficiency of the various campaigns with results of the surveys made available to all exhibitors playing the new PRC product.

The campaigns, developed in conformity with local conditions, will be designed for theatres operating within a moderate budget so as to be advantageous to the average exhibitor.

The precedental policy was inaugurated during the early run of "Her Sister's Secret," PRC's first million-dollar production. First trial campaign was held in Atlantic City, while other tests coincided with the picture's opening at Warners' Metropolitan Theatre in Washington, D. C., on October 10 and at the RKO Grand in Cincinnati on October 18.

In Atlantic City, chosen because of its representative population, a medium budget campaign was set up, utilizing press book ads, radio spot announcements, and a newspaper contest tieup with a leading florist who offered floral arrangements to the three families having the greatest number of sisters. The efficiency of the campaign was attested to by the fact that the picture opened to two and a half times normal business despite bad weather in a resort town out of season.

In Washington, selected as an above average residential city, the campaign was based almost entirely on newspaper advertising with little or no radio expenditures. Cincinnati, chosen as a typical industrial center, had a campaign concentrating on exploitation and local tieups.

Results of the three campaigns will be carefully evaluated and the best features of each will be combined to form a model campaign for all future exploitation of the picture.

Gets Tieups for 'Claudia'

"Claudia and David" showing at Loew's-Poli Palace Theatre, Hartford, benefitted by displays on 22 newsstands and 10 bannered trucks.

Daily Movie News Rates High

Drama, music and movie news rank high among the popular features in the Chicago Tribune, a survey of the Tribune's 1945 reader response has disclosed. Tribune readers contacted the newspaper 5,652.301 times during the year, the study showed, which is an increase of more than 700,000 over the 1944 total of 4,900,211. Interest in movie reviews were factors in 10,203 comments or inquiries, while interest in drama and music figured in 9,986 reader responses.

There have been other newspaper surveys in the past proving that movie news rates high in reader interest. And yet, in spite of this proof, many exhibitors have difficulty in getting their local papers to use such news, at the same time paying higher rates (amusement rates) for their display ads.

New York Paramount Marks Fifth-of-Century Celebration

With the engagement of Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies," starring Bing Crosby, Joan Caulfield and Fred Astaire, and Stan Kenton and his orchestra in person, the New York Paramount is observing its fifth of a century anniversary at the Crossroads of the World. Opening on a November night in 1926 when films were silent, its inaugural attraction was "God Gave Me Twenty Cents" with a cast including Lya de Putti, Jack Mulhall, Lois Moran and Lois Wilson. Maurice, famous dance star of the day, appeared in a stage presentation directed by John Murray Anderson. The opening was a theatrical event and in the audience were Florenz Ziegfeld, Charles B. Dillingham, Otto Kahn, Thomas Edison, Mayor James J. Walker and Texas Guinan, high priestess of the night clubs.

For threatregoers, that night of twenty years ago brings nostalgic memories. There were 59 legitimate shows, 28 of them musicals. Marilyn Miller was the bright star of "Sunny." Barbara Stanwyck was playing in "The Noose," Mae West in "Sex." That historical flop "The Ladder" had just opened, "Broadway" was in its tenth week. Dramatic hits were "The Captive" and "The Shanghai Gesture." The song and dance shows included "Vanities," "Scandals," "Vagabond King," "Countess Maritza," "Criss Cross" and 'Queen High." Burlesque was going full swing at the old Columbia with "The Sporting Widow."

Vaudeville Was Alive

When the Paramount opened Paul Whiteman was selected to play at the inaugural ball for the re-induction of Al Smith as Governor of New York. The hit movies, silent, were "Beau Geste" and "The Big Parade."

Night club covers seldom ran under three dollars. The class night clubs were the Lido, Montmarte and Mirador. Other night spots were the Parody, Black Bottom, the Dover Club and Texas Guinan's.

Vaudeville was alive and kicking at the Colonial, Riverside and scores of other houses, not forgetting the Palace at which the bill included Yorke and King, Eddie Leonard, Trini, Eddie Nelson and Florrie Le Vere. Those were the days of prohibition, short skirts, jazz and the Charleston.

HECTIC MOMENTS. Going into its 21st year, the Paramount can look back on some hectic moments. It was there ten years ago that swing became a vogue and jitterbugs started dancing in the aisles (above), led by that pied piper of the pantywaists, Benny Goodman.

Located at the Crossroads of the World, the Paramount Theatre stands on the site of the former Putnam Building. It was there that General Israel Putnam rejoined General Washington after slipping through the British cordon on September 15, 1776. The cordon had been drawn about the patriot army to prevent it from escaping after Washington's masterly retreat from Long Island to Fort Washington in Washington Heights. The land was owned 416 years by the Astors, and in 1919 was sold by Vincent Astor.

In 1922 Adolph Zukor, head of a subsidiary corporation, bought the property for the purpose of erecting the building and using the theatre as a fitting home for Paramount pictures on Broadway. It was in November, 1925, that the drills began boring into the solid rock for the foundation of the building and theatre. Within a year the theatre, a completed project, with every department functioning to its fullest extent, opened its doors to the public.

Through Different Phases

Operation of the New York Paramount for its opening and several years after was in the hands of Harold V. Franklin. During its 20-year history it has gone through different phases or policies of operation. The first phase was the combination of screen attractions and stage presentations, somewhat similar to the presentations offered currently at Radio City Music Hall. These stage shows for several years were routed around the country on the Paramount-Publix chain of theatres. They were put on by such well-known producers of Broadway musical comedies as John Murray Anderson; R. H. Burnside, who at one time staged the elaborate C. B. Dillingham spectacles at the Hippodrome; Charlot, who first introduced Beatrice Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence to America, and other producers not so well-known.

After a few years it was felt that big names were necessary. Then came a rapid succession of star names in person, including Buddy Rogers, Nancy Carroll, Eddie Cantor, Miriam Hopkins, George Bancroft, Amos & Andy, Kate Smith, Mae West, Fred Astaire, Gertrude Lawrence, Lenore Ulric and scores of others. Big salaries were paid, the highest going to Maurice Chevalier who received $15,000 for a week's engagement.

Began Band Show Policy

In 1935 Robert M. Weitman took over the reins as Managing Director and introduced the present day screen and band show policy which probably has done more than anything else to bring vaudeville back to life.

Going into its 21st year the Paramount can look back on some hectic moments. It was there ten years ago that swing became a vogue and jitterbugs started dancing in the aisles, led by that pied piper of the panty-waists, Benny Goodman. It was at the Paramount that the bobby-soxers first squealed as they worshipped at the shrine of their Frankie.

CROSBY PLAYED THERE. As one of Paul Whiteman's "Rhythm Boys," Bing Crosby played the Paramount for $100 a week shortly after the theatre opened. A few years later Bing was booked as a single at $1,000 per week. Today he's doing quite well on the screen and in radio.

As one of Paul Whiteman's "Rhythm Boys" Bing Crosby played the Paramount shortly after the theatre opened for $100 a week. A few years later Bing was booked as a single at $1,000 a week. Other stars who got their first start there include Ginger Rogers, Ethel Merman, Rudy Vallee, Danny Kaye, Cass Daley, Red Skelton, Betty Hutton, Gertrude Niesen, Hazel Scott, the Andrews Sisters, the Ink Spots, Rubinoff, Ruth Etting, and such band leaders as Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Harry James, Charlie Spivak, and the talented Major Glenn Miller, lost in action over Europe.

100 Million Circulation For Disney 'Song' Ads

Nearly 100 million circulation, embracing neswpaper supplements such as American Weekly, This Week, Parade and the First 3 Market Groups, augmented by various independent supplements, are included in the advertising schedule for Walt Disney's "Song of the South." The campaign has been prepared under the supervision of S. Barret McCormick, RKO Radio's director of advertising and publicity.

Also included in the advertising schedule are weekly magazines such as Life, Look, Collier's, Saturday Evening Post, Liberty and Red Book in addition to the more prominent fan magazines and fan press combinations.

'Piccadilly Incident' in British Electrical Tieup

A national tieup with the Electrical Development Association of Great Britain has been effected by R. N. Paterson, Pathe's exploitation manager, for the Herbert Wilcox production, "Piccadilly Incident." Electrical showrooms throughout England have given window displays to the picture and in return cinema managers have staged electrical exhibitions in their foyers.

Tieups have also been effected with numerous London traders, and an average of twenty displays were arranged in each key city.—J.M.

Geiseman Angles Varied On Marx Bros. Campaign

Rexall's advertising of the Marx Brothers feature comedy, "A Night in Casablanca," United Artists release, grabbed considerable attention for the film's Music Hall date in Los Angeles. Billing the picture as "the greatest Sell-ebration of the year," Manager Cliff Geiseman boosted the Marxes in more than 30 newspapers in the territory in addition to circulating heralds house to house.

The mayor of Casa-Blanca, Calif., as well as the members of the Chamber of Commerce, were Geiseman's guests at the opening.

A street ballyhoo consisted of three stooges dressed as the Marx trio riding bicycles and carrying banners advertising the "Night in Casablanca" playdate.

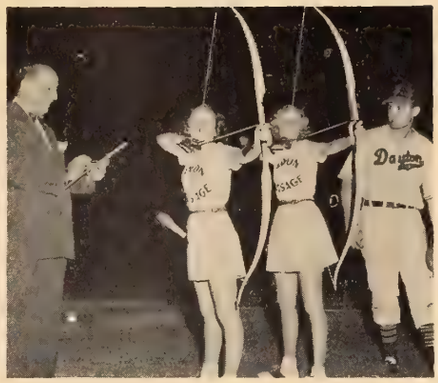
A complete radio advertising and publicity campaign was held in conjunction with the opening, and appearances of principal cast members was arranged with stations KMPC, KNX and KECA.

Cooperative ads and window displays broke in newspapers and downtown Los Angeles stores a week prior and during the picture's booking.

Radio, Theatre Join in 5-Hour Juvenile Show

Five hours of continuous film entertainment, including a western, cartoons, a serial and "Notorious" (the theatre's current attraction) were offered youngsters one Saturday morning in the first Lone Ranger party staged by WHKC and the RKO Palace in Columbus, Ohio. Admission was 25 cents, plus the top of a box of Cheerioats, the Lone Ranger's favorite cereal.

The party was preceded by a barrage of radio plugs on the WHKC schedule, plus ads and news stories. It was held in cooperation with the Lone Ranger's campaign for curbing juvenile delinquency. Stories pointed out that mothers could park their children at the theatre for five hours while they completed their week-end shopping.



Success of the special morning matinee may lead to future theatre parties in cooperation with the Lone Ranger broadcast.—COL.

Feature 'The Mil-walk-ee'

In a tieup with "Two Guys From Milwaukee" at the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, the recent Annual Dance Convention of the Dancing Teachers' Club of Boston, attended by instructors from all parts of New England, featured the latest dance craze, "The Mil-walk-ee," from the Warner Bros. picture. Two well-known New England dance teams gave demonstrations of the steps as performed by Janis Paige and George Zoritch in the film.

Using the National Tieup

It isn't always a terrible job to put over an exploitation campaign. George Sharp of the Wilson and Robert Retzer of the Tower in Fresno, Calif. recently made use of the national tieup with Royal Crown Cola for "The Road to Utopia" and as a result got date strips, store window displays, bus cards, truck banners and five radio plugs daily in the Royal Crown announcements. It was a cinch.

CARRYING THROUGH. This stunt, a contest between champion girl archers and professional baseball players, is a national promotion waged in behalf of Universal-International's "Canyon Passage." Some time ago STR printed a photo of it at the Yankee Stadium, New York. Just to show how well such an exploitation idea can be carried through, here is the contest as put on at Dayton. Goody Sable, RKO city manager, is acting as judge, while one of the Dayton players has a good time looking at the girls.

Tickets for Opinions

Quoting the New York Daily Mirror ("If every guy was to see this picture, fewer would act like chumps over dames"), RKO Theatres ran a provocative display ad on Warners' "Of Human Bondage," challenging men and women to give their viewpoints on the statement. They were asked to confine their opinion to one sentence, with guest tickets being offered for the 12 best replies.

Odeon Clubs on Air

Odeon Movie Clubs in British Columbia have arranged a radio tie-up with station CKWX by which winners of weekly local talent contests appear on the Junior Radio Theatre in a weekly broadcast. This feature activity of the Odeon Clubs climaxes meetings of juveniles at all British Columbia theatres during which special British juvenile films are shown.—VAN.

Hartford Well Aware of 'Holiday' Engagement

Street ballyhoo, music tieups and other business-getting stunts were used in Hartford, Conn., to make that city well aware of the showing of MGM's "Holiday in Mexico" at Loew's Poli and the Loew-Poli Palace theatres. Working on the campaign were Lou Cohen, Sam Horwitz, Angela Pascucci and James Hughes of Loew's Poli, and Fred R. Greenway, Albert Lessow and Martha Gilwech of the Loew-Poli Palace.

The street stunt featured a boy carrying two suitcases lettered with this copy: "I am going to spend a 'holiday in Mexico' at Loew's Poli." Six news trucks were bannered.

Through a tieup with the Columbia and Victor record distributors in the area, special window cards were distributed. Local night clubs and orchestras received orchestrations of the songs from the picture, and the songs were also played during theatre intermissions.

Another tieup, this one with the Bushnell Memorial, a local concert hall, made possible the display of a card at the hall announcing Jose Iturbi's appearance in the picture. Names of concertgoers were obtained from the hall, and letters were sent to these music lovers. Counter cards and 2000 circulars were placed in the record sections of department stores and in music stores.

Those in charge of the campaign also promoted a newspaper essay contest on the subject, "Why I Would Prefer a 'Holiday in Mexico'." Guest tickets and cash prizes went to the winners.—HFD.

Latin-American Tieup Is Set on 'Suspense'

Monogram has set an extensive Latin and South American tieup with Max Factor which will feature Belita and be timed with the release there of "Suspense," her current starrer.

Ads, four columns by 11 inches, featuring the Monogram star, will appear in leading newspapers and magazines printed in Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Venezuela and other Latin American countries.

PLENTY OF WINDOW SPACE. Information accompanying the photo reproduced above stated that this window was just one of many promoted for the showing of Columbia's "Gilda" at the Mary Lou Theatre in Marshall, Mo. If all the other windows were as full-fledged as this one, then the picture was certainly well known all over town.

Wonderful Star Margaret O'Brien Also Wonderful Exploitation Maker

Margaret O'Brien, besides being a wonderful little star, is also a wonderful little exploitation inciter, as can be attested by Robert Hynes, manager of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City. When Hynes penciled in "Three Wise Fools" he decided upon a search for the "local Margaret O'Brien," thereby proving himself to be wise, but no fool.

A radio teaser campaign began on Station KOCY two weeks in advance of the stunt in connection with the "Man on the Street" program. A week before opening the competing children were interviewed on the program in front of the theatre, with the attending public voting for the girl they thought bore greatest resemblance. Thursday before the opening the final was held in the same manner.

Winner Interviewed

The winner, Claudia Caldwell, then was interviewed by the local paper and received a three-column cut and story spread on the Saturday before opening day. Claudia then spent two days at local department stores being outfitted in Margaret O'Brien models, all this being broadcast over the "Man in the Street" program.

Day before opening Claudia was feted at a big ice cream store and a restaurant, causing much attention from patrons, you may be sure.

On opening day Claudia proved herself a fine hostess by greeting the patrons as they entered the theatre, attended by a party of fifteen of her classmates. Again the radio followed the proceedings, going into great detail as to Claudia, what she did and what it all might mean to her. As a parting gesture the youngster received a personally autographed picture from the real Margaret O'Brien.

Along with the activities connected with little Claudia—a really charming child, by the way—the tieup with the largest department store resulted in the store giving an entire window to an elaborate "Three Wise Fools" display. Inside the store there were five displays on the picture, using 40x60 cutouts.

Carrying out the theme, 8,000 Margaret O'Brien pencil tablets were distributed, 16 counter cards were placed tieing in with the Margaret O'Brien handbag, and in the usual manner, there were trailers and banners.

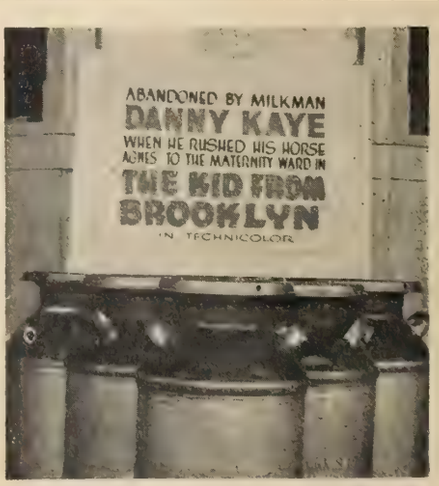
Beautiful 'Doll' Reporter Sought in U-I Contest

Universal - International exploitation has turned to the newspapers of the United States through Theta Sigma Phi, national newspaper women's sorority, to find the "most magnificent doll among American newspaper women."

Winner of the contest, which exploits the Skirball - Manning production, "Magnificent Doll," starring Ginger Rogers, will receive a silverplated typewriter from Miss Rogers and also will win a trip to either the New York or Hollywood premiere of the film.

A jury of Hollywood and New York artists will select a winner from photos which are already being mailed to the national president of the sorority in Los Angeles. The contest, which is open to non members of the sorority, as well as members, closes November 10, with the decision of the judges to be announced five days later.



'Margie,' 'Clementine' In Premiere Campaigns

Record advertising campaign heralded two world premieres this week when 20th Century-Fox's "Margie" opened in New York at the Roxy Theatre and the company's "My Darling Clementine" had its initial engagement at the Fox Theatre in San Francisco.

For the "Margie" premiere an advance teaser campaign ran in newspapers and on billboards for a month in advance, followed by increased display space as the opening neared. Special radio transcriptions are also being used extensively.

In San Francisco, stars from the 20th-Fox studio participated in the Golden Gate premiere of John Ford's production, "My Darling Clementine," which ushered in more than 100 day-and-date engagements in the west for the picture. Stars who made the trip included Linda Darnell and Victor Mature, who appear in the picture, Vivian Blaine, Nancy Guild, Cathy Downs, who has the title role of "Clementine," Peggy Ann Garner, Lon McCallister and Kurt Kreuger. Sam Engel, who produced the film, Gregory Ratoff, producer-director, and George Jessel, who acted as master of ceremonies, also were in the Hollywood group.

An extensive radio campaign, augmenting the record newspaper advertising and publicity, was in use well in advance of the premiere. All of the advertising was geared to cover the entire west coast thus assuring the regional premieres which followed a widespread campaign. The premiere campaign was handled by Eddie Yarbrough and Frank Jenkins, 20th-Fox exploiteers, under the personal supervision of Herman Wobber, western sales manager. Also cooperating in the campaign activities were Dick Spear, Fox West Coast division manager, and Fay Reeder, publicity director of FWC theatres in San Francisco. The New York home office was represented by Sid Blumenstock, assistant exploitation manager, who was on hand in connection with the premiere.

THIS IS EASY. Half a dozen milk cans were needed for this effective ballyhoo for RKO's "The Kid from Brooklyn" evolved in the fertile mind of Jack Droy of the Orpheum, Vancouver. The sign reads: "Abandoned by milkman Danny Kaye when he rushed his horse to the maternity ward in 'The Kid from Brooklyn'." A real attention-getter.—VAN.

20th-Fox Sets Billboard Campaign

During the last three months of the Spyros Skouras Sales Drive, 20th Century-Fox will inaugurate the biggest billboard advertising campaign in its history, covering key cities from Boston to Los Angeles, Charles Schlaifer, the company's advertising-publicity head, disclosed this week. This extensive outdoor showing will be launched next week with the initial posting of paper in New York for "The Razor's Edge." A total of 24,319 sheets of paper will be posted in this campaign which will supplement the intensive newspaper and magazine advertising planned for "The Razor's Edge," "Margie" and "My Darling Clementine," during October, November and December.

In New York for the world premiere engagement of "The Razor's Edge" at the Roxy, the company will use more billboard space than it has ever used before on one picture. The showing, which will cover subways and suburban railroads as well as regular outdoor boards, snipe locations, six, three and one-sheet stands and window displays, will utilize every style of paper from half-sheet streamers to 24-sheets. A total of 18,600 sheets of outdoor paper will be used for this typical circus showing for the picture's extended engagement in New York.

As an added feature of the campaign the company's advertising department will use for the first time a giant 48-sheet specially designed for "The Razor's Edge." The poster will be posted extensively in the New York area and also will be used in key city locations in advance of the picture's day and date release during Christmas week.

During November the billboard showing will be devoted to "Margie" and "My Darling Clementine" in key cities with the exception of New York. Teaser 24-sheets on the two pictures will be posted in advance and later will be covered by the regular 24-sheets. Outdoor posting on "The Razor's Edge" will start generally in December and will include all the boards previously used for "Margie" and "My Darling Clementine."

The billboard campaign throughout the country will be in addition to the posting done regularly by theatres, and will be used in advance and current with the engagements of the pictures in each city to stimulate public interest and to insure longer runs.

ANIMATED 'BOOK.' Declared the largest of its type ever made, the animated book display shown above on 20th-Fox's "The Razor's Edge," now on view in the rotunda of the Roxy Theatre, New York, is approximately 14 feet in its overall base dimensions; the base of the book is approximately 10 feet and the individual pages are four feet by six feet. A mechanical device turns the pages, of which there are six, at 15-second intervals. Display is on a miniature stage whose side drapes are illuminated by fluorescent lights. Background is made up of beveled mirror panels. Declares Homer Harman, Roxy director of publicity and advertising: "I think exhibitors all over the country will find, as we have here at the Roxy, that such a display is most unusual and a superlatively effective means of advertising 'The Razor's Edge'."

Twin Sisters Advance Publicists for 'Mirror'

To promote the world premiere of International Pictures' "The Dark Sister" at Loew's Criterion in New York this week, and to help launch the selling campaign in other eastern and midwestern cities, Universal arranged a three-week tour for Veda and Cesta Ryker, red-headed identical twin press agents. "The Dark Mirror" deals with identical twin sisters.

After several days of activity in New York, the girls left last Monday (14) to bring tidings of "The Dark Mirror" to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Boston and Providence. During the week of October 20 they will visit Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Chicago. Appearances in Minneapolis and St. Paul are scheduled for October 28. The twins will then go to California to appear on a series of national network radio programs.

During their visit to New York, "The Dark Mirror" press agents visited New York newspapers and trade publications and made a guest appearance on "Double Or Nothing" over a network of 324 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System. They were also hostesses to a distinguished list of psychologists, psychiatrists and geneticists of Columbia University's School of Neurology and Psychiatry at a special screening of the film at the company's home office followed by a supper at the Swiss Inn. New York newspapers including the Times, PM, and the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, covered the screening and supper.

U-I Publicity Staff Is Realigned by Bergman

Continued expansion of Universal-International's home office advertising and publicity department was indicated this week when Maurice Bergman, eastern director of advertising and publicity, announced additions to the staff and certain realignments in the department.

Maria Van Slyke, formerly of the New York publicity department of International Pictures, has been assigned general contact work. Milton Livingston, formerly with Motion Picture Daily, was added to the general publicity staff as trade paper contact, succeeding Phil Laufer who was transferred to the Winter Garden as that theatre's publicity representative. William Kernan, formerly of the advertising department of RKO theatres and more recently of the staff of Donahue & Coe, advertising agency, has been added to the advertising department and will specialize in the placement of exhibitor advertisements.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

A THREE-POINT RULE FOR RESULTS

By Jack Jackson

My father used to admonish that the observation of three distinct actions—consideration, decision and action—was an absolute essential to successful issue for any form of human endeavor. Without the companion two, the possibility of any accomplishment of merit by the other is as remote as a Byrnes-Wallace "bundling" party.

The best-laid schemes of mice and men will fail to get the cheese for the banquet table unless the physical energy and daring necessary to spring the trap are expended.

The chasm between planning and doing is every bit as broad as between winning and losing. Merely to plan is just plain dreaming and dreaming without capitalizing on your mental visions and transforming them into living realities of potential benefit is dealing your theatre a foul blow.

Be certain that your every plan means something definite either in the way of added revenue, better service or improved facilities and then follow it up with sincere and aggressive action. Remember always (write it on the inside of your forehead where you can always read it), the world pays off, not to the starters, but to the finishers of the race and that Hope and Faith, unless driven hard and vigorously by Action, seldom appear in the photo finishes. Make every plan cross the finish line and if the plan is good and you ride it hard enough and long enough you'll flash by the judge's stand a contender for the winner's accolade.

Determine Where the Weakness Existed

You can even capitalize the plans that fail if you've carried them to a conclusion. Go back over each and analyze carefully to determine where the weakness existed. Better still, go through each step of the actual work involved in its plan and the execution thereof to see how prominently those twin saboteurs of accomplishment "too little" and "too late" figured in the disaster. Don't, regardless of other duties, dismiss the matter casually and blame it on "Bad Luck." Take the time to analyze carefully, conscientiously and honestly and you'll invariably find that what you attribute to bad luck was really bad workmanship and that what you've been classifying as misfortune belongs in the error column. In most instances "bad luck" is just an overworked alibi for failure, and "misfortune" in an easy-to-grab defense against hard work.

It often has been said that theatre business succeeds in spite of itself. Any amateur Peeping Tom, sneaking occasional glances at theatre operation during the past four or five years would have to give credence to the assertion and voice a loud and lusty "aye" in condemnation. All of us have spent interminable hours decrying the lack of efficient help and the rapid turnover of such help as can be secured to perform the essential work of the theatre. But, pray tell me, how many have taken the obvious steps necessary to mitigate the situation and alleviate hazard to theatre equipment and theatre patronage? Careful analyzing and efficient planning will do wonders along these lines.

It is hard to call to mind any other business, catering to the general public, that requires more careful planning than the theatre. And, I'm not talking about the plans essential to the selling of rapidly changing programs. I'm referring to the myriad cleaning, maintenance, service, inspection and operational details that fluctuate with the ebb and flow of theatre traffic. With the labor situation what it has been—and still is from where I sit—there has never been a time when accomplishment of any kind was so utterly dependent on detailed instruction to the worker. Just how any theatre executive can consider himself capable of accurately giving such instruction without himself possessing a well analyzed and minutely detailed plan of the workings of each department—I mean day-to-day, hour-to-hour and week-to-week schedules of the required work—at his disposal requires a calibre of mental calisthenics more complicated than my imagination can conjure.

Today's theatre manager who wants to conserve his time, keep his operation running as smoothly as possible under existing circumstances and do an all-around good job will take immediate steps to lay in a supply of written plans detailing every step essential to the proper fulfillment of duties in every department of his theatre. He will need:

A list of every item of equipment demanding nightly attention from the cleaning staff. This should include detailed instruction as to sweeping, vacuum cleaning, rest room attention, dusting, polishing, etc. with instructions as to the chronological order of performance to be certain that new help sweeps before it dusts, etc. Details should be written about refuse from the booth, bannisters, cashier's cage, candy counter and equipment, checking for loose seat standards, damaged or broken seats, stage cleaning, orchestra pit (just because they are not used is no reason to neglect their cleaning). The periodic duties such as the vacuuming of drapes, scrubbing and mopping of floors, cleaning of wall bracket fixtures and lights, lobby displays and so on should be set down in writing and sufficient copies made to permit of each new employe being given a complete list of what his job demands in the way of day-to-day effort. List the type of cleaning compounds for each duty and the amount to be used. Be specific in your instructions and demand that the cleaning department head be specific in accounting for supplies expended and keep a running inventory of material on hand.

A similar list detailing the duties of ushers and showing their day-to-day changes of hours, relief periods as well as complete instructions regarding their conduct in and out of the theatre and the attentions they are required to give patrons. Tell them where and how to stand for incoming patrons; what post or posi-

Keep Ladders Clear

There's not much sense in spending time and money to give the marquee a fresh, new appearance with a new paint job if the maintenance crew which changes letters on each change of show are careless enough to prop the ladder against the new coat of paint. Caution them to keep the ladder out of contact with the marquee. Don't brace against it.

tion to assume during spills. Give definite instructions as to the care of uniforms, personal appearance, etc. Don't take it for granted that even the brightest applicant knows even the smallest detail of how you want them to do the job in your theatre. Explain everything fully and insist that they acquaint themselves with your requirements before putting them on the payroll. It's cheaper for the company and less of a headache for yourself to determine a prospective employe's limitations in advance rather than have things all balled up while the house is full of customers. If the employe applicant has initiative and willingness he will quickly hit stride with the older personnel and be able to set example for the newcomer of tomorrow. I know that it sounds difficult but it's a sure way of keeping your staff at a semblance of acceptable efficiency.

Instruct Promoted Aides

Exercise the same care with cashiers, doormen, day porters. Even when you promote an employe from an inferior position it is well to take the time to acquaint him with the detailed duties of his new job. It is costly and hazardous to assume that the oldest usher has learned all the duties of the door post from observation or association. Have a plan for the execution of the work involved for each position and insist that the occupant of the post know thoroughly each and every requirement.

You can save a lot of money in the electrical maintenance department by analyzing the wattage required to adequately meet the demand in various portions of the theatre. Don't authorize 100's where 40's will do and carry the economy still further by insisting that comparable care is used in lamps of still lower wattage. Wherever a 15 will suffice avoid 25's and if the lower wattage is not available try making one 25 serve for two 15's. Give your electrical maintenance man a work sheet showing what size lamp to use in each outlet—don't forget to do the same with the work lamps of the night cleaners—and watch your electricity bill shrivel. Cleaning the walls, the shades, the bulbs and the neon tubing will enable you to cut down consumption. I've seen dozens of theatres where the accumulation of dust on the shades and bulbs was cutting the light from a 100 lamp down to the intensity of a clean 40. Keep them clean! Determine the size needed! Reports of supplies expended and frequent inventories will prevent headaches. Get the light you pay for to give the best possible efficiency!

Your house maintenance man should be given a similar sheet showing every detail of daily, weekly, periodic inspection demands for seats, drapes, hearing aids, carpets, plumbing, roofs, staircases, bannisters, door checks and the numerous other units of operation that demand his services and for which his department is responsible. Be specific in each instance and demand frequent inventories of repair material on hand and advice as to special material needs far enough in advance to permit of bargaining for best prices.

Sound Most Important

Probably the most neglected post in today's hectic theatre operation—and by all means the most important—is that of sound observer. For some unfathomable reason managers refuse to recognize that the complete enjoyment of their programs is dependent on accurate sound regulation. It is impossible to give too much attention to this feature of theatre operation and the employe entrusted with the job of monitoring should be carefully trained and instructed as to the positions from which the volume should be observed; the factors that govern sound variation and all other essentials. This post should be covered by the most carefully prepared and most detailed plan of any department. And don't let the job end with the monitor. Instruct the operators about following the specified signals as quickly as possible. Let them check on the booth monitor if they consider the signals in error but to be sure they notify the floor about any circumstance that demands disregarding the signals. A talk with the

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK
Maintenance

NEON SIGNS — Maintenance

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

Careful inspection of neon signs, as outlined below, will insure continuous and trouble-free operation, and eliminate unnecessary maintenance expense.

An employe who understands electricity should be assigned to make the inspection. In smaller towns, where no reputable service agency may be available, the employe thus assigned may do all the necessary maintenance work; but even in large cities, where service facilities are plentiful, most of the minor work can still be done by the theatre's own personnel.

There is no mystery about a neon sign. There is no mechanism in it to get out of order. When it is in trouble, the cause is always related either to the transformer or the tube. The only exception to this statement will be trouble resulting from failure of the current supply, such as may be caused by a defect in the line flasher.

TUBE SUPPORTS

1. See that all tube supports are on the sign and are permanently fastened.

The tube support is the small glass post which supports the neon tube. The supports are intended to hold the tube gently but firmly in position. If some of them have come off, trouble may result—damage either to the tube or to other parts of the sign.

TRANSFORMER TERMINALS

2. See that all transformer terminals are tight and clean.

Loose terminals at the primary side of the transformer (where 110 volt current enters it) will cause flickering in the sign and will be harmful to both transformer and tubes if the condition is allowed to continue. Loose terminals at the secondary side of the transformer (where high voltage ranging from 12,000 to 15,000 volts leaves the transformer and goes to the tube) may result in more immediate damage. The high voltage will arc across the loose connection, and this arc will burn the terminals off the transformer. It may damage the interior wiring of the sign. It can start a serious fire.

PHYSICAL CONDITION

3. Make a complete check of the sign to be sure that service doors are tightly closed, guy wires and chains properly affixed and at the proper tension. Check to see that points at which the sign is attached to the building are firm and not coming loose.

CORROSION

4. If the paint on any part of the sign or its supports shows signs of peeling off or wearing off, it should be operators about high fader positions on openings of new subjects and dropping down to normal when the subject gets under way will add materially to the effectiveness of your show by commanding attention from the audience.

There should be a plan for the handling of every job in the theatre and it should be adhered to more closely now—when labor turnover is at such a high peak—than in normal times when we can pick and choose our personnel. We still owe our customers the best possible service and the only way we can give it to them is by getting the best possible effort from the employes we hire. Equip each with complete details of the job to be filled; let them study it in advance and insist on their compliance when they are placed on the payroll. Making a practice of this procedure will result in a better operated theatre because there will always be one or more who have assimilated the instructions to help the newcomer adjust to theatre duty.

I would like to admonish about one factor I find getting little or no consideration in the selling plans. Very few managers figure on the important item of determining the amount of physical energy needed to accomplish a contemplated activity and the cost and/or availability of such energy. In such instances it is impossible to get that all important "third move" of action under way and the plan invariably fails. Be sure where the help is coming from and what it is going to cost before you order quantities of posting paper, batches of heralds, remodeling or repair materials, etc.

Before calling it a day I'd like to atom bomb a couple of other "stock excuses" for failure. The only "curse" that ever existed to threaten the success of any man's effort is the curse of his own cowardice to tackle the job and see it through to a finish. And the fellow who tells of the premonitions he had before he even started was promising himself disaster in advance and had invited failure from the outset.

Throw away all talismans, charms and rabbit's feet!

Just buckle down to the job that has to be done and do it!

Check Lighting

Poor lighting in the theatre can result in accidents that may prove costly to the theatre as well as to the patron. Regularly check all lights in the washrooms, on the stairs, over the exit lights, and in other strategic spots. Do a thorough job and save money!

Chicago Palace to Honor Smith During Celebration

With city officials and other notables invited to attend, the RKO Palace Theatre, Chicago, in conjunction with its 20th Anniversary Celebration to be marked by a week of festivities beginning October 24, will hold a "Frank Smith Night" on October 30 in honor of RKO Theatres' Chicago division manager.

Smith, who was named to his post on his 20th anniversary with RKO Theatres, has been associated with the organization since 1924, serving in various managerial capacities. Because the Palace's anniversary is closely allied with Smith's own career with the theatre chain, officials felt that one night of the week's festivities should be devoted to the RKO executive.

Chicago residents know Smith as something more than a supervisor of theatres there. As the manager of ace houses, he became active in the city's community affairs and has been prominently connected with many important events.

Born in Rochester, N. Y., Smith entered the amusement industry at an early age. For many years he was with the Empire Producing Co. where he was in charge of bookings and managed the road tours of W. B. Patton, a well-known star of that day. He was also at one time publicity man for Klaw and Erlanger. Joining RKO in 1924, Smith at various times managed the Lincoln-Hippodrome and Majestic theatres in Chicago, and other RKO houses in Milwaukee, Denver and Champaign. In 1927 he was appointed manager of the RKO Palace in Chicago, and two years ago was made the division manager for that area.

replaced at once to prevent damage from rust or corrosion. Rust or corrosion which has already formed should be chipped off or sanded off or wire-brushed, or new paint may not hold. Always use a reputable rust-resisting metal paint next to the metal of the sign as a ground coat, above which a second coat can be applied in conformity with the decorative scheme desired.

DAMAGED TUBE

5. If a tube has become broken or has been removed for any reason, the sign should not be operated until the tube has been replaced, or a jumper installed. Otherwise the transformer will be operating on open circuit, which increases its terminal voltage and can eventually destroy it.

BE SURE TUBE RESTS ON ALL SUPPORTS

When a new tube is installed, a careful check should be made to be sure all the supports are of equal height. The simplest way to check this is to put the tube into position gently and see if it rests equally on all supports. If the tube is improperly installed—under strain—it may break after only a few days of operation.

Careless work on the part of a service man may often result in further and even continuous trouble, until the work is re-done properly. For example, a tube that has been repaired with poor equipment may not have a very long life. If it was not cleaned out properly, foreign elements may "eat up" the gas and cause the tube to burn out. If the tube was not properly pumped it will not burn properly, and may be off color.

MISCELLANEOUS TROUBLES

If a tube flickers, the line servicing it may be overloaded.

If a tube goes out, the flasher on the line may be defective. It should be carefully checked to see if it is operating correctly. A simple but frequent cause of this trouble is a flasher stuck in the "off" position—cutting off the current supply.

GENERAL

Inspection becomes particularly important after a neon sign has been operated for a period of twelve months.

To repeat: a theatre employe who understands electricity can readily (and economically) do most of the minor work of maintenance even in cities where professional service is available. He should, for example, be able to determine in a very few minutes whether a given trouble is caused by a transformer or a tube, and which tube or which transformer. A careful and patient approach, and an elementary knowledge of the working of the sign, are the principal requirements.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Neigborhood Manager Can't 'Splurge' But He Can Lead

That the neighborhood theatre manager can't "splurge" in advertising and exploitation expenditures in the manner his "showcase" big brothers let the populace know, is an economic fact, rather than any idea dictated by the home office departments or local owners. But he can do things in the way of institutionalizing his theatre and publicizing his attractions that the big first-run theatre might consider ineffective for that type of operation but which is nevertheless productive of increased box-office figures in the neighborhoods, if carefully planned and energetically carried out.

Elaborate fronts and lobby displays cannot be accomplished within the budgets of the neighborhoods. Neither can they spend thousands of dollars in newspaper advertising every year.

But the neighborhood theatre manager can become good friends with leaders of Parent-Teachers Associations, civic clubs, become close to political leaders in his district, know well the persons who can do his theatre good or ill and keep closely acquainted with what's going on in his neighborhood among social groups, thus making himself and his theatre part of community life.

The big first-run manager does some of these things, too, as part of his job, but because of the largely transient nature of the crowds attending his theatre, he never has the opportunity to step into the lobby and say, "Hello Jim; Mrs. Jim," etc., etc., which, in addition to giving any human person a lot of satisfaction brings Mr. and Mrs. Jim back again and again to see the neighborhood theatre's attractions.

Provide Comfort

One of the first things the manager of a neighborhood theatre does, if he is to be successful, is to make his theatre comfortable and inviting at all times. Sound and projection are maintained at the highest standards possible, within the mechanical limits of equipment. Either the theatre becomes the mecca of neighborhood theatregoers or it just jogs along haphazardly while prospective patrons go out of their way to get what they want in the kind of atmosphere they have been educated to expect, even in the smallest neighborhood house. This is not to state that a movie patron expects to get the lavishness of a big Broadway theatre when he goes to a neighborhood. But he does expect courtesy, clean rest rooms, good projection and sound and the kind of atmosphere that can easily and inexpensively be created in any type of theatre.

Know 'Em By Name

Knowing patrons by name is not the easy accomplishment it appears to be. But it can be done if the manager is unobtrusive, courteous at all times and not the kind of guy who is rude enough to approach a patron, slap him on the back and come forth with some insanity such as "Hello, Joe, whattaya know?" Although this is not intended to be a lesson in good manners, such an approach often has been observed in action by the more thick-skinned theatre manager who wonders why his pal (?) has become annoyed.

The manager who shows an innate sense of good taste and eagerness to become friends with his patrons becomes an important part of his community's every day life, thus overcoming one of the most important so-called obstacles that might appear to deter his progress and that of his theatre. There is no other or better way to make patrons "feel at home" than to express appreciation of the fact that they have attended your theatre.

All the time that a new manager is building up his acquaintanceship around town, and building these into firm friendships, he must certainly find ways and means of letting all of these friends and acquaintances know what is playing at his theatre. Since he can't spend a lot of money in newspaper or radio advertising he must find other ways to communicate with his potential audience and tell what he has to offer.

Mailing lists, carefully culled periodically to be kept very much alive and departmentalized so that mailing expenses are not wasted but expended on pictures for which an appeal to the entire mailing list would be unnecessary, are effective. Monthly calendar sheets in which titles of attractions are printed in the space set for days on the calendar, are good if bookings can be made that far in advance. Advertising the theatre's telephone number on the screen, in the lobby, on mailing pieces is a good method of keeping the number before the public. When calls come in they should be given every courtesy. Full information should be given to persons inquiring. It should be done briefly, courteously, but ALL of it should be included.

Persons answering the theatre telephone should be trained to give whatever essential information is required—and if the inquirer seems talkative and time permits, the theatre telephone girl or man might very well talk informally about some of the film's special attributes, its star values, its action if any, its dramatic content, etc.

Kiddie matinees, the use of regularly distributed window cards, posting in strategic locations, special contests, activities in connection with patriotic and civic events, all are important facts of exploitation in connection with neighborhood theatres.

By keeping in close contact with patrons, by arranging a screen show to suit the tastes of the average person, by evidencing sincerity in his desire to afford his patrons pleasure within the limits of his theatre operation, the neighborhood manager can make his theatre so attractive that, except in rare cases, patrons will think of his theatre when movie time comes around.

HARTFORD

MERCHANTS WORK WITH THEATRES TO PROVIDE KID MATINEE PRIZES; WARNER HOUSES IN PRICE RISE

Kids are getting a break in Hartford now over and above what they got before. The Lyric and Rialto, both Hartford Theatres Circuit houses, have run a special giveaway matinees for children with the prizes including cameras. Another house, the Daly, ran a similar matinee. Local merchants are cooperating with the theatres on the deals.

Meanwhile the Central at West Hartford, will offer a series of Saturday morning special children matinees, starting Nov. 2, working in cooperation with the Audio-Visual Aids Committee of the town Board of Education. Hugh Campbell is manager of the Central.

Prices went up five cents this week in two downtown Warner circuit theatres, the Strand and the Regal. In New Britain, the Music Box Theatre has increased children's admission from 11 cents to 16 cents.

Roger Dion, one time doorman at the Capitol in Willimantic, is the new assistant manager of the Regal, Hartford, succeeding Pat Bucherri, resigned.

The son of a Connecticut theatre owner has been nominated by the Connecticut Republicans for the post of State Treasurer, to run in the November elections. The nominee is Joseph Adorno, son of the Palace, Middletown, owner.

The Cameo, West Haven, reopened last week, after having been renovated.

Ben Simon, who manages the 20th-Fox exchange in the Elm City, has a new car. Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres advertising-publicity director, and Nat D. Fellman, Warner Theatres executive, were among New Haven visitors last week. Among the Hartford theatremen going down to the exchange area last week: Charles Repass of the Crown, Maurice Shulman, Webster and Rivoli; Al Schuman, Hartford Theatres Circuit.

Birthday greetings go to Harvey King, who was made a member of Local 84, IATSE, Hartford, in 1901, when the Hartford Local got its charter. Last week, a group of Local members, including Charlie Obert of the M&P Allyn; Rube Lewis, Loew's Poli Palace; Connie Feeley, State; and Jim Winn, freelance member, Local 84; Harry Sweet, Strand, held a party in honor of the longtime Local 84 member.

Tom Grogan, manager of the Strand, Thompsonville, has recovered from an attack of bronchial pneumonia. Joe Angelica was the relief manager at Thompsonville. Peter Perakos of the Perakos Theatres, which operate the Strand, Thompsonville, and other theatres in Connecticut, broke his left arm recently.

Harry F. Shaw, division manager for Loew's Poli-New England circuit, last week, made arrangements for the screenings of "No Help Wanted," an American Legion film concerning physically handicapped veterans, in Loew's Poli theatres in Hartford, Bridgeport, and New Haven. The screenings were in conjunction with "National Employ the Physically Handicapped" Week drive.

John Hazelton Donovan, who was a projectionist at Middletown motion picture theatres for many years, died last week.

HARRISBURG

Two extra Saturday shows occupied the younger fry last week-end, with Loew's Regent's Cartoon Carnival, and the Rio's special showing of Roy Rogers in "Roll On, Texas Moon." Sam Gilman sponsored a two-hour all-cartoon show with 17 different subjects, and had a sell-out. Francis Deverter, remembering the overflow crowds always turned away Saturdays for Rogers vehicles, advertised an early Saturday morning show for "All Kids from 6 to 60." A sell-out here was reported also.

A special preview of "The Bells of St. Mary's" was given by Roy Osman, manager of the Paxtang, for priests, nuns and officials of the Catholic Diocese of this area, and for children of the Children's Homes of the section. The preview prefaced the recent three-day run of the picture.

Lou Schiffman, owner of the National and Rialto, and his family have returned from a short holiday in Atlantic City, and are planning to go back later this month.

A visitor this week was Ruth Gerber Mohl, former Telegraph movie reviewer, who was en route from Boston to Seattle, where her husband will practice law.

Meyer Adelman, Philadelphia, visited Roy V. Osman, Paxtang. Adelman is a co-owner of the theatre.

Visiting Bill Whyte, Star, was George Pappas, Milton theatre man.

A repainting and general renovation job at the National, and at the Rialto is under way, Ira L. Schiffman, owner-manager, reports. Colored neon lights have been placed in glass-brick sides of the ticket office at the National; new foyer doors have been placed and painted; and an acoustic ceiling and fluorescent lights in Schiffman's office at the former. At both houses new rubber matting in the foyer has been laid.

VANCOUVER

Matt Carroll, who has operated the 375-seat Rex Theatre, Salmon Arm, B.C. for many years, has sold to the Salmon Arm Community Association, which will operate it.

Theatre business settled down to a steady pace the last week, replacing the spotty pace of the past few weeks. Cool weather and the end of daylight saving has been responsible.

Johnny Bernard, promoted to the Circle here, was presented a pen and pencil set by his former staff at the Odeon in North Vancouver. Al Goodwin Varsity follows Bernard at the Odeon. Norman Reay takes over at the Varsity, Al Narvey Fraser goes to the North Vancouver Lonsdale and Don McLean becomes manager of the Rio. The Odeon circuit now operates 17 theatres in Greater Vancouver.

Walter Du Perrier, former booker at Empire-Universal, Winnipeg, has been made salesman at the Calgary office for the Alberta territory.

J. Max Garfin has sold his Chaba Theatre at Jasper Alta, which he operated for the past 15 years and will make his home in Vancouver.

Frank Gow and Maynard Joiner, Famous Players heads in B.C., have returned from a 10-day visit to Toronto where they attended a meeting of all F.P. heads in Canada.

The Cole Circuit which operated theatres at Blairmore, Coleman, and Bellvue in the Crows Nest Pass District have sold their interests to Pursell and Sons, who formerly operated theatres at Peace River and Wainwright, Albert.

The Rio Theatre at Victoria, after playing Foto-Night for the past six months has discontinued it.

The new Rex Theatre at Bowness near Calgary was opened recently. It will be in charge of two returned veterans, Les Lunde and Edward Walker, and will change three times weekly on a single bill policy.

Bill Cole, Jr., has taken over the Opera house at Michel, B.C., from a former circuit and has also purchased the interests of Joe Altomare in the Empress, Natal.

The Girvin Art shop of Vancouver has just completed an outstanding job in decorating two theatres of the Warren chain in the Alberni District, the Capitol, Port Alberni, and the Roxy, Alberni. Warren also operates Radio Station CJAV there.

"Caesar and Cleopatra," which was expected to do big things, failed to do better than average business in the very English City of Victoria where it played day and date at the Plaza and Oak Bay Theatres. Not enough exploitation is blamed.

FOLLOWS THE TRAILBLAZER. The coming-of-age of Adolph Zukor's grandson, Adolph II, last week, served to spotlight the tremendous strides and revolutionary changes undergone by the film industry since Paramount's board chairman was the same age. Adolph II, son of Eugene Zukor, Paramount studio executive, now works for the same company for which his grandad worked on his 21st birthday. The photos above show Adolph the first and Adolph the second at the same age, 21 years.

FILM ROW TALK CENTERS ON MEAT, WORLD SERIES; STORK, WEDDING BELLS BUSY

World series bets and how to get meat are the two topics which film row is discussing this week. With a number of companies not having any large number of releases set, the row is pretty much as dead as some of the unexpectedly hot days which pop up. But whenever an exchange group gathers, it's either men and women talking about baseball, women discussing how hard it is to get meat, or men wondering why their wives can't book a pot roast or a steak with the butcher more regularly.

The march that Mendelssohn wrote is going to sound out, figuratively anyway, for two film row workers next month. Muriel Cappel of United Artists is marrying Philip Max Roth on Oct. 26, and Eleanor Lowenthal of Monogram will promise to love, honor and obey Joseph Swedlay on Oct. 24.

The United Artists femme corps incidentally was in a dither about the shower they were throwing for Muriel, a protracted argument over the qualities of sweet peas and sweetheart roses resulting, with roses winning when the florist said sweet peas would wilt.

the city council passed a 5 per cent ticket tax and the houses were boarded up in protest. Mayor Julian Bagby defended the act by saying real property was carrying too big a load in the city tax structure and that if the federal government could raise revenue by theatre taxes the city could also. The two chains and one independent operating there say the theatres will stay closed until the tax is repealed since other business houses aren't taxed in the same fashion.

ALBANY

Fred I. Archibald, publisher, and George O. Williams, managing editor of the Times-Union were guests at the Variety Club weekly dinner held last Monday for their part in the success of Denial Day last year. Dinner was held at Jack's Restaurant where plans were outlined for this year's Denial Day, proceeds of which will make it possible for hundreds of under-privileged children to enjoy a summer vacation at Boys Club Camp Thacher on Thompson Lake, N. McDONOUGH HEADS THEATRE MANAGERS ASS'N; ODEON PLANS $1,000,000 BUILDING PROGRAM

Since June 1, when the film-classification policy of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors went into effect, 35 features have been graded "Adult Entertainment," the list comprising sex, crime and horror subjects. No statistics are available to enable a comparison with the number of features approved for general audiences. During the fiscal year ending March 31, the Ontario Board reviewed 480 features and, based on that total, the Provincial censors may have dealt with 150 to 160 films during the recent period, at least one-quarter of all features are being placed in the adult classification.

14 Originals, 6 Plays, 22 Novels on WB List

Of 42 story properties assigned to seven producers by Jack L. Warner, executive producer of Warner Bros., to be launched in the coming year, 22 are published novels, six are plays and 14 are originals.

Novels include "The African Queen," "The Apple Orchard," "Calamity Jane," "Dark Passage," "Ethan Frome," "The Fountainhead," "The Glass Room," "Serenade," "The Iron Gate," "A Man of Our Town," "The Country Lawyer," "The Man Without Friends," "Moby Dick," "Quietly My Captain Waits," "Rebel Without Cause," "Ships in the River," "Tomorrow is Another Day," "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," "Trilby," "The Turquoise," "The Unsuspected," and "The Life of Will Rogers," from "Uncle Clem's Boy."

The plays are "Wallflower," "The Hasty Heart," "Autumn Crocus," "Howdy, Stranger," "Lady Windermere's Fan" and "The Unfaithful."

Originals consist of "Barbary Host," "Bill's Gay Nineties," "Don Juan," "The Forty-Niners," "For Sentimental Reasons," "A Kiss in the Dark," "Mr. Broadway," "Need for Each Other," "One Last Fling," "Silver Lining," "Three Bad Men," "Thunder Valley," "Whiplash" and an untitled story by Curt Siodmak.

Producers who will share the assignments are Henry Blanke, Robert Buckner, Owen Crump, Alex Gottlieb, Charles Hoffman and Jerry Wald.

Laughton Cast in 'Arch of Triumph'

Charles Laughton will play the part of Haake in the Ingrid Bergman-Charles Boyer co-starer, "Arch of Triumph" at Enterprise. Laughton replaces Michael Chekov, who had to withdraw because of illness. The assignment marks the first time Laughton has portrayed a Nazi on the screen.

Laughton had been previously scheduled to appear in the play "Galileo," production of which will be postponed to enable him to start immediately on the "Arch" set.

King Bros. Buy 'Rip'

Paul Jarrico's script of "Rip Van Winkle" has been purchased from Monogram by the King Bros., who will produce the screen version of the famous story in color at a budget of $1,250,000. Extensive tests for the actor to portray the title role are now under way, with production scheduled to start before the end of the year for Monogram release.

To Use Ecktrachrome

One of the first companies to utilize Ecktrachrome, new Eastman color process for still pictures, will be the Hakim-Litvak organization. During production of "Time to Kill" a large number of test portraits will be made of co-stars Barbara Bel Geddes and Henry Fonda.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Hollywood Strike Is Again Aggravated as 1,500 Film Workers Vote to Respect Picket Lines of the CSU in Defiance of IATSE; Production Manages to Continue

With some 1,500 film workers early this week voting to observe picket lines of the striking Conference of Studio Unions in defiance of their non-striking parent union, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, the Hollywood strike situation was again aggravated, with the possibility that processing of film may be seriously impeded, if not altogether halted. Last week—when the following report was being written—no solution had been found for the two-week-old strike. After concentrating at Warners, MGM and Republic, the pickets changed their attack to Columbia and Technicolor. While a solution was being discussed at the AFL convention in Chicago, the CSU determinedly maintained its picketing against the majors, with the independents still untouched. The CSU declares it will not halt the strike until the "clarification" of the AFL directive has been put into effect and a contract signed with the producers. While no one can challenge the fact that production has been affected, the studios nevertheless have managed to complete some films and start others.

Columbia Still Going

Despite receiving the brunt of the picketing during most of the week, and being the scene of dramatic struggle between club-wielding police and bloodied pickets, Columbia kept rolling. "Lady from Shanghai" wasn't affected in that it was shooting at Acapulco, Mexico, where location will be maintained for a month. Glenn Anders left a sick bed to accompany Rita Hayworth, Orson Welles and the rest of the troupe on their southward flight.

"Law of the Canyon," fourth "Durango Kid" effort starring Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette, started this week at Iverson's Ranch, with Nancy Saunders in the femme lead. Lillian Wells, ex-Broadway showgirl, was given her first dramatic stint by being awarded a supporting chore in the Richard Dix-Karen Morley drama, "The Hunter Is a Fugitive." Columbia picked up William Bloom's option as associate producer; his next is "Millie's Daughter," which was set to roll late this week.

RKO Starts Western

RKO finally got that western going. Originally tagged "To the Last Man," it is now "Thunder Mountain." Cast includes Tim Holt, Richard Martin, Martha Hyer and Robert Clarke. Herman Schlom produces and Lew Landers directs. Alerted for trouble several times, RKO still—at this date—is conspicuous by its absence of pickets. Moroni Olsen was added to the Hakim-Litvak Production, "A Time to Kill," which was scheduled to leave for location this week.

Howard Hughes made a loan of a big transport plane to "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer," marking the first time one of the huge ships has been "signed" for a role. The plane will be used for four days of shooting at Long Beach airport. Frank Capra was scheduled to shoot one day, October 15, on "It's a Wonderful Life," adding a "heaven" scene. Players being used are James Stewart, Donna Reed, Beulah Bondi, Henry Travers and Todd Karns. A pair of lion cubs was flown from Montreal to Hollywood for Sol Lesser's "Tarzan and the Huntress"; the cubs' mother accompanied them. The company has been on location 40 miles out of town.

All's Well at Monogram

Monogram, being outside the pale of the 10 majors, has gone on its merry way during the strike. Roy Del Ruth has taken his "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" company to a ranch for exteriors, marking the fourth location for the picture. Del Ruth, who produces and directs, hopes to finish the sophisticated comedy this weekend.

Producer Sam Katzman, who just finished one for Columbia, returns to his old "alma mater," Monogram, for a Teen-Age film. The picture, "Teen-Agers Go West," is being directed by Arthur Dreifuss. Jerry Wald's band will appear, as well as the Spade Cooley western outfit.

Enterprise Active

Enterprise is going to town, despite trouble it had earlier in the CSU controversy. Two films are being shot. One is "Arch of Triumph," which has been going for some time; and the second is "The Other Love," which just began. Latter is a David Lewis production from Erich Maria Remarque's unpublished novel, starring Barbara Stanwyck, David Niven and Bob Stack. Supporting players to date include Joan Lorring and Maria Palmer. The budget is set for $2,000,000 and a three-month shooting schedule.

UA Units Working

Jules Levey continues to make progress with his "New Orleans" on the Roach lot, although that studio has been picketed. Woody Herman and his band finished their stint, but ended in a blaze of jazz glory. The scene ran six minutes without a break, shifting from a concert rendition of a number to a swing version. Dorothy Patrick began by singing with 60-piece symphony orchestra, then came Herman with his band, 26 choral singers, three piano soloists and an organist! Arturo de Cordova shares lead honors with Miss Patrick, on loan from MGM.

"Vendetta," Preston Sturges' period piece about feuding, is on location for three weeks,

Ian McDonald was inked by Warners for a role in United States Pictures' "Pursued," starring Teresa Wright and Robert Mitchum. Raoul Walsh directs and Milton Sperling is producing.

'Heard Them Sing' on Thalia Prods. Schedule

"I Heard Them Sing," novel by Ferdinand Reyher, will be adapted to the screen by the recently formed Thalia Productions, headed by Sol Lesser and Edward G. Robinson. The latter will play a top role in the picture, which will be released through United Artists.

The first Thalia production, "The Red House," starring Robinson and Lon McCallister, has been completed.

Script to Schnee

Charles Schnee, following his completion of the screenplay of "The River Is Red" for Howard Hawks, has been signed by Hal Wallis to write the screenplay of "Deadlock," based on the Oscar Serlin Broadway play, "The Beggars Are Coming to Town."

Tone to Eagle Lion

The signing of Franchot Tone on a two-picture deal was announced last weekend by Bryan Foy, Eagle Lion vice-president in charge of production. Tone first will star in "There Goes the Groom," romantic comedy with Ann Richards, after which he will co-star with Joan Leslie in "Repeat Performance."

Signed for 'Fugitive'

J. Carrol Naish has been signed by Argosy Pictures for a top featured role in "The Fugitive," the company's first production for RKO Radio release. The feminine lead will be played by Dolores Del Rio.

Prepare Large Scale Films for Production

With the completion of "Hit Parade of 1947," Republic has already completed six of its high-budgeted films for 1946-47, according to Allen Wilson, studio vice-president in charge of production.

Other large scale productions scheduled to go before the cameras within the coming months include "Gallant Man," starring Don Ameche and Catherine McLeod, with Frank Borzage directing; "Will Tomorrow Ever Come?," starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey, with Allan Dwan as associate producer and director; "Wyoming," starring William Elliott and Vera Ralston, with Joseph Kane as associate producer and director; "The Fabulous Texan," Edmund Grainger's initial production for Republic following his return from the service; and "Heaven for Jenny," an original story by Mary Loos and Richard Sale, which Allan Dwan will direct and serve as associate producer.

Title Selected

"Sleep My Pretty One" has been selected by Paramount as the title for its production from the novel "Instead of the Thorn" by Margaret Ferguson, recently purchased in England. Lenore Coffee will write the screenplay.

In 'Variety Girl' Cast

Nella Walker, seen as a mother in more than 200 films, has been signed by Paramount to play the manager of a Hollywood rooming house for would-be screen actresses in "Variety Girl."

Wells to Do Script

Billy K. Wells has been signed by producer Arthur W. Kelly to write the screenplay for "Kilroy Was Here," which United Artists will release. Kelly's first picture will be the screen version of the Eric Baume novel, "Half Caste," to be produced by Benjamin Glazer.

Pereira's New Pact

William Pereira, whose recent RKO production assignments include "Johnny Angel" and "From This Day Forward," has signed a new contract with the studio and is seeking material for his first production under the new setup.

To Design Costumes

Honoria Plesch has been engaged to design the costumes for Martha Scott and Patricia Roc in "So Well Remembered," two RKO-Rank production based on the James Hilton best seller now being filmed in England.

Will Portray Millie

Columbia has named Gladys George to play Millie in "Millie's Daughter," in which Gay Nelson, a newcomer to the screen, will play the title role. Sidney Salkow will direct the film.

D'Andrea in 'Passage'

Tom D'Andrea has been set for an important role in Warners' Humphrey Bogart-Lauren Bacall starrer, "Dark Passage."

HOLLYWOOD

'Return of Badmen' On RKO Schedule

"Return of the Badmen" has been placed on the RKO Radio production schedule as a vehicle for Randolph Scott and George "Gabby" Hayes, who starred in "Badman's Territory" and the recently completed "Trail Street." Associated in the sequel will be the same production team responsible for the two preceding films, Jack J. Gross as executive producer and Nat Holt as producer.

Bad men to be seen will be the James Brothers, the Dalton Boys, Billy the Kid, Bill Doolin and many of the women outlaws of the period. Carrie Nation, the original prohibitionist, also plays a prominent part in the story. Production is scheduled to start around the first of the year.

Mercury Players Cast in Welles-Hayworth Starrer

With the exception of Rita Hayworth's role, every line spoken in English in "The Lady from Shanghai," will be uttered by a Mercury Theatre player, Orson Welles has disclosed. Welles wrote the script, and is directing, producing and co-starring with Miss Hayworth for Columbia release.

Two top supporting roles will be filled by Everett Sloane and Ted de Corsia, both Mercury veterans and long-time performers on the New York stage and national radio networks.

Fontaine Opposite Peck In 'Earth, High Heaven'

Through arrangements concluded with Rampart Productions, new producing organization controlled by William Dozier and Joan Fontaine, Samuel Goldwyn has borrowed Miss Fontaine to play the role of Erica opposite the Marc of Gregory Peck in the forthcoming Technicolor screen version of Gwethalyn Graham's controversial novel "Earth and High Heaven."

Howard Koch, who is doing the screenplay, recently visited authoress Graham in Montreal, locale of the story, going over scenes to be recreated in the picture, much of which will be photographed in Canada. Production will probably commence in the late spring of 1947.

Salkow Directs 'Millie'

Sidney Salkow has been signed by Columbia to direct "Millie's Daughter," in which Gay Nelson makes her film debut as the feminine lead. William Bloom will produce the picturization of the novel of the same name by Donald Henderson Clarke.

Contacting Exhibitors

Nat Holt, who recently completed "Trail Street" for RKO Radio, is taking a vacation motor trip through the southwest visiting exhibitors in 25 various locations. Once a theatreman himself, Holt likes to keep in personal touch with that branch of the industry.

Bennett Promoted

Spencer Bennett, who has co-directed serials for Republic for the past several years, has been promoted to feature director and has been assigned to direct the forthcoming Trucolor musical western, "Along the Oregon Trail," which stars Monte Hale and Adrian Booth.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

after which it goes to another outdoor site, where a complete Corsican village has been constructed. Howard Hawks was forced to change his feminine lead in "Red River," on location in Arizona, when he discovered for the first time that Margaret O'Sheridan—a recent discovery—was going to have a baby. Joanne Dru, Dick Haymes' wife, was rushed in as a substitute.

Hal Roach is shooting "Who Killed Doc Robin?"

Paramount Lessens Activity

Paramount is a little off of its strong pace of the past month or so, with a quartet of films rolling. "Dear Ruth" was completed with shooting of New York subway sequences. John Miljan went into Cecil B. DeMille's "Unconquered" as court prosecutor. The Hal Wallis Production, "Desert Town," moved again on its numerous location hops, where exteriors for the Technicolor picture are being made. The young players, Roberta Jonay and Janet Thomas, were added to "Variety Girl," both to portray just what they are—aspiring actresses. The first addition to the cast of "The Big Haircut" since it started a month ago, is Gaylord Pendleton.

'Amber' on Fox Horizon

A tentative starting date of October 21 has been announced for the renewed version of "Forever Amber," which failed to connect on its initial start some months ago. When it does get rolling, Otto Preminger is scheduled to direct the William Perlberg production. Cast so far for the second start includes Linda Darnell, replacing Peggy Cummins as Amber; Cornel Wilde, Richard Greene, George Sanders, Glenn Langan and John Russell.

"Boomerang" continues at Stamford, Conn., with a constant flow of New York stage talent reinforcing the cast. On the home lot, "The Home Stretch" and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" are shooting.

Less Action at MGM

Metro has had the heat taken off its back by the continuous chain of incidents relative to the strike, with the issuance of an injunction that has kept picketing to a mere token force. But with the completion of another film, the Culver City lot is lessening its activity. "This Time for Keeps" has been finished, in time for star Esther Williams to rest until her blessed event occurs.

Van Heflin and Donna Reed were reunited for the first time in four years when they made their screen tests together. They are together again in "Green Dolphin Street," in which Lana Turner and Richard Hart are also starred. Victor Saville directs.

Nearly Quiet on WB Front

Warners, one of the first studios to get hit by the CSU, has settled down to a comparatively quiet phase. "Pursued" is being completed this week, with director Raoul Walsh bringing home the Milton Sperling U. S. Pictures production. "The Woman in White" has been rolling almost a month, with Henry Blanke producing. Blanke is also producing "Deep Valley," with Dane Clark, Ida Lupino and Wayne Morris.

Next film for Warners to start will probably be "Deep Passage," Saturday Evening Post yarn for which the studio paid $35,000. Humphrey Bogart is set to star in this first film under his new long-term deal. Picture will possibly jump off on location at San Francisco, where most of the action takes place.

Moroni Olsen is a busy guy. Just added to an RKO picture, he is also doing the part of a famed theatrical producer in "My Wild Irish Rose," which William Jacobs is producing.

Republic Starts Two

Republic, which has been the very recent scene of so much violence and strike difficulty, nevertheless succeeded in completing "Hit Parade of 1947" and "Outlaws of Sioux City," the latter a Red Ryder. "Web of Danger," long-delayed action drama, was scheduled to start, with Adele Mara, Bill Kennedy (former Warner Bros. player), Damian O'Flynn (last seen in "Bachelor's Daughters") and Richard Loo. Another likely starter is "Along the Oregon Trail," Trucolor Monte Hale-Adrian Booth starrer.

Ron Davidson, who used to produce serials, is writing screenplays. His current opus is "Daredevils of the Sky."

'Egg' Begins at U-I

Universal-International, where Deanna Durbin's "I'll Be Yours" is in production, started another, "The Egg and I," starring Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Louise Allbritton, Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride.

PRC Shoots 'Stallion'

Up by Mount Shasta, PRC continues with its first extra-budget effort, "The Red Stallion," which Eagle Lion producer Ben Stoloff is reining. The outdoor, animal story is being directed by Lesley Selander, with a cast headed by Noreen Nash, Robert Paige, Ted Donaldson and Jane Darwell.

Lucille Ball to Co-Star In Stromberg Production

Lucille Ball, on loan-out from MGM to Hunt Stromberg, has been set to co-star with George Sanders in Stromberg's latest production, "Personal Column." Miss Ball will be the only American to appear in the picture, which will utilize an all-star British cast.

A camera crew will be dispatched to England shortly to photograph authentic English scenes in and around London. Production is scheduled to start late this month, with Douglas Sirk directing.

Welcome Home, June

June Harris, who deserted Hollywood two years ago for Broadway, has returned to the cinema city and signed a contract with Paramount. The hazel-eyed brunette has appeared in a number of films, including Paramount's "Incendiary Blonde" and "Bring on the Girls." She interrupted her screen career to study in New York at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, and worked as a Conover model in her spare time.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Lightning Raiders

PRC Western 59 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A good Buster Crabbe western.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: On a par with the standard set by the predecessors in this series.

Cast: Buster Crabbe, Al "Fuzzy" St. John, Mady Laurence, Henry Hall, Steve Darrell, I. Stanford Jolley, Karl Hackett, Roy Brent, Marin Sais, Al Ferguson. Credits: Producer, Sigmund Neufeld. Director, Sam Newfield. Original screenplay, Elmer Clifton. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh.

Plot: Billy Carson and his sidekick, "Fuzzy," have quite a time tracking down the operators of a stolen-mail racket, but finally succeed. Two people are murdered before Billy gets evidence on the leading citizen of the community, who has been stealing mail to blackmail certain people and force others into turning over their belongings to him.

Comment: Like most of PRC's Buster Crabbe westerns this one was made last year. This offering is a good action-packed outdoor opus that will meet with the approval of the Crabbe fans. Story is slightly off the beaten track of formula westerns, in that instead of the usual gold or silver robberies of stagecoaches, letters are the loot. Because of this, the picture is surprisingly entertaining, for there's a considerable amount of suspense besides the chases, fighting and slaying that make westerns what they are.

Bringing Up Father

Monogram Comedy 68 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A screen visual of the famous cartoon strip of the same name, with perfect casting of Joe Yule in the role of Jiggs and Renie Riano as Maggie. Good entertainment for the masses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well at the box-office because of the wide popularity of the comic strip.

Plot: In her efforts to get into society Maggie becomes involved in a scheme to shut down Dinty Moore's. She talks Jiggs into helping her, never realizing that they are both doing harm to old pals. When the injunction comes through and Jiggs realizes what he had done, he manages to right the wrong and Maggie helps him do so.

Comment: Perfect casting and the fundamental gags that have made the comic strip "Bringing Up Father" so popular with so many people makes this picture a very good offering for the masses. They will enjoy the visual picture Joe Yule makes of Jiggs and Renie Riano's Maggie will be found a perfect delineation of that funny-paper character. And they'll get plenty of entertainment from the familiar material used such as the friends Jiggs meets and carries on with at Dinty's and the trouble Maggie gets into because of her social ambitions. Tim Ryan, Jack Norton, Joe Devlin, Dick Ryan and others are easily recognizable as Jiggs barroom buddies. Only addition is a character portrayed by Pat Goldin, who does an outstanding job as the silent figure who wanders in and out of many of the proceedings. Another effective gag is having George McManus, creator of the cartoon strip, appear throughout the film without any introduction until the finale. Two songs are used, both of which will garner many laughs. Credit for the production and direction, and also for the original story, go to Barney Gerard and Eddie Cline, respectively.

Nocturne

RKO Radio Drama 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) For an outstanding, suspenseful mystery drama with all the essential elements neatly blended, the average theatregoer will find this one comparable to the best they've seen. They will be thoroughly entertained, and the armchair detectives will find themselves challenged by the solution.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This is outstanding fare for class, neighborhood and subsubsequent-run houses. Has the name draw of George Raft and Lynn Bari for situations where they have a following.

Cast: George Raft, Lynn Bari, Virginia Huston, Joseph Pevney, Myrna Dell, Edward Ashley, Walter Sande, Mabel Paige, Bernard Hoffman, Mack Gray, Queenie Smith. Credits: Produced by Joan Harrison. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Screenplay by Jonathan Latimer. Photography, Harry J. Wild.

Plot: In spite of the police verdict that a songwriter committed suicide, a detective goes out on his own to prove a murder case. Among the dead man's effects is a history of his philandering, which causes the detective to seek out each of the girls in his past. As he eliminates them, he gets closer to the solution and ends up by finding an unsuspected person as the murderer.

Comment: For a good, suspenseful mystery drama that has all the essential elements neatly blended, an exhibitor would have to look far to find one that would please his patrons better than this one. In relative excellence, "Nocturne" is comparable to any of the proven box-office successes, from the exceptionally good story down to the last production detail. Audiences will find themselves completely absorbed by the proceedings, with armchair detectives thoroughly challenged by the solution. For class, neighborhood and subsequent-run houses this picture should prove a particularly outstanding offering. Though everybody connected with its making deserves the highest praise, the film shows the guiding hand of Joan Harrison, the producer, whose early training under Alfred Hitchcock is evident throughout. George Raft gives a smooth performance as the detective and Lynn Bari is excellent as the suspect. Among the supporting players, fine portrayals are turned in by Virginia Huston, Joseph Pevney and Myrna Dell, and Edward L. Marin gets credit for the skillful direction.

Trigger Fingers

Monogram Western 58 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A fair western that is better than the preceding Brown releases in the current series.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do nicely at the ticket window, with Johnny Mack Brown a hardy perennial, plus names of Raymond Hatton and Jennifer Holt.

Plot: Johnny Mack Brown comes over from Texas to see his old pal, Raymond Hatton, and is just in time to help Hatton save the day. Before the shooting is over, Brown, known as "Hurricane" and the deadliest shot in the West, saves Hatton's son from hanging. Hatton, a blacksmith, sells his ranch to a supposed desert "rat," who is actually an escaped convict looking for gold left on Hatton's premises The escaped convict is finally arrested after several murders, and Brown rides away again.

Comment: This effort is the best of the current Brown series, with a neatly woven script by Frank H. Young largely responsible, plus a veteran cast. Jennifer Holt is a better-than-average heroine; Steve Clark a sharp wolf in sheep's clothing as the escaped convict, and Riley Hill a convincing well-meaning, but wide-eyed youth. Brown, as usual, is a manly, splendid-appearing western star; and Hatton does the best job he's done in some time as the honest blacksmith. The picture has its share of action, and while it slows up perceptibly in parts, it has enough dash and pace to satisfy the average fan.

The Chase

United Artists Drama 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A strange, tense, exciting melodrama with strong entertainment value for adult audiences. Not for young children.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Cast names are strong enough for initial draw and the film should build to good business on the strength of positive word-of-mouth. It's the kind of picture audiences are certain to talk about.

Cast: Robert Cummings, Michele Morgan, Peter Lorre, Steve Cochran, Lloyd Corrigan, Jack Holt, Don Wilson, Alexis Minotis, Nina Koshetz, Yolanda Lacca, James Westerfield, Shirley O'Hara. Credits: Produced by Seymour Nebenzal. Directed by Arthur Ripley. Screnplay by Philip Yordan, based on the novel "The Black Path of Fear" by Cornell Woolrich. Associate producer, Eugene Frenke. Photography, Franz Planer. Musical score, Michel Michelet.

Plot: Hungry and broke, ex-navy man Robert Cummings finds a wallet in a Miami street. He returns the wallet to Steve Cochran, is hired as chauffeur and learns that Cochran and his body-guard, Peter Lorre, are considerably less than the wealthy men about town they appear to be. Cochran is ruthless in his dealings with anyone who opposes him, exhibiting streaks of psycopathic cruelty. Michele Morgan, Cochrane's wife, is disillusioned and wants to be free but is terrified lest Cochrane learn of her attempts to go away. She offers Cummings money to get her to Havana and they conspire to leave together. They get to Havana where Michele is murdered and Cummings arrested. He escapes and is shot down. He awakes in his room in Miami, learns he has been dreaming about the escape, and calls the Naval Hospital. He vaguely remembers Miss Morgan. When his memory returns, he goes back to the house and takes Michele with him to Havana. Cochrane and Lorre are killed by a train as they race to intercept the couple.

Comment: There is a strong undercurrent of expectant excitement prevailing throughout this picture almost from the time the first scene appears on the screen, and which builds throughout the action until the closing scenes. The director has handled his cast with such skill, the actors play their difficult parts with such artistry and the screenplay has been so well done as to make the picture intensely interesting. Production values are excellent and opulent throughout. One thing that stands out in this stand-out film is the fact that director Arthur Ripley has not had to resort to trick camera angles and low key lighting to achieve the constant feeling of fearsome suspense that prevails throughout the picture. Instead, he has depended upon the skill of his cast and the convincing, logical story so excellently put into screenplay form by Philip Yordan to keep audiences on the edges of their respective seats. There are little directorial tricks, to be sure, but never are they permitted to intrude in the smooth development of the essential story. The death of the picture's two villains is a little pat but this is a minor criticism that probably will not be held as such by movie audiences. "The Chase" might well do top business if energetically exploited. It certainly should do strong, average business everywhere, building as word of its entertainment value spreads.

Margie

20th Century-Fox Comedy-Drama 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A completely captivating film, rich with nostalgia, charm and romance. Its authentic period settings and styles, its fine performances, skilled direction and well-rounded production values make it an offering that should have universal appeal. A picture any exhibitor should be proud to show to his patrons.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: While there are few big box-office names in its cast, with the possible exception of Jeanne Crain whose popularity is rapidly ascending, there are so many other fine qualities that word-of-mouth praise will quickly boost it to top box-office stature.

Cast: Jeanne Crain, Glenn Langan, Lynn Bari, Alan Young, Barbara Lawrence, Conrad Janis, Esther Dale, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ann Todd, Hattie McDaniel, Don Hayden, Hazel Dawn, Vanessa Brown, Diana Herbert, Milton Parsons, Margaret Wells, Warren Mills, Richard Kelton, Tom Stevenson, Cecil Weston. Credits: Produced by Walter Morosco. Directed by Henry King. Screenplay by F. Hugh Herbert. Based on stories by Ruth McKenney and Richard Bransten. Photography, Charles Clarke. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen. Technicolor director, Natalie Kalmus. Associate, Leonard Doss. Art direction, James Basevi and J. Russell Spencer. Musical direction, Alfred Newman. Musical number, Margie, written by Benny Davis, J. Russell Robinson and Con Conrad.

Plot: Told in retrospect by a mother to her 14-year-old daughter, this story goes back to 1928, the days of flagpole-sitters, goldfish-swallowers and rolled stockings. It tells of a high school romance and the excitement caused by a new French teacher. There's the "glamor girl" of that era and the shy, reserved girl who surprisingly wins and marries the handsome teacher.

Comment: There may be other pictures that will win high artistic awards when the balloting for this year's product is completed, but few will be invested with more genuine, down-to-earth, audience-appealing entertainment than "Margie." It is a completely captivating film, rich with nostalgia, charm and romance; and its authentic period settings and styles, its fine performances, skilled direction and well-rounded production values make it an offering that should have universal appeal. But in addition to a feast for the eye, there is also a sentimental and nostalgic sound track for the ear as hit tunes of the late '20s become a logical part of the proceedings. Some of them: Margie, Avalon, My Time Is Your Time, Button Up Your Overcoat, I'll See You in My Dreams, Three O'Clock in the Morning, April Showers, The Charleston, Diane and Ain't She Sweet. In the title role Jeanne Crain projects a generous measure of warmth and understanding as the shy, reserved girl who longs for what appears to be a well-nigh impossible romance and surprisingly gets it. Others members of the cast portray their types with true fidelity, with excellent performances credited to Glenn Langan, Lynn Bari, Alan Young, Barbara Lawrence, Conrad Janis, Esther Dale, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ann Todd and Hattie McDaniel. The Technicolor photography is one of the film's principal attributes, and Henry King's direction and Walter Morosco's production values leave nothing to be desired. "Margie" is a picture any exhibitor should be proud to show to his patrons; it is ideal entertainment for the entire family. While there are few big box-office names in its cast, with the possible exception of Jeanne Crain whose popularity is rapidly ascending, there are so many other fine qualities that word-of-mouth praise will quickly boost it to top box-office stature.

Child of Divorce

RKO Radio Drama 62 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Sombre throughout, this is somewhat heavy for entertainment in the pure sense of the word. Should get a sympathetic reception from the women, however.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable for double-bill programs. Plenty of exploitation angles.

Cast: Sharyn Moffett, Regis Toomey, Madge Meredith, Walter Reed, Una O'Connor, Doris Merrick, Harry Cheshire, Selmer Jackson, Lillian Randolph, Pat Prest, Gregory Muradian, George McDonald, Patsy Converse, Jo Ann Marlowe. Credits: Directed by Richard O. Fleischer. Based on the play, "Wednesday's Child" by Leopold L. Atlas. Written for the screen and produced by Lillie Hayward. Photography, Jack MacKenzie.

Plot: Sharyn Moffett's mother and father, Madge Meredith and Regis Toomey, are granted a divorce after the youngster has been compelled to testify in court. Custody of Sharyn is given to the mother for eight months and to the father for the remainder of the year. Madge remarries and Sharyn is unhappy to see her mother with any other man but her father; she is glad for the time spent with her father. When he remarries, the child becomes ill. At the suggestion of the family physician Sharyn is sent to a boarding school where she finds herself with other children of divorce who cynically but sympathetically tell her that visits from parents will change to letters and presents. Sharyn is convinced that she will just have to wait until she grows up before normal happiness can be hers.

Comment: "Child of Divorce" is a frank picturization of the unhappiness in which sensitive children often are thrust when their parents divorce and remarry. That it is well directed and acted is not enough to make the somewhat heavy situations entertaining in the pure sense of the word. The child's unhappiness is the film's motivation, and while most of the ladies in a screening room showed tears from time to time and probably will in every theatre where the picture is shown, most of the men present were apparently unmoved. There are plenty of angles for exploitation, and with the cooperation of Domestic Relations Courts in every locality the picture might do good business. It is suitable, in any case, for double-bill programs.

Deception

Warner Bros. Drama 112 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A fine offering for the Bette Davis fans, for she gives a powerful interpretation of a woman in love. It is a real tear-jerker, with plenty of heart-tugging emotion and other elements that will appeal to the women and entertain the men.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Sell it to the Bette Davis and Claude Rains fans. Word-of-mouth comment among the women should stimulate patronage.

Cast: Bette Davis, Paul Henreid, Claude Rains, John Abbott, Benson Fong. Credits: Produced by Henry Blanke. Directed by Irving Rapper. Screenplay by John Collier and Joseph Than. Based on a play by Louis Verneuil. Musical director, Leo F. Forbstein. Photography, Ernest Haller.

Plot: Reunited after the war years' separation, a cellist and his sweetheart are married. She neglects to tell him of her former relationship with a great composer because of his violent jealousy, and this neglect piles one lie on top of the other. The composer, in his own peculiar manner, starts a petty persecution of her and her husband. To kep her husband from learning the truth of her relationship with this man and also to give him the opportunity he needs to prove his ability, she kills the composer and then confesses all.

Comment: This is a fine offering for the Bette Davis fans. To them it will be a corroboration of what a splendid and capable actress their favorite is. For here Miss Davis gives a powerful interpretation of a role that requires deep, heart-tugging emotion to show the soul-stirring effects of a great love, and she rises to the heights with her understanding delineation. "Deception" is a real tear-jerker; one that has more appeal for women than men, although men too will find entertainment in the triangular love affair that motivates the story. It should be classed as "mainly for the Davis fans" because it is Miss Davis, with a great deal of

Film Company-Critics' Feud Flares; Goldwyn Girls' Visit a Showmanship Ace; British Stars Still Too Arty for Own Publicity Good; Wolff's Young Team

By JOCK MacGREGOR

Hot-tempered friction between film men and newspaper and radio critics blazed when MGM, who has taken a strong line on what they consider unjustified criticism, requested that Mrs. Arnot Robertson of BBC not review their pictures. In turn the lady's solicitor has written requesting an apology and compensation.

MacGregor

The real trouble is that too many of the critics are only interested in their conception of cinema "art," with the result that pictures designed for popular appeal are panned while some maudlin study in shadows is lauded to the skies. This makes for the absurd situation in which the majority of moviegoers rarely see the pictures which draw critics' applause in any of the regular cinemas while the maligned productions are prominent and greatly enjoyed by the great mass of the paying customers.

The seasoned and well established critics have a fine sense of values and deal with both types of pictures fairly. The trouble lies with the long-haired boys and short-haired girls whose critiques are suited for specialized journals but are out of place in newspapers for the millions.

The solution lies with the editors.

Whoever thought of bringing the Goldwyn Girls over here was inspired. Unquestionably this has proved the most successful publicity stunt since pre-war days. They have made front page news, been on the radio and photographed with every conceivable British subject from babies to your observer.

Dave Golding, Sam Goldwyn's newly appointed publicity director, has done a terrific job and the help he has received from RKO's publicity director, David Jones, by being put right about contacts, has been a fine example of Anglo-American co-operation.

Receptions and trade press lunches have been held in their honor and I had for my lunch partner blonde Martha Montgomery who seems to have everything that so many stars lack. I told her that I was sure that she would go far. She now tells me that she has just learned that she will play the second feminine lead in "Million Dollar Baby."

Talking of stars brings me to the lack of co-operation that many British studio publicists get from the artists when it comes to stills. I heard one being tipped off that if he wanted an Adonis to pose he would have to ask him tactfully. Unfortunately that is not an isolated case. Too often the still man is kept waiting for appointments. It is not surprising that Britain has few marquee names for America.

NORTH CENTRAL ALLIED MEET SET FOR NOV. 13; WILL CONSIDER NATIONAL ALLIED AFFILIATION

North Central Allied will hold its mid-year convention on Nov. 13 at Hotel Nicollet to discuss the possibility of affiliation with National Allied, the Board decided recently. Industry leaders and representatives of Allied States will be invited to the meeting which will be attended by independent exhibitors from western Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. NCA membership has reached an all-time high of 300, according to Ben Berger, president of the organization.

A regional meeting of NCA for all independent exhibitors in the area was held in Duluth at Hotel Duluth last Monday to discuss local checkers and the recent Statutory Court in regard to auction selling.

New on Film Row is Everett Lovelett, salesman at Columbia, who will cover northern Minnesota. Bill Wood, booker, is back at Paramount after a fling at running a theatre. Bonnie Lynch, formerly a booker at Paramount, has been made head contract clerk at the exchange. Corrine Rubel, formerly bookers' stenographer at Paramount, has left the exchange to go to Chicago to begin looking for an apartment in anticipation of her forthcoming marriage to Leonard Baker of Chicago.

The office force at Universal wondered why Marion Cooper, biller, did not come to work one day recently. The next day she surprised them all by announcing her marriage to Eldred Abrahamson.

ATLANTA

The "Open City" made a big hit at the Peachtree Art Theatre during its showing.

Coming to Atlanta for the world's premiere of "The Song of the South" Nov. 12 will be Walt Disney and wife, Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards, veteran MGM's musical star, Lusna Patten and Bobby Driscoll.

Clyde Goodson and Al Duren, Paramount's Atlanta Branch and Sales manager back from a sales meeting in New York. Ed Ashmore, formerly in the booking department of Paramount, has been appointed as head booker and office manager for Republic Pictures.

Lamar Trotti a native of Atlanta, now a top writer and producer for 20th Fox, will soon begin work on a screen play based on the book by Corra Harris, "A Circuit Rider's Wife."

Abe Borisky, formerly owner of the Independent Theatres, Chattanooga, Tenn., has leased the Pamtage Theatre, in Birmingham, Ala. and after extensive improvements will open about Dec. 1, with first-run pictures with name bands.

John K. Jenkins of Astor Pictures in Dallas came to Atlanta on a business trip with William (Snake) Richardson, also of Astor Pictures.

PORTLAND

Art Adamson added to his theatre circuit with the addition of the Liberty Theatre at

REGIONAL NEWSREEL

Ridgefield, Wash. and his new Park Rose Theatre in the suburbs of Portland.

Norman Goodin, operating the Oswego Theatre has opened his new Televue Theatre at Gladstone, Ore.

Austin Dodge and Roy Carpenter, who have operated the Myrtle Theatre at Myrtle Point and Bandon Theatre at Bandon, Oregon, have opened the new McKenzie Theatre at Springfield, Ore. where they also operate the Playmore Theatre.

The "Robin Hood" Theatre opened at Sherwood, Ore.

Jack L. Lovett, well known to the theatre trade has opened the Oregon Theatre Co-Operative, and at present is booking pictures for houses in Lebanon, McMinville, Laurelhurst, Portland, and also the Egyptian and Irvington in Portland. Others will be added soon.

PHILADELPHIA

GOLDMAN AND WIFE SLIGHTLY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH; ROB BOB LYNCH HOME OF JEWELS

Stanley Kositsky, Columbia salesman, is in the Municipal hospital, where he is under observation for possible infantile paralysis.

William Goldman, head of the theatre chain which bears his name, and his wife were slightly injured early Friday morning when the car in which their chauffeur was driving them, skidded on the wet streets and crashed into a light standard on Broad Street.

Irving Woermser, Columbia New York sales executive, was a Philadelphia exchange visitor.

The Wayne Theatre has been taken over by the Felts. Don Pasin, has joined the Columbia sales staff here. Dave Altman has joined Columbia as a student booker. Bob Lynch, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district manager here, made the headlines of the Philadelphia newspapers when robbers broke into his home, took a 300-pound safe containing $13,000 in cash, jewelry and negotiable securities.

Ed Hinchey, head of Warner's playdate department, was a visitor to the Philadelphia exchange. Hinchey had been in Philadelphia at one time connected with the Warner Theatres.

The MGM exchange is being hard hit by weddings, with Mildred Sannutti, Doris Greenberg, Joy Gerson, Marcelle Steinmetz and Norma Sharp, all set to promise a lot.

DALLAS

EZELL, UNDERWOOD AND STOUT FORM 5 NEW DRIVE IN UNITS

I. B. Adelman and Harry Sachs, who now have one theatre under construction on Lemmon avenue here, have announced plans for another house to be located at the corner of Samuels Drive and Beeman. Construction will start on the 1,000-seater as soon as building conditions permit. They recently purchased the Metro in Abilene, Texas.

Application of the Texas Consolidated Theatres at Waco for a parking area behind the Twenty-Fifth Street theatre there has been rejected by the city building inspector but an appeal has been made to the city board of adjustment. The application was rejected because the property behind the theatre is in a residential zone. The theatre will seek an extension to zoning in a hearing before the board come Oct. 22.

Late reports coming from San Antonio say the recent floods did some damage to film properties there though no major houses were hit as reported here last week. Damage at the National, deluxe Mexican, ran over $2,000 while lesser theatres had varying degrees of minor damage.

Karl Hoblitzelle, Interstate executive, was re-elected a director of Republic Gas Corp. recently.

Tom Kirk is getting set as the new Republic manager here. Russ Brown resigned to become PRC manager.

W. G. Underwood, Claude C. Ezell and R. Stout have received articles of incorporation for five drive-in theatre corporations to operate in this state as follows:

Winkler Drive-In Theatre Corp., Houston, $37,000 capital stock. Circle Drive-In Theatre Corp., Waco, $21,000; Cactus Drive-In Theatre Corp., Pharr, $9,000; Trail Drive-In Theatre Corp., San Antonio, $12,000, and Shepherd Drive-In Theatre Corp., Houston, $11,000.

COLUMBUS

RELIGIOUS MOVIES TO BE USED IN LUTHERAN FIGHT AGAINST JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

The Lutheran Press, a unit of the American Lutheran Church, will try out free showings of movies at 2 p.m., every Saturday and possibly once a week at night, in an effort to fight juvenile delinquency through the exhibition of religious movies. The move is the result of an experiment with an allegedly difficult case.

Donald K. Gibbs, projectionist at Loew's Ohio, was found dead this week with a pistol by his side. The coroner said it appeared to be suicide due to illness. Gibbs, a veteran of World War I, had been working until the day before his death. He is survived by his wife, Sylvia, a son, Doland; his Mother Mrs. Minner Schening, and a sister, Mrs. Joseph Hadfield. Burial was in Glen Rest Cemetery.

Neth's Markham Theatre opened after several days of darkness to permit redecoration. Owner J. Real Neth and his wife are back from a vacation in Mexico. Ray Holecher is the new projectionist at the Ohio; Joe Sloan, acting as relief manager for Loew's Midwester, is in New York for reassignment.

help from Claude Rains, who carries the load of the film. Actually, only three players appear in the cast (two others are listed but they have very minor roles). The principals are Miss Davis, Paul Henreid and Claude Rains. Henreid's role, though on an equal stature to hers, nevertheless is incidental to what Miss Davis has to do. But the part Rains plays is another thing. He turns in a portrayal of the temperamental composer, who is an all-around practitioner of the art of living and her ex-lover, that can be classed among the very best things he has done. His lines and his actions sparkle, and his performance is a tremendous challenge to Miss Davis' in every scene they share. For his fans, this potrayal will be a real treat, something worthy of much discussion. Because of the limited cast, the picture has a slow pace, but this will not be found detrimental by those who always enjoy a "Bette Davis picture." Several musical sequences, with full orchestra, add considerable enjoyment to the film, and the notable musical score includes Beethoven's Appassionata and a Haydn concerto, besides the original composition which bears the title of the film, all to be credited to Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Henry Blanke, who produced, has given the picture the very finest in production values and Irving Rapper does a swell job of direction.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

BEAUTY AND THE BANDIT (Mono.) Western. Principals: Gilbert Roland, Ramsey Ames, Martin Garralaga. Director, William Nigh. Plot: The daughter of a Paris underworld king falls in love with the Cisco Kid. She reforms, and helps him expose a plot to poison the farmers' livestock and grab their land. When the showdown comes, the head of the crooks is killed, the farmers get their land back, and Cisco rides on.

LIGHTHOUSE (PRC) Drama. Principals: Don Castle, June Lang, John Litel. Director, Frank Wisbar. Plot: A lighthouse keeper brings his bride home, not knowing that she and his partner were previously in love with each other. The three live a strained life alone on the island, until the ex-boy friend attempts to kill the husband and make love to his wife. When she confesses all the details of her past life, her husband forgives her and orders the interloper off the island.

APACHE ROSE (REP.) Trucolor. Principals: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Trigger. Director, William Witney. Plot: Rogers uncovers a plot, by the owner of a gambling ship, to grab the rich oil-bearing land belonging to two young people. With the blonde skipper of the "Apache Rose," Rogers defeats the gambler's plans and in a fight on the beach, captures and turns him over to police. Rogers is made a partner by the grateful young land-owners.

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.
Objection: Light treatment of marriage; reflects the acceptability of divorce.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

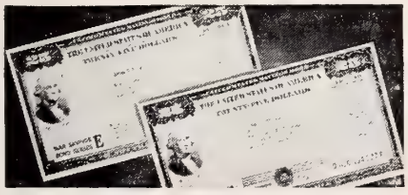
America finds a new, easy way to save



OUT of the war has come one blessing—a lesson in thrift for millions of those who never before had learned to save.

Enrolled under the Payroll Savings Plan in thousands of factories, offices, and stores, over 27 million American wage earners were purchasing "E" Bonds alone at the rate of about 6 billion dollars worth a year by the time V-J Day arrived.

With War Bond Savings automatically deducted from their wages every week, thrift was "painless" to these wage earners. At the end of the war, many who never before had bank accounts could scarcely believe the savings they held.

The moral was plain to most. Here was a new, easy way to save; one as well suited to the future as to the past. Result: Today, millions of Americans are continuing to buy, through their Payroll Savings Plan, not War Bonds, but their peacetime equivalent—U. S. Savings Bonds.

From war to peace! War Bonds are now known as U. S. Savings Bonds, bring the same high return—$25 for every $18.75 at maturity.

Out of pay—into nest eggs! A wage earner can choose his own figure, have it deducted regularly from earnings under Payroll Savings Plan.

New homes to own! Thousands of new homes, like this, will be partially paid for through Bonds wisely accumulated during the next five to ten years.

Keeping cost of living in check! Buying only needed plentiful goods and saving the money which would bid up prices of scarce goods keeps your cost of living from rising. Save automatically—regularly.

AMERICA

Living, Loving.

"In the beginning was the word."

The wisdom of these six words from the Old Testament* is respected by veteran movie-maker Samuel Goldwyn. In a career that all but spans the entire life of his industry, astute Producer Goldwyn has established a noteworthy record for wisely choosing words for translation to the screens of the world for the enjoyment and education of its people. Dodsworth, Dead End, Wuthering Heights, The Little Foxes, The Pride of the Yankees are among the 90 pictures that have resulted from his handiwork. But always he first had to find the words — significant words that would add up to significant stories, words that would be remembered.

One sultry August day in 1944 word-conscious Samuel Goldwyn was reading a news magazine, alert for words that would somehow suggest his next movie. The world was bloody with war. If, in the midst of this human agony, the world at large was too preoccupied with the desperate present to contemplate its future, Producer Goldwyn was an exception. His thoughts jumped forward to his country's future when a picture, spread across one of the magazine's pages, caught his sharp eye (TIME, Aug. 7, 1944). Out of the windows of a travel-soiled Pullman car stuck eleven pairs of khaki-clad shoulders, eleven faces, some smiling, some seemingly bewildered, some almost grimly expectant. Below the window were chalked two words: "Home Again!!"

"Home again," he murmured to himself. This was it. Some day America would again be home to all of them — all of them whose fate was not eternal sleep in foreign soil. The world would be weary of war. Why not, then, a picture about America and Americans? Its streets, drug-stores and banks. Its living, loving people; working, playing, loafing — in the new America of peace.

Producer Goldwyn's hand reached ou for the phone. "Get me MacKinlay Kantc — no, not Eddie — MacKinlay Kantor, th writer. He's in Palm Beach." Valedictor Long Remember, Gentle Annie, Hap Land had long ago stamped MacKinl Kantor as a writer with deep sympat for the American scene.

In a week the writer was in Hollyw hard at work on the story the produ had suggested to him and hired him to The result: Glory For Me, published novel by Coward-McCann and circul as the choice of the Literary Guild.

Still there was no screenplay. So Goldwyn had the telephone to his again, talking long distance to New with Pulitzer Prizewinning Playwright ert Emmet Sherwood. (Idiot's D Road to Rome, There Shall Be No N covery, Cathy O'Donnell were busy studying their lines for the roles in which they were cast. Then Mr. Goldwyn made a surprise announcement: the addition to the cast of Virginia Mayo and Harold Russell. Blonde, beautiful Virginia Mayo had played leads before in The Princess and the Pirate, Wonder Man, The Kid

from Brooklyn, though never in a tough, dramatic part. Harold Russell, a onetime
Army sergeant, had appeared before a movie camera only once before—in an Army Signal Corps film. However, Harold Russell is as American as apple pie and
Mr. Goldwyn felt somehow that he would be unforgettable.

Now, two years and $3,000,000 later,
Samuel Goldwyn's greatest picture is finished. Soon it will be seen on the screens of the world. A masterpiece of the contemporary scene, its title has been changed to The Best Years of Our Lives. It may well prove to be the best picture of our years.

ANOTHER TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY Warner OF TALKING PICTURES ACHIEVEMENT

Capra's Twentieth Year

Twenty years ago this week Frank Capra's first directorial effort, "The Strong Man," opened at the Strand Theatre in New York.

Since then, Capra productions have made box-office history . . . and profits for theatremen and the industry. Each one has been a credit to screen entertainment and contributed no little to the tremendous growth of the millions who make up the movie patrons of today.

At this writing his latest picture, and the first to be made and released under the Liberty Films banner—the company he organized along with William Wyler, George Stevens and Sam Briskin—is now nearing completion and from advance reports, Capra picks up where he left off when he entered the armed services. So look for a typically fine production in "It's a Wonderful Life."

Capra's producing organization is, undoubtedly, composed of men who know production from every angle. So, too, is his distributing unit headed by Ted O'Shea because here again he has brought into Liberty Films the best the industry has to offer in the way of manpower.

It is indeed a pleasure and a privilege to pay tribute to the twentieth anniversary of a great producer and a great man. The industry may well be proud of him and his achievements.

We are!

Happy Landings, Ed.

It is with genuine grief that the industry read the announcement of the death of Ed Kuykendall, for fourteen years president of the MPTOA and for all of those years a respected and honorable personality of our business.

It made no difference whether one agreed with Ed and his ideas and policies. One and all had to admit that whatever Ed did he did with the sincere courage of his convictions and, above all, in the hope that what he tried to do would help the exhibitor.

His passing is only cushioned by the fact that his illness had kept him close to home and, thus, kept him from his travels around the country where one would meet him on his trips to all scenes of exhibitor organization activity.

We extend our heartfelt condolences to his family who were almost as well and affectionately known around the industry as was Ed.

Moving Ahead

In its own quiet and efficient way, Screen Guild Productions, have been steadily moving ahead. This is a good sign for any venture especially in the business of motion pictures.

With key theatre operators and distributors of good background, the planning board for SG had carefully worked out its method of production and operations and then kept a close watch as those plans developed and crystalized.

This outfit comes closer to what this page has been praying for than any other possibility for new blood and expanded independent production and distribution. Without such new blood and new pictures the good old movie business would be plodding along in its own sweet way by the same old companies.

Any independent exhibitor who fails to lend the encouragement of bookings to Screen Guild would simply be putting himself on the spot. As LSMFT puts it: "Quality of product is essential to success" or words to that effect. From what we have seen of SG's efforts to date, the quality is certainly there. Perhaps not the quality of the top budget pictures of the big studios, but, definitely the quality of audience values that the average movie patron wants in exchange for his admission ticket.

With men like Johnny Jones, Bob Lippert and their associates steering the boat, it ought to make port with plenty of fair weather.

Contrast

Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers delivered an address this week at a dinner sponsored by the New York Board of Trade. We sincerely hope that your local newspaper carried portions of that speech because it was packed with the kind of statements real Americans like to hear and read.

From beginning to end, Mr. Nelson's address was an inspiration not only to his immediate listeners but to our own industry.

It was the kind of a spech we thought Eric Johnston was going to make in Boston in his first appearance before an exhibitor group. Instead, Mr. Johnson went off on a merry-go-round that added up to nothing at all for most of his hearers except the very definite impression that he had been reading a script lifted from the files of General Hays' old speeches.

NATIONAL NEWSREEL

Reade Ousts Local Checkers

That the Walter Reade circuit in New York and New Jersey was making good its order not to "tolerate" local checkers in its theatres was verified this week.

The Circuit, Confidential Reports said, has been ousting such local checkers from its houses. Confidential has taken no action beyond notifying the distributors.

At the Circuit headquarters it was said that the stand against local checkers was nothing new, but had been in effect for several months, and that it was not demanded that the checker come from towns 100 miles away or more, but from a community that was not immediately adjacent.

The Circuit further said that it was endeavoring to ascertain the source of a leak which gave out "wrong" information on receipts at Morristown, which resulted in consideration of a tax change on seat taxes from 25 cents to $1 a seat.

Price Bids Engineer Meet Seek 3rd Dimension

By JAY GOLDBERG
Hollywood Bureau

Development of television is a goal to which the engineering minds of the industry should strive, Byron Price, board chairman of the Association of Motion Picture Producers told the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at its 60th semi-annual convention in Hollywood this week.

Price spoke at the opening session Monday. Stressing the importance of engineering in taking the early motion picture out of the sphere of novelties, Price said:

"I even venture to say that if sound and color and other mechanical improvements had never been attained, the motion picture never would have survived except as a small sideshow of American life.

"Nor could the motion picture of the present day, with all its miraculous qualities, expect to survive if research simply sat on its hands . . . dreaming that perfection had been obtained. The effective capture of the third dimension alone provides a goal worthy of the endeavor of the best minds among you."

The convention saw several wartime technical devices demonstrated at one of its sessions in the Paramount studios on "Paramount Night" and listened to talks led by Dr. C. R. Daily of that studio's engineering department.

At another session the navy described means to permanently preserve films shot in action.

A Warner Bros. award to be presented to an individual film company for outstanding contribution to the motion picture art was announced by President Don E. Hyndman.

The newly elected officers were installed at a luncheon Monday. They are: Loren L. Ryder, president; Earl I. Sponable, executive vice-president; Clyde R. Keith, editorial vice-president; W. C. Kunzman, convention vice-president; Edmund A. Bertram, treasurer; G. T. Lorance, secretary. They take office Jan. 1.

Davis, Rank Aid, Tells Of Odeon Expansion Plan

A four year expansion plan for Odeon Theatres in Canada which will call for 64 new houses at a cost of $6,000,000, was outlined in Toronto Monday by John Davis, J. Arthur Rank representative here from London.

The new houses will be added to the present 105 Odeon units now in Canada and will cover first run outlets in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Victoria, with the Toronto house scheduled to open in about 15 months.

Davis also said that Rank product, which will total 18 releases in Canada this year, will be raised to 35 next year and that the organization would buy product in the open market when available. He discussed the formation of movie clubs for juveniles in 34 suburban theatres of the Odeon chain in Canada, praised the freedom of the British screen and industry from restraint and said that no new theatres would be built in England during the next five to seven years due to material shortages. Even houses which were bombed can not be repaired, he said.

Nomikos Hires Lawyer, Threatens Counter Suit

Asserting that the distributors who are suing him on fraud allegations in connection with percentage pictures are "attempting to use the courts of the United States to permit them to conduct indiscriminate fishing expeditions through exhibitors' books," Van A. Nomikos this week announced in Chicago that he planned a counter suit.

The exhibitor stated that he had retained Seymour Simon of the law firm of Schradzke and Gould not only to act in his behalf in the suit which the majors filed against him, but had instructed Simon to file a complaint against Paramount, Loew's (MGM), 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Warner Bros. for damages suffered by his theatres because of allegedly illegal restraints in the Chicago area.

Sponsors Programs

The Community Relations Division of the Motion Picture Association counsel is scheduling a series of lectures on previews for its National Organization of Community groups. First of the lectures was held last Monday at the Museum of Modern Arts with Stuart Blackston's "Silver Shadows" as the March of Time's "March of the Movies" and Warners' "Okay for Sound" as the pictures. Terry Ramsaye was the speaker. The programs are under the direction of Marjorie Dawson.

Jurisdictional Strike Hit by Donald Nelson

Declaring that no logician can "ferret out the flimsiest excuse" for jurisdictional strikes such as the one now going on in Hollywood, Donald M. Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, in a speech at the New York Board of Trade dinner in New York Wednesday night, said that the inter-union studio fight could go on for "nine months unless the government steps in."

The former WPB head said that American management has learned to accept collective bargaining but resents "collective bullying," and that management has "learned but apparently American labor has not" that people will not stand for too much concentration of power in any one man or any one group. He pronounced the strife between management and labor since the end of the war a "national disgrace."

Referring to the Hollywood strike, Nelson pointed out that the fight is between two AFL unions, with the dispute arising over differences of opinion regarding the status of 350 workers. Not even labor leaders themselves, he added, can offer a valid reason for this condition, in which many thousands of people are partly or wholly out of work and management is forced into the role of a helpless by-stander, "feebly trying to cooperate toward a settlement ,although they are threatened by both sides of the argument."

Strike Front Quiet, Pickets Walk Posts

Hollywood's jurisdictional strike between the Conference of Studio Unions, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes over who should erect interior studio sets, continued quiet this week with CSU pickets walking their posts and laboratory technicians continuing to respect CSU picket lines.

Spokesman for the studios indicated that fewer of the IATSE laboratory technicians, who had slowed down production by forcing the studios to work blind without benefit of rushes, were crossing lines to return to work, but Business Agent John Martin of their local reportedly had written the laboratories for conferences on wages and working conditions.

This move indicated a new phase of the action, for it was understood that the laboratory technicians had no difficulties with the studios but have refused to cross CSU picket lines, even

Judges 'Moved' By Mass Attack on Bidding

Court Declares It Never Said Films Should Be Put on 'Auction Block'

By BILL SPECHT
News Editor

Three judges of the federal statutory court in New York—Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Augustus Hand, District Court Judges Henry L. Goddard and John Bright—openly declared this week that the scale of the exhibitor attack on competitive bidding had impressed them and that by competitive bidding they had not meant auction selling.

The court's comment came during arguments on the decree proposals when Judge Hand, the senior judge, said:

"We were moved, all of us, by this large attack by the so-called independents, many of whom were independent, on the competitive bidding system."

Several times the court asked protesting attorneys if they had suggestions for any other sales plans which would be competitive. Discussing the court's intention, Judge Hand said:

"We never said it (film) should be put on the auction block."

This point had been previously made by Herman Levy, General Counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and reiterated by Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the attorney general who is conducting the case for the Government.

The hearings themselves were bidding for a place in court history with none of the parties involved, those who wish to intervene, or those who wish to appear as friends of the court, seeming to be able to agree on any major point.

The defendants themselves, split into the Big Five—Warner Bros., RKO, Paramount, Loew's (MGM) and 20th Century-Fox—and the Little Three—Columbia, Universal, United Artists—disagree on fundamental points.

Those who sought to intervene—the American Theatres Associations, and some 30 exhibitor members of the Confederacy of Southern Associations—agree on the main in their opposition to competitive bidding, but disagree with the defendants and the government. The friends of the court disagree with the defendants, the government, the intervenors, and in some instances, among themselves.

The only point of near unanimity seems to be that all parties but the Mosque Theatre of Newark, N. J., oppose competitive bidding and that all the opponents are willing to see it scrapped.

Another point which was carried without

10,000 vs. Auctioning

Final results of the American Theatres Association Poll of exhibitors throughout the nation showed that 10,000 theatres are opposed to auctioning selling. The poll, which took in both ATA and non-ATA members, showed that 95 per cent of those replying were for intervention in the anti-trust suit for the purpose of fighting auction selling.

In Brief

The proceedings this week at the federal statutory court hearing on decree proposals included:

Surprise announcement by the court that it had not meant that competitive bidding was to be taken as auctioning of films.

Court acknowledgment that the exhibitor attack on its competitive bidding plan had "moved" it.

Possibility that cancellation privileges for blind buying would be set at 20 per cent and that a full year's product could be sold at one time.

Possibility that arbitration was completely out. (Too many objecting).

A new proposal suggested by Paramount's Whitney North Seymour which would add a limited "some run" clause to the injunction provisions on clearance. It was opposed by the Government and criticized by Thurman Arnold.

All intervenor and friends of the court petitions taken under advisement. (Two new friends of the court appeared: Auctioneer Joseph Day with an auction plan; Kentucky Theatre Owners, arguing length of run as a consideration in bidding.)

Cook, Raftery & Frohlich—They're Three of a Kind But Not of a Mind

Cook, Raftery and Frohlich.

No, it's not a new law firm. The gentlemen in fact don't see eye-to-eye in several aspects of the current decree hearings. But they don't see eye-to-eye with the Big Five attorneys either. In fact, they might be called the rugged individualists of the defendant attorneys.

For while attorneys for the Big Five crowd around one long, document-loaded table at which Charles Cook sits as a lone dissenter, Louis Frohlich and Ed Raftery take their places elsewhere in the court room.

And when the attorneys for the Big Five, meaning Paramount, RKO, Loew's (MGM), 20th Century-Fox and Warner Bros., rise to speak for the defendants, Cook, Frohlich and Raftery are sure to make it plain shortly afterward that Universal, Columbia and United Artists also are defendants and may not be in accord with the argument advanced.

Presenting the argument that selling product by a year's program is necessary, that franchises and master deals should be legal and that the distributor should have the right to insist that an admission price be maintained during the run of a picture, is Charles Cook, attorney for Universal whose voice is heard through the marble and wood paneled court room without any difficulty.

Cook's arguments have included an attack on the court's right to set up competitive bidding and its machinery and maintains the position that Universal had not conditioned sales on pictures.

When United Artists interests are affected, broad shouldered, white-haired, ruddy-faced Edward C. Raftery materializes apparently from out of nowhere. He had been sitting behind other lawyer observers to the court's right. His measured statements are laced with Celtic irony which add a lighter touch to the drear business of the arguments.

When the subject of inserting six months buying clauses and 30 days run of a picture after availability were discussed, Raftery explained that exhibitors to his knowledge never held up a hit picture, but when a bad picture

Gov't May Not Object To 'Duel' Road Show But Opposes Policy Generally

That "Duel in the Sun" might be allowed to roadshow was considered likely by observers in the federal statutory court in New York this week after Vanguard had presented its argument to the court.

The belief that roadshowing of the Selznick special might be possible came when Special Assistant to the Attorney General Robert L. Wright said that the anti-roadshowing provision of his proposed decree might be waived for "Duel" through a stay in the court's decree. But Wright made it plain that the Government opposed "roadshowing per se" on grounds that it would permit price fixing and clearance fixing, and that it believed any road showing which might be allowed should be done in theatres not affiliated with the defendants.

Wright told the court that a "roadshow is by definition an exhibition supported by extraordinary high admissions supported by high clearance."

A Vanguard attorney presented the plea for "Duel" to the court Monday, pointing that the extra cost of the picture and the position of his clients in not owning theatres, made a road show policy necessary. He suggested several methods by which roadshows could be defined and controlled. (SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, Oct. 12, p. 9.)

Asked by the court why Vanguard needed roadshowing with fixed prices, the attorney replied:

"To make money."

Judges Moved at Exhibitor Mass Attack

Hearings Stress Divers Views; Cancellations May Be Fixed at 20 Per Cent

opposition from Government attorneys was a reduction in the previously proposed cancellation for blind buying from 25 per cent to 20 per cent. Columbia suggested the reduction and the Government did not object. The court has the matter under study as it has all proposals made to it during the week.

Early in the week's hearing, Judge Hand intimated that the whole subject might be handled in judges' chambers.

"I just wonder," Judge Hand told the attorneys Tuesday, after a day had passed on motions and the court was confronted with a compiled record of the differences between the two groups of defendants and the government, "if we're going to get anywhere going through all this in open court or whether we shall hear this in chambers."

Want to Argue

The lawyers wanted to argue points so the hearing proceeded.

In its opening session Monday the court rejected the appeal of the Sidney Lust theatres to hear a plea for reversal on an arbitration board of appeals ruling against the Lust thetres in Washington, D. C.

It then passed to the petitions to intervene, with the ATA taking off first when the CSA yielded its place. All intervention and friend of the court petitions were taken under advisement.

ATA Counsel Thurman Arnold said he was speaking only against the competitive bidding provisions of the proposed decree which he said would affect the interest of his clients who therefore had a right to intervene since legal precedent in anti-trust suits bound everyone affected by a court decree.

He termed the present suit a "situation where the court has gone outside the condemnation of illegal arrangements and has attempted to introduce competitive bidding" in the industry and said that the proposed decree would take away his client's "legal rights" and give the defendants "legal sanction" to carry out certain objectionable practices. The Government, Arnold told the court, was opposing intervention, but would accept ATA as a friend of the court, which was not what ATA wanted since it would not give them the right to appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Paul Williams, general counsel for the Southern California Theatre Owners Association, followed Arnold to discuss the intervention of both ATA and SCTOA, which filed its brief with ATA. Williams attacked competitive bidding and pleaded for the right to buy a season's product.

Speaking of block booking he said the practice was not "harmful, excepting that some times they forced the whole works."

"What exhibitors of this country want," he added, "is the right to buy a season's product with reasonable elimination."

Williams declared the court by its injunctive power could outlaw the illegal practices of the industry and should allow "free enterprise" to work the situation out with the help of such an injunction. The "free enterprise" argument was to be set forth several times during the hearing.

John C. Jackson presented the intervening petitions of the Confederacy of Southern Associations stating that it took "no position in any other condition other than the clause of selling picture by picture, theatre by theatre." The right to intervene, he said, was sought by his clients, for an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Against Intervention

Immediate opposition to any intervention was voiced by John W. Davis, speaking for the Big Five.

"We do not consent," he told the court. "They would become parties to this suit (if intervention were allowed). We are therefore willing that the court shall hear them as amici. We stand upon the proposition that our entire good will be hurt by their inclusion."

At this point Columbia Counsel Lou Frohlich walked up from the rear of the court, his spectacles in his left hand and said:

"Columbia has no objection to ATA or Mr. Jackson's clients or Mr. Williams' clients to be heard in view of the radical effect this decree" will have upon them.

(The Government on Tuesday during its hearing voiced an objection to intervention because some of those who sought to intervene are "certain Paramount partners.")

The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers led the list of those who sought to become friends of the court. Its plea (SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, Oct. 19, p. 10) was made with the statement "the only hope . . . is the hope of free enterprise."

Fight SIMP Plea

In attacking the petition, Wright declared that the SIMP were independents "in the sense that they finance their own production but it seems clear that they have no independence when it comes to distributing the film." He opposed their exemption from the decree provisions, including those opposing price fixing on the grounds that such an exemption "would take United Artists completely out of the decree," inasmuch as it releases only independent product.

Vanguard's brief as a friend of the court, which seeks permission to roadshow, followed. (See story, p. 9). Others which followed were the Radio Center Mosque at Newark, Joseph P. Day, which sought permission to enter a brief outlining its plan for auction selling (the plan was almost identical with that described in STR, Sept. 14, p. 5), the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and the Conferences of Independent Exhibitors Association. (An additional friend of the court agreement was filed Tuesday by Henry J. Stiles of Cato, Ky., for the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners, arguing that the length of a run should be considered in bidding since a smaller house might be able to offer a longer run equivalent or better than a shorter run in a large house.)

Levy presented the MPTOA plea. (STR Oct. 19, p. 9). He asked the court if its bidding clause meant auctioning.

Speaking for the Government Tuesday, Wright advocated a ban on cross-licensing.

Warner Attorney Joseph M. Proskauer, replying to Wright on cross licensing told the court:

"My clients estimate that if we would not get the pictures of any other defendants we would be closed 65 per cent of the time. This proposal that Mr. Wright and Mr. Arnold take out of the air amounts to divestiture."

Proskauer indicated that the Big Five might oppose competitive bidding but that his clients were not asking that it be stopped.

Universal's Charles Cook attacked the legal-

Court Denies Lust

The federal statutory court in New York Monday refused to take jurisdiction in the appeal of the Lust Theatres of Washington, D. C. to it against a ruling of the arbitration appeals board in that city.

In pointing out that its jurisdiction was confined to the anti-trust aspects of the industry, the court said:

"We can't see that we have any jurisdiction in this case," adding that if it took jurisdiction, "we would have to review everything done in the last five years."

Of a Kind But Not of a Mind

came along, they practically had to be cudgelled into booking it.

"If you want to put in a provision here that they must buy our pictures and book them, then we can go in for the other refinements," he said.

Probably the most rugged individualist of the Little Three trio, is Lou Frohlich, Columbia counsel, who has attacked the court's right to set up auction selling and who seems to have won his point for a reduction in exhibitor cancellation privileges from 25—as suggested by the government—to 20 per cent.

Frohlich reportedly has not even attended the meetings of the Big Five attorneys and Tuesday he did not have a copy of "The Yellow Book," a painstakingly compiled document of the Court's opinion, together with the Government and the Big Five decree proposals. Instead he read from a mimeographed copy. Frohlich has consistently reminded the Big Five that they are not the sole defendants. He has favored the admission of any exhibitor who wishes to intervene on the grounds that the subject warranted it. He was among the first to express opposition to some decree additions by Paramount Counsel Whitney North Seymor, and indicated that some of his fight for Columbia will be based on the copyright law.

'Outlaw' In Bad Again; This Time It's N'York

The New York State Supreme Court (which is a lower court in that state and not the final authority) Wednesday denied a motion by United Artists to compel Harry Brandt, of the Gotham and Republic Theatres, and Arthur Mayer, of the Rialto Theatre, to fulfill a contract to play "The Outlaw" in their theatres.

The court's action marks another legal battle in the career of a picture which may make history as far as legal battles are concerned. The film was scheduled to open simultaneously in the three houses Saturday (Oct. 26) and had been heavily advertised when License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding and the police both threatened action against houses playing the picture.

In its ruling the court found that approval of the picture by the state board of censors did not prevent the police from acting against what they thought were law violations and that under these circumstances it seemed "quite unthinkable that a court should order defendants to do an act which almost certainly subject them to criminal proceedings."

United Artists filed the suit to enforce fulfillment of contract when the theatre owners advised it that they could not play the picture.

The industry in New York seemed split on the subject of what was the actual cause of the latest action against the film. Some sources believed that pressure not to play it came from religious sources and that a city official much higher than the license commissioner had told both Mayer and Brandt not to play it. Others believe that advertising again put "The Outlaw" on the spot, with a double truck ad in a tabloid which is said to have been placed by the Hughes office and not by United Artists, several weeks ago, fanning the flames of resentment.

The force of organized religious opinion is presumably keeping the film off screens in and around Albany, N. Y. where the circuit officials are said to have letters from the archbishop asking their cooperation in not playing it.

though the IATSE had ordered them to do so. Most picketing was at Technicolor.

Meanwhile the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had offered charters to any IATSE local which might wish to secede from that body, but to date did not seem to have any takers.

The threat which IATSE President Richard Walsh had made to take over the laboratory workers union for insubordination was not carried out but this local was keeping guards at his headquarters in an obvious effort to prevent such action.

Some hope was held that the Screen Actors Guild, which favors arbitration of jurisdictional disputes, might bring the Carpenters and the IATSE together. A meeting was scheduled by the SAG for that purpose Wednesday.

Lawyers Argue Proposals

ity of competitive bidding, challenged the court's right to set it up and wanted a return to selling a year's product.

Arbitration appeared doomed because of refusal of some of defendants as well as the government to accept it. 20th-Fox Attorney John Caskey took up the defendant proposals point by point, stating that admission was wanted as a factor in deciding clearance but would not be written into the contract. Defendants Attorney John W. Davis suggested that each defendant submit a plan for competitive bidding and said it would take approximately six months to devise it.

Explanation brought out that while the Big Five wanted admissions to be a factor in considering clearance when an exhibitor was buying a picture, the admission would not be written in the contract and would have no bearing after the deal was closed if the exhibitor decided to change his prices. The Judges continued to the next topic—franchises.

Cook of Universal wanted franchises approved on the grounds that Universal's franchises were with 727 independents against 43 affiliates.

Columbia's Lou Frohlich stepped into the argument on the percentage of pictures an exhibitor would be allowed to cancel if he bought blind, and apparently won his point.

"I think," he told the court, "it (25 per cent, sought by the Government) is too high. I think it should be 20 per cent. I'd prefer it should be less."

"We merely suggested 25 per cent," Wright replied. "We hold no brief for it. If you want to make it 20 per cent, we won't argue it."

Hits Overbuying Clause

Frohlich, who is seeking to sell a year's product at a time, next attacked the Government provisions limiting an exhibitor to buying no more than six months' product at a time and compelling him to play a feature within 30 days notice after availability.

Wright explained that both clauses had been requested by exhibitors to prevent overbuying and backlogging.

"Of the two," Wright told the court, "I myself consider the 30 day provision more significant than the six month provision."

Tuesday afternoon Paramount Counsel Whitney North Seymour came out with additional proposals as a suggestion to the court for a possible alternative to competitive bidding. The plan, as its proponents argued, added runs to the court's injunctive provisions of clearance.

"I want to make it clear," Seymour said, "that this is not an attempt to get away" from competitive bidding. If the court were interested, he said, he would formulate the suggestions and present them. According to Seymour they include:

(1) Injunction against "arbitrarily refusing to license any feature on a run (designated by the distributor) which is requested by an exhibitor who operates in competition with a theatre not owned by the distributor."

(2) Each license to be "negotiated theatre by theatre and feature by feature" without discrimination between competitors in favor of "theatres affiliated with defendants or circuit or old customers or any one."

(3) Reference of disputes to arbitration.

Frohlich promptly said it was the same thing as auctioning and that he would "prefer to stand on the monopoly of copyright."

Arnold told the court the Seymour proposals were "a method of insulating them (the defendants) by one step more against the court provisions.'

The court told the attorneys to get together and see if they could reach an agreement.

"I don't know," Judge Hand declare, "that we care to get into an elaborate investigation of anything you may not agree upon."

The opinion, when written, will be final, with only an appeal to the United States Supreme Court open.

Rathvon, Depinet View RKO's Foreign Work

The widening scope of the American film industry as it crosses international borders in what has become routine operations of production, distribution and exhibition by the bigger companies was emphasized this week as far-flung operations of RKO Radio were discussed in New York by N. Peter Rathvon, president, and Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, who, respectively, returned from trips to Mexico and Europe.

Mr. Rathvon revealed that the service studio in which RKO owns a fifty per cent interest with a group of Mexican producers has a capacity sufficient for the production of 40 pictures made on present shooting schedules by Mexican units and perhaps as many as 25 of the grade of pictures made by the top Hollywood companies.

Two American features, one to be produced by John Ford for RKO distribution, and one in Technicolor to be made by RKO are included in the films that will be made at the Churubusco studio this winter.

Ned Depinet, who returned from a European tour made in company with Phil Reisman, RKO foreign head, gave enthusiastic reports of the progress that is being made with productions in work and planned for RKO in England and France. Pictures which were before the cameras during the visits of Depinet and Reisman to the Denham, England studio, and the Paris studio, were "So Well Remembered" and "Golden Silence."

Pittsburgh Power Strike Ends in Arbitration

Pittsburgh's four week old power strike which affected transportation had ended this week when the Independent Union Employes of the Duquesne Light Company voted to submit to arbitration and return to work.

The strike ended as the majority of the union forced another vote on the question of arbitration. Business, including theatres, which had to bear the brunt of reduced transportation as street car and bus drivers refused at first to cross picket lines, was back to normal Monday.

Says Censorship Today 'A Political Racket'

Censorship was declared to be an anachronism "little better than a political racket" this week at Springfield, Mass., when Richard Griffith, executive director of the National Board of Review, addressed the Springfield Motion Picture Council.

"Censorship," he said, "is an anachronism, an antiquated survival of the nickelodeon era when films were regarded as an amusement on a par with flea circuses and medicine shows rather than, as they are today, the most powerful and influential of all media of expression. The censorship which remains on the statute books today is in theory in keeping with our liberal traditions and in practice little better than a political racket."

Variety Clubs Expect To Form Cuban Tent

Plans to organize a Variey Club Tent in Cuba are progressing, National Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell said this week in announcing that the inauguration date for the Mexico City Tent, recently organized, would be set for the latter part of November.

National Officers including O'Donnell, Executive Director William McCraw, John B. Harris, Charles E. (Chick) Lewis, C. J. Latta, Marc Wolf and William Jenkins will attend the event welcoming the new unit.

McCraw at present is visiting Variety Tents throughout the United States and has added four more tents to his November schedule. They are: Nov. 11, Charlotte, N. Says Milwaukee Houses Pledged to Dimes March Full cooperation in the Milwaukee March of Dimes campaign for 1947, at least as far as the use of their screen is concerned, and possibly in connection with collections, seemed assured here this week as Thomas F. Millane, chairman for the Milwaukee County chapter of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, praised the attitude of Milwaukee theatres toward charitable causes.

Millane credited Harold J. Fitzgerald of the Fox Wisconsin theatres, with having done a fine job in organizing the theatrical groups in the past and these same groups, he said, have pledged their cooperation in the forthcoming campaign.

About three years ago, Millane states, the Milwaukee theatres agreed to undertake a campaign entirely on their own toward raising funds for the March of Dimes. Since that time, the results have been excellent and it has been possible to purchase additional equipment for the treatment of the disease and its after effects.

The chubby Kuykendall, who in his active days of MPTOA services was an inveterate traveler and story teller, was born in Muncie, Ind., where he attended business college and later studied law with a view to practicing as a lawyer. However, he took a job as a balloon ascensionist and acrobat, later putting on burnt cork to travel with a minstrel show.

After settling in Columbus, Kuykendall acquired several theatres, an interest in the Columbus Dispatch, the local hotel, an amusement park, the county fair, a baseball club and a delicatessen store. At the time of his death he owned an interest in the Princess Theatre.

Kuykendall became associated with the MPTOA some 14 years ago as its third president. He remained its head until the board meeting in June, when he told the organization he wished to retire because of his health. It was then that he was named emeritus president.

Kuykendall was also chairman of the industry board under the NRA, active in Boy Scout and Rotary Club work, was a past president of the Columbus chamber of commerce, and a national committeeman of the industry War Activities Committee.

The funeral was held Monday with interment at Columbus. Surviving are his widow, "Petie" Kuykendall, a son, Edward, Jr., a foster son and a daughter.

Hotel Window Fall Fatal to Bill Formby

William Formby, veteran trade paper editor was killed in Kansas City, Monday in a fall from the eighth story of the Hotel Phillips. His body struck a ledge on the third floor where it remained until discovery an hour later. At one time field editor for Quigley Publications and prior to that New York editor of Box Office, Formby recently had set up his own news service in Los Angeles. He is survived by his wife Ann Formby; a daughter, Barbara, 10; and his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Formby and two sisters, Mrs. R. H. Shivel and Mrs. Cecil Calhoun.

Norris Wilcox Passes On

Norris Wilcox, 66, a pioneer in the motion picture industry, died early Tuesday at his home in New York, after several months of ill health.

A brother of the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Wilcox began his career at Paramount in 1917 as office manager. He joined United Artists in August, 1925

Going to the Dogs? No, No, No!

An all out campaign against the legalization of night dog racing with its accompanying gambling through passage of Proposition No. 2, is being waged by the Southern California Theatre Owners Association, dispatches from the west coast state.

The Proposition comes up at the Nov. 5 election.

The Association is urging its 350 members to carry the fight to their newspaper publishers, pointing out how dog racing would affect theatre business, as well as the objections of other industries. In addition two trailers by prominent Californians condemning the Proposition are being sent to SCTOA members for insertion into their newsreels during Oct. 21 through Oct. 28. A 50-inch newspaper ad is being run in every California daily and weekly, while 24 sheets, bumper cards, six sheets and window cards are being distributed.

Radio has not been neglected and some free spots are being used to push the slogan: "Vote No on No. 2—Don't let California Go to the Dogs."

B & K Chicago Alumnae At Anniversary Party

Commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Chicago Theatre, John Balaban hosted a swank cocktail party at the Ambassador East Polo Room last week for members of the Chicago press, members of the Chicago Theatre staff since the house's inception, and his guest of honor, Danny Kaye, who headlines the current anniversary show at the Chicago.

A unique feature of the event was the grouping of Balaban and Katz men who at one time served on the Chicago Theatre staff in various capacities from ushers to managers.

The Chicago Theatre has been the springboard from which many top executives and artists in show business have sprung. From the Chicago, Hollywood and New York have welcomed Bill Pine, Barney Balaban, John Joseph, Ben Serkowich, Archie Herzoff, Dave Gould, Vincent Minelli, Nathaniel Finston, David Lipton, Charles Previn, Leon Leontovich, Victor Young, and many others.

For the Chicago's Silver Jubilee celebration engagement Danny Kaye is reported to be receiving $40,000 weekly. This is in marked contrast to the two former appearances of the comic at this house, where he originally received $150, and later, up to $700.

A feature of B&K's long and amiable employer-employe relationship is evidenced by the fact that the original booth and stage crews, most of the engineering and janitor staffs, and many of the original executives, are still with the company.

SPOOK SHOW DISPLAY. Decorated in accordance with the Halloween spirit, the display shown above is on view in the lobby of Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., in advance of the theatre's annual midnight Halloween Spook Show. Lester Pollock is manager.

COLORFUL, ATMOSPHERIC. Prior to the engagement of 20th-Fox's "Anna and the King of Siam" at the Manos Theatre, Uniontown, Pa., this colorful, atmospheric lobby display was set up by R. J. McCool, manager of the house.

Record Ad Campaign Set For 'Razor' Book Edition

Said to be the biggest advertising campaign ever launched to promote the sale of a reprint edition of a novel, a group of displays on Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge" will appear in 75 key cities in November and December. The advertisements have been prepared by publisher Doubleday in 1000-line sizes and will tieup directly with 20th-Fox's release of the film, "The Razor's Edge" starring Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, Anne Baxter, John Payne, Clifton Webb and Herbert Marshall, all of whose names appear in the ads.

The publisher announces that every type of promotion will be used to merchandise the book which will be sold in 5 and 10 cent stores in addition to regular outlets in book and department stores. Posters and other displays featuring stills from the film have been distributed to all outlets with instructions for installation in windows, counters, etc., to coincide with the picture's opening in New York on November 19 and in some 200 other theatres on or about Christmas Day.

Set National Tieup

Warner Bros. has entered into an advertising, publicity and merchandising tieup with the Wald Co., Chicago dress designers and manufacturers, whereby Warner stars and films will be featured in nationwide promotional activities. First will be a series of full-page magazine ads featuring Alexis Smith and crediting "Stallion Road." Miss Smith will model a suit designed and tailored by Wald.

Leon Roth Promoted

Leon Roth, press book editor for United Artists, has been promoted to the post of national promotion manager, succeeding Joseph Gould, resigned.

Howard N. Carnow, a member of Warners' press book staff since 1940, succeeds Roth as press book editor. His appointment becomes effective November 4

Prizes Are Awarded in 'Duel' Flower Contest

Mrs. Charles W. Smith of Ellingwood, Kans., has been awarded the grand prize of $500 in the Wichita Beacon's $1000 "Duel in the Sun" Flower Contest conducted by the newspaper in connection with the David O. Selznick Technicolor film scheduled to be released in December.

More than 35,000 Kansans ordered packets of the seeds and every county in the state was represented in the contest. Over six million people were informed of "Duel in the Sun" in the six-month flower promotion, according to Louis Levand, publisher of the Beacon.

Mrs. Smith will receive a check for $500 for growing the largest sunflower from the "Duel in the Sun" flower seeds distributed early last summer. Eight other prizes were awarded in the contest, as well as a special award, the Lillian Gish sunburst pin, which went to the woman growing the best Victory Garden. The pin, handwrought from 18-karat gold, is an exact reproduction of the "Duel in the Sun" flower blossom.

Personality Contest Set on 'Best Years'

A national personality contest in which radio listeners choose the most personable teen-ager, young adult and matron who are making those years the best years of their lives is being sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn Productions through the "John Powers Charm School of the Air" in connection with the new RKO Radio release, "The Best Years of Our Lives." Judges will be Cathy O'Donnell, Teresa Wright and Myrna Loy, stars of the film.

Local newspapers are expected to tie-in with the contest to expand the coverage and daily publicity for the picture during the next three months. Announcement of the winners will coincide with the New York premiere of the film.

FREE CACTUS. As an opening-day stunt for Columbia's "Renegades," the RKO Palace, Cleveland, gave a small cactus plant to the first 50 patrons. Girls shown above are members of the service staff. The card had previously advertised the stunt in a local five-and-dime store. Harry Schreiber is manager of the Palace, and Shirley Fishman is publicity director.

Engerman Tells Secret of How to Promote for Free

How to get good exploitation results without spending money is always a sticker, but J. J. Engerman, advertising manager for Sterling Theatres of Seattle, recently found a way to effect two promotions in this fashion that were cumulative. By "cumulative" is meant that they worked, not for one attraction, but for a number of them, one of the stunts going for ten weeks and the other for an indefinite time.

The first promotion was a Child Personality Contest. For this event a tieup was made with a photographer (Bruno Studios), who footed the bills. On its part, Sterling, who runs ten suburban houses, put up display matter announcing the contest, while the photographer did the newspaper advertising, tieing in the theatre and the attraction each week. Each week a winner was chosen by the University of Washington's drama professor, and the child's photo shown in the theatre lobbies. At the end of the ten weeks a grand winner was chosen for a Hollywood contract and screen test by United Artists. That makes ten weeks of heavy exploitation for one stunt.

The second idea was one that could be duplicated in many other situations. Engerman made an agreement with the Seattle bowling alleys, both downtown and suburban. The way it worked was this: in each alley is placed a program of current events at the theatres. In return for this advertising the circuit awards a pair of passes to each alley for the high-score male and female bowlers each week.

'Angel' in Atlantic City Gets Terrific Coverage

Legitimate exploitation is sometimes best after all, if accomplished on a large enough scale. A good example of the right way to do it is offered in the Atlantic City campaign of UA's "Angel on My Shoulder" at the Hollywood Theatre. Atlantic City, of course, is a very much concentrated affair, with large hotels crowding one another and the business section comparatively small in area; so you can see the remarkable coverage gained in the following campaign.

Special lobby posters were placed in forty major hotels as a starter. Two hundred and fifty special window cards blanketed the city's store windows. In addition, posters were plastered on 200 buses of the Pacific Street line. Fifty—yes fifty—spot announcements were used on stations WFPU and WBAB, along with the usual newspaper ad man publicity line-up. This does not include two store tieups with Kensington's furniture store and Blatt's department store. Harry Waxman and Carl Singer put on the campaign.

Warners Set Tieups With Rogers Silverware

Under tieups arranged by Warner Bros. with Rogers Silverware, two Warner stars and their latest productions will be featured in a series of full-page color ads in national publications starting early next year and continuing until August.

One series of ads is based on Martha Vickers in "That Way With Women," and the other on Alexis Smith in "The Two Mrs. Carrolls."

Magazine Cover Photos Make Colorful Display

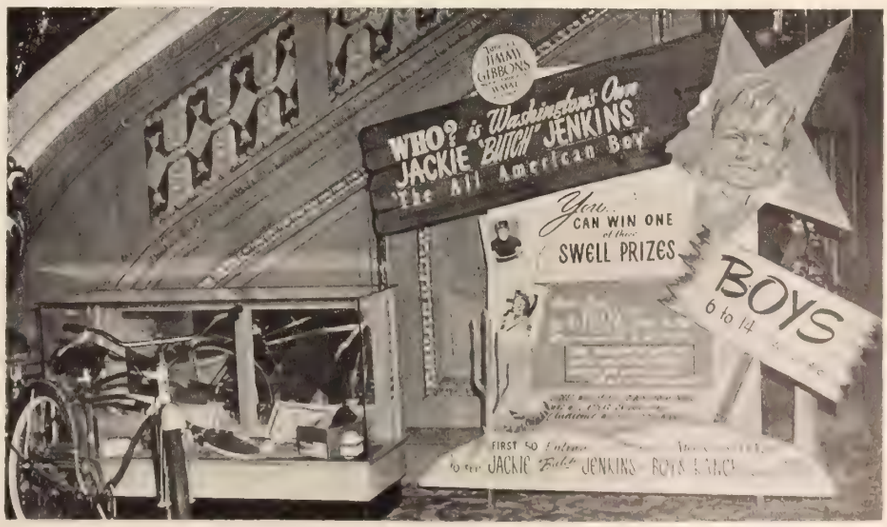
Taking advantage of the fact that 13 various editions of Promenade magazine, distributed by New York's nationally known hotels, carried a colored photograph of Dorothy McGuire, Montague Salmon, managing director of the Rivoli Theatre, whipped the covers into an eye-arresting easel-frame-display on Broadway for the recent engagement of RKO Radio's "Till the End of Time."

Salmon's idea can be duplicated by exhibitors everywhere if they will accumulate the front covers of fan magazines on top stars like Ingrid Bergman, Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy and others and then put them into a display in all that vivid color in a lobby frame tieing in with that star's film.

Salmon developed the display on his theory that the public still likes to look at pictures in a frame, and he always makes liberal use of stills in his front-of-the-house displays.

PRC Tieup to Promote Philo Vance Mysteries

A three-way tieup has been concluded between PRC Pictures and the Hillman Detective Magazine Group whereby star Alan Curtis and the company's series of Philo Vance detective films will be promoted through a series of 12 full-page ads during the course of the next year. Magazines in which the ads will run include Real Detective, Crime Detective, Headquarters Detective and Uncensored Detective, with a total monthly circulation of 3,000,000.



The tieup, which was set by Arnold Stoltz, PRC's national director of advertising and publicity, with Hillman representative Dan C. Whittemore and Dick Jasper, of Jasper, Lynch & Fishel, advertising agency for the New Skin Co., provides for a series of 12 full-page ads featuring Alan Curtis with copy selling PRC's series of Philo Vance films in which he will be starred in the title role. These ads will be furnished by the New Skin Co. On facing pages there will be another ad featuring Curtis in a tieup with Gleetone Brilliantine, with endorsement by Curtis and full credits for his current Philo Vance picture.

In connection with the tieup, the four magazines in the Hillman Detective Group will inaugurate a new department to be called "Best Motion Picture Mystery of the Month," with the month's two top film mysteries being reviewed in each issue. Tieup begins with the January, 1947, issue.

Store Displays Promoted On 'Cloak and Dagger'

Warners' "Cloak and Dagger" received window and counter displays in Hartford, Conn., department stores through promotion arranged by Manager Jim McCarthy of the Warner Strand.

One card carried this copy: "Good Grooming Goes With Personality. Good Acting Goes With Top Film Production. See 'Cloak and Dagger'—Now—Strand."—HFD.

CONTEST PRIZES DISPLAYED IN LOBBY. One of the chief stunts for the showing of MGM's "Boys' Ranch" at Loew's Capitol, Washington, D. C., (and it has been an important promotion wherever the picture has played), was a photo contest to select Washington's own "Butch" Jenkins. Shown above is the lobby display announcing the competition, together with an exhibition of the prizes which were later awarded.

From the author of "LEAVE HER TO HEAVEN".

This is the art for the full page ad that will hold the attention of 90,000,000 readers of the national magazines!

Cake, Candy and Guest Stars Mark Capitol's 27th Birthday

BROADWAY AT 51ST, THEN AND NOW. Believe it or not, that quiet street scene in the top photo is Broadway and 51st Street prior to the construction of the Capitol Theatre, which opened its doors on October 24, 1919. Contrast the pastoral atmosphere of that scene (note the nearly invisible man on the corner—cameras couldn't catch people on the move in those days) with the movie-going activity in the bottom photo which shows an opening morning at the Capitol some 27 years later; specifically, during the current engagement of MGM's "No Leave, No Love" and stage show. This week the Capitol is holding special ceremonies in observance of the theatre's 27th anniversary.

Another Broadway showplace observed its birthday this week when the Capitol Theatre, whose doors first opened on October 24, 1919, began holding ceremonies commemorating the event. Each day during the current anniversary week a famous "guest" star is appearing at night in the stars-in-person show. Candy and flowers are being given to the ladies, and a birthday cake is being cut on stage. A highlight of anniversary week, the activities of which were planned by Harry Greenman, managing director, is an exhibit by MGM of "Movie Impressions," caricatures in plastic by international artist Jacques Kapralik.

When Messmore Kendall built and opened the Capitol, it was the finest and largest theatre in the world. New draperies, furniture, carpets and uniforms have been provided to start its 27th year as one of the best equipped and most comfortable theatres in the country.

Opening under the direction of Major Edward Bowes, the Capitol's initial screen attraction was Douglas Fairbanks in "His Majesty, the American," while the stage show featured the Ned Wayburn Demi Tasse Revue and Arthur Pryor's 70-piece croonerless band.

Shortly after the opening the theatre was jointly supevised by Bowes and Samuel (Roxy) Rothafel, and during the first years such eminent musicians as Arthur Pryor, Erno Rapee, David Mendoza, Eugene Ormandy and Yascha Bunchunk presided over the orchestra. Many of the personalities who appeared on the Capitol's stage rose to greater fame and fortune in Hollywood, on the legitimate stage and in radio. Bette Davis appeared in support of Warren William in a stage presentation that included Lou Holtz, Phil Baker and Abe Lyman and his Californians. Others who appeared on the Capitol stage were Bing Crosby, Barbara Stanwyck, Clark Gable, Al Jolson, Bob Hope, Robert Montgomery and Lionel Barrymore.

The Capitol was the first theatre to go on the air in 1922. "Passion" was the first picture to play for two weeks in 1920. "The Big Parade" played for three weeks in 1927, and everybody supposed the movies were no longer a fad, but when Garbo and Gilbert's "Flesh and the Devil" stayed four weeks, they were convinced. Garbo's first all talkie, "Anna Christie" smashed all box-office records in 1930. This record was broken in January, 1946 by "The Harvey Girls," and again smashed in the spring of this year by "The Postman Always Rings Twice," which broke all box-office receipts in the 26-year history of the theatre.

Moger Uses World Series For Tieup on 'Big Sleep'

Tieing in "The Big Sleep" with the late World Series was not an easy stunt, but Art Moger, New England publicist for Warner Bros., hopped on the first baseball classic to come to Boston in 28 years as a golden opportunity to publicize the film's showing at the Metropolitan Theatre.

All hotels in Boston were filled to the attic with guests for the series and all of the guests were seeking some place other than Boston Common for rest and relaxation before the big event. The ball players themselves were avidly seeking a "big sleep."

So Moger had blowups made, invited the visiting fireman and the press to a special preview of the film at the Warner screening room and then carefully explained that "The Big Sleep" tied in with the World Series because there had been time enough for a Rip Van Winkle sleep since Beantown had seen its last series.

Following the screening, loud speakers blared forth the news about the town's awakening from "The Big Sleep"; eight huge blowups of Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr, Di Maggio and other Boston stars were secured from the Hotel Statler where they were first used and these were placed in advantageous spots in and near the Metropolitan theatre with an announcement that Warner Bros. congratulated Boston and its fans upon the awakening. The blow-ups were later presented to visiting celebrities.

Moger's idea drew wide comment from Boston's newspapers and at the preview he served ice cream and cake in molds resembling baseball and a diamond. Members of the audience also were presented with miniature baseballs and bats as a souvenir of the occasion.—BOS.

Showman Writes Movie Column

When a theatre manager promotes publicity in his local newspaper, he can well be proud of his accomplishment. But when a newspaper prevails upon a theatre manager to write a weekly movie column, and pays for it, that's something to make others in the industry sit up and take particular notice.

The newspaper which successfully made such an overture is the Jersey Sunday Bulletin, and the theatreman who will write "on motion pictures generally and the theatres of Hudson County in particular" is D. F. Barreca, manager of the Orpheum, Jersey City, a veteran showman well known in the east.

The Bulletin advises its readers that Barreca's column, "Talkie Temples," "will be read with interest not only by moviegoers but theatre managers and all connected with show business both in the front and back of the house."

Sparrow Plays on Title to Sell 'Gallant Journey' in Indianapolis

Boyd Sparrow, publicity director and manager of Loew's, Indianapolis, proved that "Gallant Journey" was a picture suited to exploitation. To highlight the opening in a new manner, Boyd arranged, through the Buick Auto Company, for the loan of two cars, 1908 and 1946 models. The day before opening and opening day, draped in banners heralding the opening of "Gallant Journey," the cars toured the city, attracting crowds of interested spectators wherever they went. A novel idea was added to the proceedings when the driver of the new Buick was blindfolded, which made his journey a crowd gatherer. A circus driver was hired for the stunt.

To assure interest long before the opening, Sparrow obtained many window tieups, using both press book ideas and his own. Working around the title, "Gallant Journey into . . ." and then tied in the product. In conjunction with this idea, he convinced the Crawford store that a gallant journey into furland would intrigue their customers, and thus obtained an outstanding window for the picture. He also utilized this theme in tieups with the Hudgins-Carter Co., showing in their windows how attractive a gallant journey into tieland would be, and with Dee and Miller, a local Jewelry firm, using journey into matrimony as a hinge. Adam Hats also cooperated with a full window display based on this twist.

JOURNEY THROUGH MURPHY'S. This is typical of the series of window displays set up by Boyd Sparrow in Indianapolis to publicize "Gallant Journey" at Loew's. The tieups were based on the title of the film. In this case the card reads "Make your journey through Murphy's today."

In a natural tieup about man's first controlled flight, American Airlines devoted their window space to exploiting the film. Finally, Sparrow working for the most advantageous spot where the greatest number of people could be reached, obtained space in the bus terminal where thousands of commuters passed every day, thus assuring maximum coverage with just one strategically placed sign.

Throughout the crowded downtown section, Sparrow placed one sheets on over 150 street metal cans.

Cards announcing the arrival of the picture were distributed to hotels. Max Factor displays were placed on the Cosmetic counters of Block's-Ayres-Wasson stores, with stills from the picture accompanying them.

Boyd also utilized radio to tell the "sitters-at home" about the picture. Daily, in front of the theatre, 15 minutes "Man on the Street" broadcasts were used over stations WISH and WIBC, tieing-in the picture with the question of the day.

Good coverage was obtained in newspapers on the aforementioned Buick stunt, both in story and picture form. Also, the films prearranged national tieup with Vera Maxwell fashions was used to advantage by obtaining a four column art break and story in the fashion section. Other art on the film also broke for space in the dailies.

A series of large cooperative ads were secured for the playdate by Sparrow in connection with the jewelry tieup with Dee and Miller. These ads appeared in the Times, News and Star, the leading papers of the city, immediately following the opening of the picture.

Monogram Tie-Up Deals On Gale Storm, Belita

Extensive tie-up deals have been made by Monogram for two of the company's stars, Gale Storm and Belita.

In connection with Miss Storm's starring role in "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," Paul Hesse was set by Lux Soap for color portraits of the actress, to be used in an elaborate magazine campaign in conjunction with the picture.

Belita, star of "Suspense," posed for Gantner swim suit advertisements which will feature her exclusively next year. The Gantner campaign involves monthly advertising which will hit practically every magazine and newspaper in America.

To Show 'Child' Movies From MPA Film Library

Children of the Harrisburg area will be able to catch up with the best in film production of the past 15 years for youngsters this winter when Jack O'Rear, manager of the Colonial, will sponsor a Saturday Morning Movie Club.

To start Saturday, November 9, a series of ten of the most prominent pictures slanted toward the children's angle, either in the telling or in the story, will be shown at the Colonial under a "concert series" subscription plan.

O'Rear has arranged to print a series of tickets of ten for $2, which he will sell to children as members of the movie club. The tickets will admit them to the ten pictures selected from the Children's Film Library, compiled by the Motion Picture Association.

Educational groups which have been insistent in urging proper channeling of movies for children, Parent-Teacher Associations, schools, church leaders and similar organizations will be contacted in the promotion of the subscription idea, while heralds, posters and trailers will be used to bring it to the public's attention.

If the plan is successful locally, Fabian-Wilmer and Vincent officials have indicated they will follow it up with others here, and will adopt it in other houses of the circuit.

150 St. L. Window Tieups On 'Cloak and Dagger'

Local distributors of Barrington Hall Coffee arranged for the extensive window displays.

FINE CO-OP PAGE. Utilizing matted art from the press book, the manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Springfield, Ill., promoted the fine cooperative ad page shown above, in connection with the showing of Paramount's "To Each His Own." The ad was carried in the Illinois State Journal. The press book art heading and layout were used to enlist the cooperation of local merchants and newspaper.

He interprets with light...

● This scene, from the moment of its conception, had dramatic possibilities. But it was the director of photography who made them more than possibilities.

His was the creative skill, the spectacular, interpretive use of light that produced actual drama, vivid, gripping . . . his the perceptive use of photography that made the scene an intense moment of visual reality.

To get the utmost from his special skill, his creative ability, the director of photography naturally wants a superior film, one on which he can depend, one perfectly suited to the conditions and circumstances under which he's working. GALLANT BESS

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Bess P. A. Tour Held Most Effective Stunt in Years

The personal appearance tour (if you can call it that) of the equine star of Metro-Goldwyn-mayer's "Gallant Bess," renamed Bess for the occasion, might well be the most effective exploitation on behalf of any motion picture over a period of several years. The potency of the tour in eliciting front-page newspaper space, whole columns and copious art in daily and Sunday newspapers and fantastic amounts of free radio time wherever the horse has appeared, is almost unbelievable. Newspaper tear sheets and recordings of radio time have been forwarded literally by the hundreds into the office of William R. Ferguson, home office head of MGM's exploitation department. In every city the picture has followed the horse's appearance, thus building enormous local interest in a picture that, without the special exploitation, might be just another piece of entertaining film from the box-office point of view. The efforts of MGM's entire exploitation department have been recognized as extraordinary by a panel of showmen who have selected the "Gallant Bess" tour as the Exploitation Campaign of the Month for September 1946, for SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

In the series of photographs shown in connection with this report, some of the equine star's tricks are shown with the thousands of avid admirers who gathered everywhere to see them. Each one of the photographs shown has been published with many others in at least one newspaper.

That this promotion is almost impossible to duplicate, except if some theatre, producer or

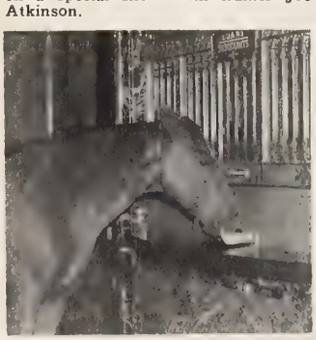
The street parade shown here is typical of those staged in every city where Bess has held forth. This one was in Saginaw, Michigan, enroute to the Franklin Theatre.

Rain has been no deterrent to eager crowds everywhere to see Bess do her tricks. Charleston, W. Va., saw rain but they also saw the equine star perform at the Federal Building.

These hundreds, almost literally hanging from the rafters, are a few of the thousands who gathered in Grand Rapids to see Bess perform. They saw the picture later, too.

Mary McGovern, motion pitcure editor of the Ohio State Journal, Columbus, reads the comics to Bess, who evidently appreciates their humor.

Wounded servicemen at the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Huntington, W. Va., are entertained as Bess puts on a special show with trainer Joe Atkinson.



These two Louisville youngsters are not quite sure that Bess can be as gentle as their parents. But the animal took them for a short stroll.

Bess proudly shows her honorary insignia as army 1st Sergeant in a tieup with the Recruiting Service in Louisville, Investiture took place at Courier-Journal Building.

One of the delegates to the National Humane Association Convention at Columbus receives a "thank you" kiss following receipt of a plaque honoring MGM.

Maybe trainer Joe Atkinson ran out of cash in Evansville, but anyhow Bess cashes a check at the City National Bank, just to make sure the hay would be forthcoming.

A swap of a key to MGM's studios for a key to the city was a stunt put on in every town. Mayor Manson Reichert of Evansville is shown officiating here with trainer Atkinson.

They even closed the public schools in Dayton so that all of the kids could see Bess. So the horse came to Harrison Hill school and put on a special show.

Bess whispers some Hollywood gossip into the attentive ear of Groverneur Blake, motion pitcure editor of Cincinnati's Times-Star.

Novel Ad Campaign Sells 'Notorious' in Harrisburg

Realizing he had to take some drastic steps to substantially better any house records with "Notorious," Harrisburg's Senate manager, Robert Sidman, set up a selling campaign for the run, with only one idea—to get the patrons into the theatre early in the day.

He knew the film, with its name and its advance publicity, was sufficiently pre-sold locally so didn't use too much money on early advertising. He set up a special front, then sat back and waited for the doors to open.

On the first day he decided to arrange to show the picture seven times and found this so successful he mentioned it in newspaper and radio advertising, and always publicized the feature-times, with doors opening at 10 a.m., an hour earlier than usual.

After the successful Wednesday opening he began using the budget money which he had held back theretofore, and slanted all the locally-written ads toward the "housing" problem. He urged those who were able to come to the matinees, listed the number of seats—1200—and pointed out that 8400 patrons could be accommodated daily if some changed their theatre-going to late mornings and matinees.

Writing his own display ads, Sidman pointed out that "Our Notorious Housing Problem is Solved," then proceeded to tell how the patrons could help in the matter, by their early attendance.—HAR.

Bess P.A. Stunt Held Most Effective Stunt in Years

distributor comes up with another wonder animal as smart as Bess, does not detract in any way from the effectiveness of the stunt in advertising not only "Gallant Bess" but the name and trademark of MGM as well. Mr. Ferguson and his field staff have seen to that little matter by prominently displaying the name and trade mark on the white, plush and gold traveling caravan that transports the horse from one city to another into at least one day of extensive public appearances in street parades, visiting newspaper offices, banks, veterans' hospitals, children's hospital and orphans homes, etc., to display her full bag of tricks. Thousands of persons seem to drop everything they are doing and run to see Bess. In some cites the authorities even close the public schools to enable avid youngsters to watch the equine perform.

Details of the manner in which the various local campaigns have been handled by Ferguson's efficient exploitation staff have been published in these columns. Suffice it to state here that every trick known to experienced exploiteers has been used in one city or another in the itinerary and plans are now in process of completion for the animal's appearance in other sections of the country just prior to "Gallant Bess" play dates.

The tour started with the world premiere of "Gallant Bess" in Lexington, Ky., Sept. 14, then wound its way through key cities of West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan and is now on its way to key cities of the Pittsburgh exchange area. From there Bess will be shown in Buffalo and upstate New York cities including Rochester, Syracuse, Auburn and Binghamton. Further progress of the caravan will be announced later.

Reddin West End Fronts Attract Eye

By JOCK MacGREGOR

While in New York recently Tony Reddin, Paramount's British publicity director, criticized New York showmen for what he claimed was a return to circus methods and undignified advertising. Reddin said that Broadway seemed like the midway of a carnival with lots of color and flash but none of the dignity of West End (downtown deluxe) theatres in London. New York theatres, he declared, have so much display out front that "you can't tell what the hell is playing."

For those readers with a well-if-you-think-you-can-do-it-so-much-better-prove-it attitude, the two photographs above of Paramount's two West End cinemas, the Plaza and the Carlton, illustrate how Reddin is handling the displays for the two current offerings, "Blue Skies" and "Monsier Beaucaire."

With the use of electricity for such displays likely to be forbidden for months to come, Reddin concentrates on neat cut-out letters supported by portraits of reasonable dimensions. The marquees, which are restricted in size by regulations, are always stocked with potted flowers in bloom.

While not particularly "flashy," the displays are highly effective and do attract the eye. And while smaller than many in London, they fit in well with the architecture of the theatres, utilizing the space to the best advantage without overcrowding, and are in keeping with the streets in which they are situated.

White Plains Loew House Covers Area Like Blanket

Loew's State Theatre in White Plains, N. Y. has a way of blanketing the adjacent Westchester county territory. The area boasts about five local papers in different communities, and for the engagement of Paramount's "The Searching Wind" the theatre came up with 21 columns of free story space, 62 columns of free scene mat space, while five papers ran a one-third page mat on fashions that used the Loew's slogan: "Yes, the Big Ones Come to Loew's."

Besides the free newspaper space, free time was obtained on radio station WFAS, which helped with fifteen minutes of spot announcements in the form of a quiz contest, with plenty of plugs for "The Searching Wind." Five downtown windows carried displays, and there were counter display in Grant's Five-and-Dime store. The Hotel Roger Smith obliged with a lobby display. Michael Stranger is manager and Mike Piccirillo is his assistant.

Promote Essay Contest

Lou Cohen, manager, Loew's Poli, and Fred R. Greenway, manager, Loew's Poli-Palace, both Hartford, used a newspaper essay contest on "Why I Would Like to Own a Dog," in connection with the opening of "Courage of Lassie." Winners got prizes, etc. Greenway promoted a full page in a local newspaper's Sunday magazine section on the acting career of Frank Morgan.—HD.

Redden, Gauntlett Get Music, Radio Tieups

Dan Redden and Vic Gauntlett, manager and publicity manager, respectively, of the Paramount, Seattle, concentrated on the music angles of United Artists "A Night in Casablanca" and obtained valuable tieups with ballrooms, radio and music store window displays as well as setting up directional sign posts and displays based on the film's comedy.

An extensive promotion with owner Bill O'Hanrahan of the Crescent and Crystal Ballrooms included displays of blow-ups inside the ballrooms and distribution of heralds about the picture. In addition, the orchestras at both ballrooms often played the song, Who's Sorry Now crediting the film both during the time the orchestras were on the air and as straight announcements to the crowds at the ballrooms. Both ballrooms were on the air nightly.

A full center window on the music was obtained at Sherman-Clay's, the city's largest music distribution company, and ten other music windows were covered with special placards, scene stills, etc.

Fifty sign posts were placed near the Paramount on Seattle's main streets with copy directing the public to the theatre. A busy popcorn stand also carried a gag card reading: "Your corns will pop when you see the Marx Brothers in 'A Night in Casablanca'."

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

ARE YOU SELLING YOURSELF SHORT?

By Jack Jackson

I seem to recall having devoted considerable space some months ago to the matter of price increases as being essential to the continued use of black ink on the weekly statements. However, that was long before butter acquired a caviar price tag and Uncle Sam's greenbacks hit an all time low at the butcher's counter. At the time I mentioned it before the writing on the wall was plain enough for most to see. But since then the writing on the wall has been so deeply etched in acid that even the blind can read the reverse Braille. Those jammed lobbies that had managers quaking in their boots every time a Fire Inspector was reported in the vicinity are mighty infrequent these days and the long queues waiting to trade their coin for pasteboard is "just a memory" in most situations—with indications that the condition is spreading.

For some unaccountable reason, theatremen as a whole insist on ignoring rising costs and increased expenses and sidestep the issue of passing along a portion of the "hike" to customers. They seem to be of the opinion that factors that are realities right now will wither into nothingness if they just "stall" long enough.

No exhibitor can afford to shadow-box with inadequate admission charges. The low price problem is a real and powerful business adversary, capable of landing a knockout punch to the biggest and best of theatres and quite capable of literally cutting and slashing the little fellows into mincemeat.

Why theatre owners shy away from applying the sound business rules governing customers relations for the coal dealer, the department store owner, the baseball and football stadia, and other forms of commercial endeavor, is beyond explanation.

Public Willing to Pay Fair Price for Entertainment

Don't think that I'm advocating a "Soak 'em all that the traffic will bear" policy that has brought severe and just criticism on a few showmen. But I do feel that the American public expects, and is willing to pay a fair price for their entertainment. And I know that most of us are not getting it. I fully agree with the principle that every effort should be exerted to keep from offering offense to the patrons of theatres, but I can't agree with the theory that folks will be resentful of a moderate advance in entertainment charges. Through newspapers, the radio, magazine articles and their own personal experiences they have been conditioned for—and for the most part participated in benefits from—the rising costs of everything from soapsuds to casseroles.

For several years past theatres have experienced a constantly mounting expense in labor, advertising, supplies of all kinds, repairs of all kinds and in product. For a long time the customers, like ants at a leaking sugar sack, kept coming in volume sufficient to allow for absorption of the tremendous added load. But now the big crowds—the volume—is a thing of the past and the puny "per person" profit is not sufficient to carry the load of undiminishing expense. Let me add what you already know—that it's going to take something "extra" to bring the SRO sign into use again. It may be "extra" advertising effort, "extra" attractions, "extra" service, new drapes, fixtures or paint or seats. But whatever it is it's going to cost money and the money is going to have to come "out of the sock," because current revenue is just "scrape by" money for most exhibitors with the red ink of one period barely covered by the black of another.

Let me cite a few of the things that should convince you beyond all question that theatre customers have been "conditioned" for increased admissions.

If you haven't already done so go out to the high school stadium and take a gander at the price of seats to see the weekly football games. That 50 cents sign has been thrown away and in its place is one that reads "seats $1.80 including tax." How's that for increase? In the past three years we've seen hot dogs jump from 5 to 8 cents and then to 10 cents at the smallest stands, while at fairs, rodeos and the circus 20 cents is asked without blushing and gotten without complaint.

The bottle of beer—under strict OPA control—advanced from 10 to 12 to 15 to 17 and now stands at 20 cents for the cheapest brands.

Coffee at the corner restaurant has hopped from 5 to 7 and is now 10 cents a cup—and no sugar.

Everything from apples to autos and from zippers to zeppelins has doubled and tripled in price since 1940. Now you tell me, Mr. Showman, have your admission prices kept pace?

In view of the irrefutable evidence on all sides why are we of the moving picture theatre so chicken-hearted about asking our customers to shoulder their share of the added costs which they all know have been saddled on us?

I know what you're thinking, Mr. Reader and I'm 'way ahead of you. You want to know why I am admitting that business is on the down-grade, I still flaunt my literary banner to encourage an increase in admission scales—and risk the possibility of still further thinning the weak and wavering lines of box-office visitors. I've been talking long distance with a manager who has just experienced the reaction of patrons to fluctuating prices. His theatre is the first in this territory to do what a lot of others will soon be doing under the new buying setup—showing first run product on one program at increased prices and reverting to subrun and lower prices on another. The "hike" was from 35 to 50 cents and in the manager's own words: "We had comment but no complaints. Customers would ask 'when did you raise your prices?' and seemed surprised when they returned for another picture and found the admission charge at the old level of 35 cents. I really believe that the higher price built attendance as well as receipts because we attracted those folks who consider price an indication of quality."

This actual experience should be conclusively convincing. It is hard to believe that any group of patrons—knowing as

New Patron Service

A new patron service has been inaugurated by the four theatres in Fall River, Mass., operated by Nathan Yamins, with the installation of a telephone switchboard at the Capitol Theatre office, where calls for the Center, Empire, Capitol and Durfee are received by Mrs. Francis Perry from 9 a.m. until noon. Questions about programs, time schedules, etc., are answered by Mrs. Perry.

they do the heavy added costs of operation—will resent a fair advance in the price of their entertainment. It is a pretty safe bet that the customers who will accept the increase gracefully—as being well warranted and long overdue—will outnumber the "gripers" 100 to 1.

There are many exhibitors who honestly feel that "static" in admission charges is a cardinal principle of theatre business and that any tampering with the established formula is an invitation to the mythological Zeus and his mighty sons to start hurling thunderbolts at the marquee. For these and others who are still wishy-washy about taking early action on the important matter let me expound further. First, I'd like to outline some facts that emphatically refute all contrary reasoning and, second, advance a pet theory that has been mine for many years and may help to influence affirmative decision.

Afraid of Offending

Let's suppose that you and I (and you must bring along a few of your regular cutsomers) go on a shopping tour. We stop at the haberdashers and look over a few shirts. None of us—you or I or those customers of yours—expect the proprietor to explain why his shirts cost more today than in past years. And we don't expect to find the same price tag on a silk gabardine sport shirt that is placed on a khaki work shirt. When we enter the suit department we fully expect that the all wool merchandise will be far more expensive than the cotton or rayon fabrics. The same goes for socks, shoes, etc.—and on the distaff side, for everything the wife and daughter wear and everything that goes into the running of the household. We all—including those customers you are afraid of offending or losing—know better than to look for the same merchandise, much less the same prices, that existed before the war—or before the end of the war for that matter. And while I'm about it let me ask you about the legitimate shows, the carnivals, circus or other attractions that have visited your town. Have they been charging the same prices as in the long ago? And has their attendance suffered materially? If you're still unconvinced go talk with the owner of the bowling alley, the pool hall, the domino parlor. Get a line on the new price of tennis or golf balls and go home and give yourself a sales talk.

Just one more piece of evidence: the impressive list of road show engagements, at which the pictures of special quality have garnered big money in cities and towns across this country when they played advance dates at advanced scales—the record further proving that added prestige that accrued to the pictures thus shown for higher rates importantly contributed to the box-office take at theatres showing the pictures at later runs.

That pet theory I mentioned is a made-to-order traveling companion for the economic example just outlined. Here 'tis:

Will Force Recognition

When we happen to have a super-duper film on exhibition—I mean one of the really big ones that smack the bullseye everywhere—it is always sold to us by the exchanges at increased rental charges. But do we, like the coal dealer or dry goods merchant, make any effort to pass along any portion of the increased cost to our customers? Can anyone blame our customers when they contend the follow up attraction—a medium priced programmer—to be "lousy"? It is just that, by comparison to the swell film we showed them the day or week previous at the same identical price. It is my sincere belief that passing along the "hike" in price that the distributor insists on for "specials" to the theatre patron will not only swell grosses but actually force recognition of the higher film value and thereby create the kind of attention that brings new faces to the cashier's cage. In addition, we are taking measures—by lowering the price on programmers—to protect ourselves from the gripes of the hard-to-satisfy contingent who seem to expect

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK

Maintenance

FLUORESCENT LAMPS — Maintenance

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

GENERAL

Do not turn fluorescent lamps on and off more often than necessary.

Be sure all lamps are tightly secured in their sockets, and that all wiring connections are well made.

Do not throw a fluorescent lamp away until it has been definitely determined to be defective. The fault may be in the starter—starters give more trouble than either lamps or ballasts.

Use high power factor ballasts.

Keep all lamps clean. Dirt lowers light output. If lamps and fixtures are not cleaned, they may lose up to 50 per cent of their efficiency in the course of a few months.

TROUBLE SHOOTING—NEW INSTALLATION

1. Lamp does not light or glow at the ends.

Causes may be:

a. Bad contact in the sockets. Turn the lamp slightly with current "on."

b. Defective starter. Substitute a starter from a lamp that is operating properly.

c. Defective lamp. Substitute a lamp that is operating properly.

d. Open contacts or wrong connections. Trace wiring in detail, comparing it with wiring diagram on ballast.

e. Low line voltage. Check line voltage at the fixture. It should fall within the proper range for the ballast used.

2. Lamp glows steadily at both ends, but does not start.

Cause may be:

a. Starter contacts stuck, or capacitor in the starter short-circuited. Substitute a starter from a lamp that is working properly.

3. Lamp glows at both ends, flashes intermittently, but does not start.

Causes may be:

a. Defective or wrong type starter. Substitute one from a lamp that is working properly.

b. Low temperature of surrounding air. This condition is much aggravated by drafts. Shield the lamp from drafts, or enclose it to conserve heat. Increase line voltage at the fixture. If necessary, use a thermal type starter.

every Hollywood release be a classic and to rate with the best yet shown.

For the life of me I can't see where we can lose anything by stealing a page from the business primer that has been used by other merchants ever since the first plum pudding was traded for an Indian pony a few days after the Mayflower landed.

Some Things Cost More

Hard coal costs more than soft; silk cost more than rayons; woolens are higher in price than cottons; porterhouse brings more coin than hamburger and so on for practically everything that people wear, eat or use. Why should entertainment be sold on a different basis? There is no uniformity in the price of rides in an amusement park. The price of tickets to Chatauqua series fluctuate according to the grade and fame of the talent being offered; the same is true of the local concert series tickets and so on ad infinitum.

Shake Off Those Shackles

With these indisputable examples of "what's correct and acceptable" practice in dealing with the patrons of the American business marts, why should the business of exhibiting motion pictures be different?

It seems to me that the time is at hand when theatremen will either have to shake off those outmoded shackles of tradition or get out of business. And, if the reports about the unionizing of floor and office help in Chicago theatres is true, the time for decision may be closer than any of us suspect.

Inventory Supplies

By having the head of your cleaning staff give an inventory on the last day of each month of exactly how much of each cleansing material is on hand you can make an accurate check on how much is being used. This is doubly important now, with material shortages an important maintenance worry. Make the cleaners accountable to the manager and they will hold their jobs accountable to themselves.

Conserve Soap Powder

In these days of soap powder shortage it might be a good idea to check the cleaning staff on how the powder is used. Instruct them not to dump quantities of powder on the floor and then mop, but to use the powder sparingly in pails of hot water. Just as much cleansing can be done with a smaller amount used correctly.

Queen Contest Held in Parsons by Art Turner

Sponsored by the Parsons Lion Club, a contest was held recently in Parsons, Kans., to select that community's most charming young lady as local queen candidate to represent Parsons in the American Royal annual exposition held later in Kansas City.

To qualify for the competition, girls had to be between the ages of 18 and 25; single, not previously married. Judging by an out-of-town impartial panel was based on charm and personality (40 per cent), alertness to fashion trends as evidenced in costume (40 per cent) and culture (20 per cent).

The nine entrants were sponsored by participating local merchants, and the selection of the queen took place on the stage of the Parsons Theatre, managed by Arthur Turner, who arranged the local event as chairman of the Lions Club's projects committee.

Photos of the competing girls for lobby and publicity purposes were furnished free by a photographer-member of the Lions Club. Newspapers devoted many columns of stories and art to the competition to select the Parsons representative.

Oil the Hinges

It doesn't have to be done very often and therefore the task is missing from most managerial charts to maintenance crews. But a drop of oil in door hinges and seat hinges makes for quiet operation during the show. Remind the maintenance crew now.

---

4. Lamp is slow starting, flashes on and off, or will not start.

Cause may be:

a. Low line voltage. Check line voltage at the fixture. It should fall within the proper range for the ballast used.

5. Lamp arc swirls or spirals.

Causes may be:

a. Low line voltage. Check line voltage at the fixture.

b. Defective lamp. Continue to operate the lamp: it will usually clear up the arc in a few hours. Turning it off for a few seconds will frequently stop the swirling. Replace lamp only if these remedies fail.

TROUBLE SHOOTING— EXISTING INSTALLATION

1. Lamp flashes on and off.

Causes may be:

a. Lamp has reached end of its normal life. Replace it promptly, to conserve the starter and to avoid overheating the ballast.

b. Low temperature of surrounding air. This condition is much aggravated by drafts. Shield the lamp from drafts, or enclose it to conserve heat. Increase line voltage at the fixture. If necessary, use a thermal type starter.

c. Low line voltage. Check line voltage at the fixture. It should fall within the proper range for the ballast used.

2. Lamp blackens prematurely at the ends.

Causes may be:

a. Excessively frequent starting of the lamp. Avoid frequent switching if possible. Each start wears away some of the emission coating on the electrode.

b. Starter switch opens too soon or flashes lamp several times at each start. Replace the starter. Ideal starter switch should hold the electrode circuit closed until a fluorescent glow appears at the ends of the lamp and then open the electrode circuit at that instant.

c. High or low line voltage. Check the voltage at the fixture. It should fall within the proper range for the ballast used.

d. Ballast passing excessive current. Compare the wattage rating of the auxiliary with the wattage rating of the lamp. Compare the lamp circuit current with the rated current of the lamp.

3. Lamp glows steadily at both ends but does not light.

Cause may be:

a. Starter contacts stuck or capacitor in starter short-circuited. Replace the starter.

The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Fox Inter-Mountain Sponsors 'Live' Concert Series in Denver House

The fact that Denver, Colorado, has for many years had a traditional love for concerts and classical music may have created the situation which motivated Fox Denver Theatres, under the personal supervision of Denver District Manager Harry E. Huffman of Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres, to act as sponsor for last season's successful Concert Series at Denver City Auditorium and to prepare for an even more brilliant Concert Series for the 1946-47 season.

On the other hand, it may be that Mr. Huffman's innate sense of showmanship recognized the inevitability of Concert competition in a city such as Denver so that he turned that competition into a two-fold benefit to his theatre chain. By sponsoring the Concert Series, Mr. Huffman believed that he could use the personal concert appearances in Denver of great artists who have appeared in motion pictures, or who have contracted to play on the screen, into a box-office bonzana for the Fox Denver theatres, by grouping profits from the engagements with motion picture theatre receipts rather than have them go into the coffers of a rival organization, and at the same time to build locally the popularity of the stars.

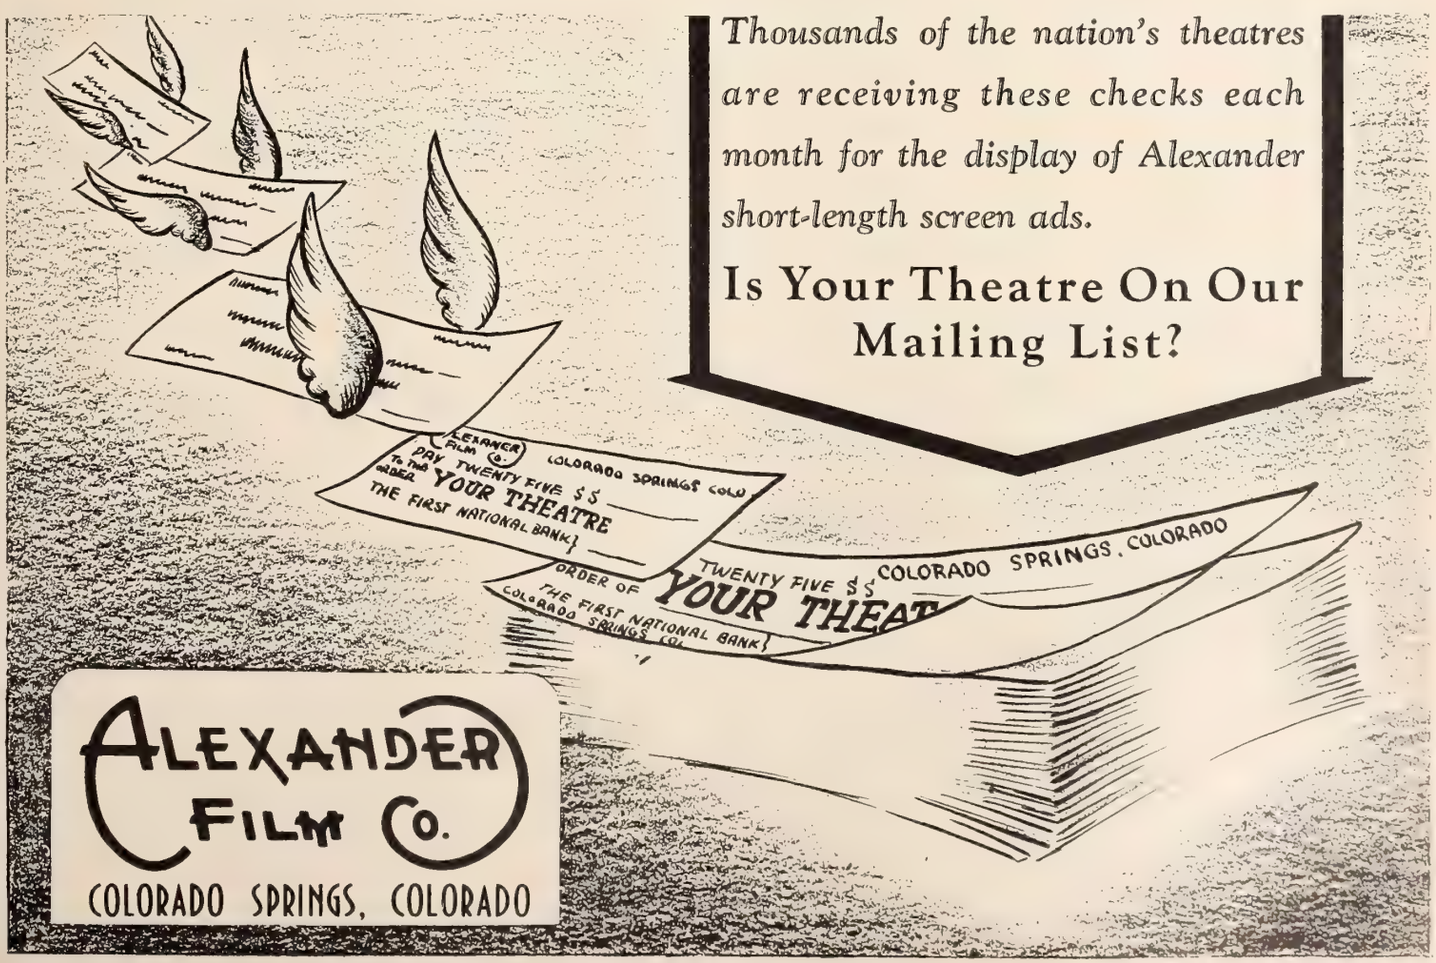
Whatever Mr. Huffman's motives (and who can think of better ones than those outlined above?) he has brought great music to capacity audiences, increased profits to the theatres he operates, enhanced acceptability with potential movie audiences of concert stars and has become the recipient of congratulations (for what has become a civic project) from his superior officers and from Denver civic officials and the heads of clubs and organizations in the community.

According to a report by Alberta Pike, advertising and publicity director of Fox Denver Theatres, written for Showmanship, a publication of that organization, Mr. Huffman hopes some day to see a real "wedding" of live concert stars and motion picture exhibitors.

He suggests that the movie makers keep an eye on up-and-coming stars in the concert field and that when studio contracts are signed with such a star, contracts also be signed with exhibitors for a series of "live" concerts in the theatres in which the star's pictures will be shown, with the star to be used as a build-up for the picture. The picture then might be brought back for a return engagement. The probability that the star might increase a normal few hundred dollars receipts to probably $1000 or more, is well worth thinking about, Mr. Huffman believes.

In an editor's note, Mrs. Pike writes, " . . . Showmanship believes that Huffman's idea is a contribution to the community and to the industry and musical arts. It is assuredly an idea well worth consideration."

Century Installs Opinion Research, Survey Dept.



In an effort to achieve a more precise operation and to help eliminate faulty judgment, Century Theatres is installing a full-scale opinion research and survey department, according to Fred J. Schwartz, Century vice-president.

The department, with offices in the Century Building off Times Square, will maintain a working liaison with Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, N. J., whose experts will cooperate in perfecting the "quick-answer" techniques necessary for this kind of sampling.

While admitting that the sampling of public opinion might never be "the panacea" for all the exhibitor ills, Schwartz stated that he believed the new department would condition the company's thinking on many decisions.

"There is no question but that similar departments have aided other business," the Century vice-president declared, "and there is every reason why knowledge of the attitude of the public on a given question will add weight to our decisions. The findings of the department will be guideposts for our advertising and publicity department, film department, real estate."

On the agenda for the new department will be such chores as locating the potential "feed" of an existing theatre, or a new one; travel routes; assays of advertising media; reactions to theatre service, entertainment preferences, admission price levels, etc.; as well as population breakdowns throughout the circuit for income, occupation.

THEATRES BACK COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE, DISCUSS NEW PROJECTIONIST CONTRACT

Theatre men and personnel, following their accustomed generous procedure, were reported more than 100 per cent in contributions to the Community Chest campaign under way here now. E. Gerard Wollaston, State manager, and chairman of the downtown houses, was able to state in a report to the Central Division of the drive of solid backing for the five principal theatres of the city.

Negotiations for a new contract have begun by Projectionists Local 488 and Stagehands Local 98. The old agreements expire Dec. 31, it is understood.

The State Theatre and the Rio, both in Fabian's circuit here, are being repainted and redecorated in part. At the State the men's and women's lounges have been painted, as well as the marquee and upright sign. At the Rio the upright and marquee were renovated and repainted.

All the downtown houses this month are promoting "go to church" by flashing on the screen at each break a trailer urging attendance at church services. The five downtown managers banded together to get the film and incidental music.

A large attendance of theatre employes of this city was present at funeral services for William J. Wenrick, 62, last Saturday. He was a retired private policeman in the city who for several years was doorman at the Rio. He died of a heart attack.

Trudy LaWatsch, movie columnist for the Harrisburg Telegraph, is assisting John Parker Samuels, local theatrical manager, in his efforts to bring to this city a series of programs. First was the concert of Marian Anderson, while on October 29 the original company is scheduled to present "Carmen Jones" at the Mosque.

A tax on admissions to theatres and amusements, to be a minimum of one per cent and a maximum of five, has been voted by the League of Third Class Cities at its annual convention here. The League plans to petition the State Legislature to enact such a bill affecting third class cities of the State. In addition it will seek a tax on coin machines, including theatre vending apparatus.

Genevieve Funk, secretary at the Colonial, received a letter from her brother, Donald, telling of his safe arrival with the Army in Korea.

Gerry Wollaston, manager of the State, is entertaining patrons with a "Harvest of Hits," a brief trailer outlining the big pictures to come to the State within the next few months.

Laura Beinhaur and Thelma Rader are new at the Colonial. Jack O'Rear, manager, is back after a two-day illness, and Franklin Maury, assistant, has returned after visiting relatives in Reading.

Edgar Goth, Fabian advertising and publicity man, made a trip to Johnstown this week. A visitor here was Henry Schlittenhart, of the Fabian New York office.

After breaking his arm when he tripped over a standee post, Victor Palese is back at work at the State.

ROBERT YOUNG DIES AT 83; BOX OFFICES AFFECTED BY STRIKE

Robert Young, veteran exhibitor and manufacturer, died at the age of 83 after a protracted illness. In 1906 he opened the Princess Theatre, and at various times thereafter managed the Victoria and Broadway Theatres, as well as others in Cleveland and Youngstown. He owned the Francis Willard Candy Co. at the time of his death. A wife and three sons survive.

The transit strike is credited with causing considerable financial loss to local exhibitors, box office receipts having dropped in some instances to 60 per cent below normal. Al Gorson of U.A. managed to turn the strike to his own advantage by hiring taxi-cabs to transport patrons from outlying districts directly to the Ohio Theatre to see "Mr. Ace." The stunt was an editor's "natural," and local papers gave full accounts of it.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE CONCEDES TICKET POINT FOR SUNDAY SHOWS

With the tacit approval of the Theatres Branch of the Ontario Government, the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada has conceded an important point in connection with the holding of Sunday midnight shows, where permitted by municipalities, by ruling that issue will not be taken if patrons, who have purchased tickets during previous weekdays, are permitted to enter a theatre at 11:30 o'clock Sunday night. The privilege is conditional on the advance sale of tickets of special color, the advertising of performances as "After Sunday Midnight Shows" and the opening of the box-office for direct sales after the midnight hour. The Alliance, which is powerful in the enforcement of Sunday observance, gave the ruling without prejudice to its official opinion that midnight shows "are not in the best interests of any community" and that "the hours past midnight cannot be regarded as either necessary or desirable for such purposes." The decision was reached on a "test case" with the Vanity Theatre, Windsor, Ont.

Although it was merely announced that L'Anglais was in the city, the inference was that there would be discussions regarding world distribution rights for "The Stronghold" which is being produced in English and French versions in the Quebec Productions' studio at St. Hyacinthe, Que. It has been stated freely that J. HARTFORD

MAY ALLOW SUNDAY SHOWS TO OPEN HOUR EARLIER; TO HONOR OLSHAN AT DINNER

Dr. Lloyd H. Bugbee, superintendent of schools in West Hartford, announced last week that as a further precaution against outbreak of polio in the town, all inter-mural sports programs and dances in grades below senior high school will be cancelled until further notice. The second annual series of Saturday morning motion picture programs to be presented at the Central Theatre, West Hartford, by the West Hartford PTA Audio-Visuals Aids Committee, have also been postponed.

Hartford's theatremen are hoping to hear some good news soon. Last week, a proposal making the legal hours for motion pictures on Sundays from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. (as now allowed by state law, but not by the city) was offered to the Common Council by Alderman Louis Kosoff. The Council, it has been learned, has referred the resolution to its Ordinance Committee. At present, theatres are operating from 2 p.m. on Sundays.

ATTEND PREVIEW. MILWAUKEE

William Heiman, who has been operating the Peerless Theatre on the north side of Milwaukee for some years, announces that he has sold it to the Baker family, who took possession Oct. 15. This showhouse has been charging 30 cents admission for five days of the week, while on two days the price has been 12 cents, based on the type of pictures shown. It is not known what change in policy will be made by the new owners.

It won't be long now before the remodeled Towne Theatre, located near Milwaukee's busiest business intersection, will be opened to the public. Although still boarded up, to permit entrance and lobby changes, the new marquee signs show the name of the theatre so that it can be read for more than a block away, and they announce the first picture, "A Night in Casablanca" is to be shown at this new United Artists outlet. If nothing interferes with the remodeling program, the show house should open about the middle of November.

Frank Cook

Working at being a showman from the time you're 10 until you are 82 years old sure gives you a chance to get well acquainted. Last week this column mentioned Frank Cook's tenure of seventy years a showman and we heard from so many of his friends that we print his picture in the column this week.

On October 10th Bert Fischer, an old timer in show business, appeared before the Delafield, Wis., Chamber of Commerce, and outlined his plans for the new movie theatre to be opened in that city as soon as a large garage building can be remodeled. His son, Lester Fischer, will manage the show house, which is to have 500 seats.

Two new theatre projects have been put on the boards for planning and design by Peacock and Belongia, Milwaukee architects and specialists in theatre design. These are a 500 to 600-seat house for Lawrence Bucholtz at Kekoosa, and a slightly larger theatre for August Berkholtz at Two Rivers. Both, according to Myles Belongia, will incorporate new ideas, many of which the architects firm treats as strictly hush-hush. Belongia declares there "will be a decided change in design and construction from now on. All the pent-up ideas that could not be executed due to war restrictions will be embodied in our new designs."

The same architectural firm will have the latest of its theatre creations open for public use when the Middleton Theatre, Middleton, opens the latter part of November. This is one of the first pre-fabricated houses in this part of the country, the only other similar prefab theatre being located in Texas. The Middleton will seat 550, is owned and will be operated by the Middleton Theatre, Inc., in which Egon Peck, and R. Utkowski, and E. J. Haggestad are associated. The theatre features a large lobby, entirely enclosed in plate glass which extends from ceiling to sidewalk level. The contour of the auditorium is semi-circular.

Early in October the new floor for the Omah Theatre at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., was poured. Now the laying of the bricks for the new front for the show house can be begun. The work should have been completed some time ago, but was delayed due to a lack of material. It is not known when the show house will be opened to the public, as other materials and equipment may be short as the work progresses.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Government Asks Views on Quota; Producers Get By Despite Scarcities of Materials and Labor

By JOCK MacGREGOR

The Government has asked interested bodies their views on the continuance of the Quota Act which at present stipulates that all distributors and theatres handle a percentage of British films.

MacGregor

It appears from all indications that recommendations are for lifting of the Quota on the distributors because of the phenomenal success of the better class pictures. Even serious subjects like "Men of Two Worlds," have done better than expectations.

The more I visit the studios the more amazed I am that the producers are doing so well with poor equipment and serious labor problems. Now comes the news that timber and plaster, already in short supply, may be further curtailed.

Though fifteen months have lapsed since the war's end, all studios are not available for production while others are carrying on under difficulties. I found that at Ealing to make the most of limited facilities, they were shooting on the model stage which is not sound proof. Since the film was Charles Dickens' "Nicholas Nickleby" with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, the sound of airplanes did not help. In this scene, Producer Michael Balcon's daughter Jill was making her screen debut.

On the sound stages Charles Frend was directing, "The Loves of Joanna Godden" with Googie Withers and Jean Kent. On location Balcon has "Frieda" with the Swedish discovery, Mai Zetterling, and in the cutting room "Hue and Cry."

With "Dead of Night," "The Captive Heart" and "Overlanders" breaking records everywhere 1946 has been a big year for Ealing.

At Pinewood, HQ of J. Arthur Rank's Independent producers, I met two recruits to publicity, Stuart Chant of Cineguild and David Pursall, Individual. Cineguild have recently completed "Great Expectations" which David Lean has directed with Valerie Hobson and John Mills. Possibly it is the title, but those who have seen the film are most enthusiastic over it. On the floor is "Take My Life' with Greta Gynt. This is Ronnie Neame's first directorial assignment.

At Riverside I watched James Mason completing "Upturned Glass" for Sydney Box. This is quite a family afair, for his wife, Pamela Kellino, besides appearing opposite him, wrote the script and together they are associate producers. There is still doubt as to when he goes to Hollywood and what he will do if and when he does.

I had lunch with Steve Millar who is here to bolster Rank's American publicity outlet and seems pretty happy with the assignment. Without raising the Union Jack or merely being patriotic, I can say that with a few exceptions, the current line-up has a lot to offer showmen everywhere. With Hollywood cutting its schedules, Rank may well provide the potatoes—I nearly said the showmen's bread and butter—so badly needed everywhere.

Passing the Edgeware Road Odeon, a neighborhood house, on a Saturday evening, I was amazed at the rude way the doorman was handling the line. I mentioned this to a head office executive and was further surprised when I realized that this attitude was condoned since this is a "tough" situation.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Wife Wanted

Monogram Drama 73 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Nicely paced drama that will prove entertaining to the average adult.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do satisfactorily as program fare for subsequent runs and will help bolster the top half of weak double bills.

Cast: Kay Francis, Paul Cavanaugh, Robert Shayne, Veda Ann Borg, Teala Loring, Edgar Hayes, John Gallaudet, Jonathan Hale, Tim Ryan, Barton Yarborough, Paul Everton, Selmer Jackson. Credits: Producers, Jeffrey Bernerd and Kay Francis. Director, Phil Karlson. Screenplay by Caryl Coleman and Sidney Sutherland from the novel, "Wife Wanted," by Robert Callahan. Photography, Harry Neumann.

Plot: An actress whose career is slipping becomes a partner of a real estate broker. Unknown to her, he operates a matrimonial bureau and uses her as bait for one of his victims, who apparently commits suicide. A newspaper reporter, in an effort to crack the suicide case, contacts the actress and together they uncover other innocent victims of the bureau. The racket is exposed and the reporter and actress fall in love.

Comment: Monogram has done a satisfactory job in this actionful drama, with director Phil Karlson pacing the picture so well that the audience's attention is held throughout. Production values, as given the picture by co-producers Bernerd and Miss Francis, are above average for this type of offering. The cast is more than adequate, with Miss Francis and Robert Shayne, especially, turning in very good performances. The idea of the "friendship" club will hit home with many people, because it is a widely known and practiced device. Bernerd continues his clever exploitation showmanship, taking advantage of timely topics. Where the lead picture on a double bill doesn't measure up to expectations, this 73-minute film will materially help in assuaging the customers' disappointment. Its own star values are not quite strong enough for top billing, however.

Laughing Lady

(Previewed in London)

Anglo-American Operetta 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Robust period romance enhanced with tasteful Technicolor and a tuneful score.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: All the ingredients for a popular hit are here, with Technicolor to offset lack of marquee names in American showings.

Cast: Anne Zeigler, Webster Booth, Francis L. Sullivan, Peter Graves, Chili Bouchier, Felix Aylmer, Paul Dupis, Hay Petrie and others. Credits: Screenplay by Jack Whittingham. Director, Paul Stein. Produced by Louis Jackson.

Plot: Webster Booth, to save his mother from the guillotine during the French Revolution, goes to England to recover a priceless necklace. He learns that the Prince of Wales is giving it to Anne Zeigler to celebrate her engagement to an aged courtier. As an artist, he is commissioned to paint her and the two fall in love. Realizing he cannot steal the necklace, he returns to France to take his mother's place on the scaffold. Discovering that his servant has actually stolen the gems, Booth sends him back to England and Anne, hearing the story, rushes to Paris to plead with Robespierre who agrees to free him in return for money.

Comment: This first Technicolor picture to be produced by an independent company is a spectacular and tuneful operetta. Louis Jackson has gone all out to concentrate on box-office requirements and has succeeded in his endeavor. The critics may decry it, but the ingredients for a robust period romance are here in full—horse races, highwaymen, gambling for big stakes, Madame Guillotine, and the picturesque Regency Period with its accompanying pomp and ceremony for a background. Anne Zeigler and Webster Booth are in fine voice in the leading roles and put over Hans May's musical score to advantage. The picture will be a big hit in Great Britain where the stars are popular on the radio, but for other countries there are the tunes, settings and Technicolor as selling angles.

Carnival

(Reviewed in London)

GFD Drama 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT (Adult) A beautifully tender love story that should satisfy most audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With its theme and ballet sequences, this will do best with discriminating audiences and art houses where these qualities can be sold to advantage.

Cast: Sally Gray, Michael Wilding, Bernard Miles, Stanley Holloway, Jean Kent, Hazel Court, Nancy Price, Ronald Ward, Mackenzie Ward, Espinosa, Catherine Lacey, Brenda Bruce, Anthony Holles. Credits: Adapted from the novel by Compton Mackenzie. Directed by Stanley Haynes. Produced by Fileipo del Giudice. A Two Cities picture presented by the J. Arthur Rank Organization.

Plot: Sally Gray, a ballet dancer, is desparately in love with Michael Wilding, a sculptor, who will not marry her because he feels it would curb his freedom as an artist. When she refuses to live with him, he goes abroad. Her mother dies and to find a home for her crippled sister, she enters into a loveless marriage with Bernard Miles, a dour, bigoted farmer. Months later, Sally meets Wilding again and in a fit of jealousy Miles kills her.

Comment: Though definitely an adult subject, "Carnival," is in no way sordid or offensive. It is a beautifully tender love story which has been attractively staged against a colorful background of London at the turn of the century and the rugged Cornish coast. The restaurants, theatres, ballet schools and artists' quarters of the period have been well reproduced. Unfortunately, there is an unhappy ending and though far from lacking in popular appeal, the film will probably have most success in America in the art houses where full play can be made of the theme and the ballet sequences. Michael Wilding gives a pleasing performance as the artist, while no less successful is the work of Sally Gray, who has been absent from the screen for a long time, as the carefree ballet dancer who hardens against life.

The Brute Man

PRC Horror 58 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) There are enough murders and suspense in this chiller-diller to satisfy the most rabid mystery fan.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should bring in gratifying box-office returns where mysteries are favored.

Cast: Rondo Hatton, Tom Neal, Jane Adams, Donald MacBride, Peter Whitney, Fred Coby, Jan Wiley, Janelle Johnson. Credits: Produced by Ben Pivar. Directed by Jean Yarbrough. Original story by Dwight V. Babcock. Screenplay by George Bricker and M. Coates Webster. Photography, Maury Gertsman.

Plot: Police searching for a killer who has been running rampant and killing scores of people finally locate one of his hiding places and there uncover some newspaper clippings containing the picture of two men and a girl. By locating and questioning one of these men they discover that the killer is the other man who, because of an injury to his face, has become a depraved, disfigured human being. He is finally cornered when he comes to call on a blind girl whom he has been trying to befriend.

Comment: This is a chiller-diller that will give the fans of this type of fare their money's worth in murder and suspense. Story supplies a murder in every few feet of film and there is enough suspense in the fifty-eight minutes of running time to entertain them in a very satisfactory manner. Originally made by Universal as the second in the Rondo Hatton series of "Creeper" pictures, film was sold outright to PRC for their schedule, and it looks like a good investment for them. It should bring in gratifying box-office returns for it has a definite appeal for the mystery followers. Rondo Hatton makes a very convincing menace in the title role and Jane Adams turns in a believable portrayal as a blind girl who is the Creeper's only friend. To Jean Yarbrough goes credit for a direction job that maintains the suspense and holds the interest throughout, and George Bricker and M. Coates Webster get credit for a screenplay that combines all the mystery elements that appeal. Donald McBride, Peter Whitney and Fred Coby are others in the cast who acquit themselves to advantage. Production was handled by Ben Pivar.

Never Say Goodbye

Warner Bros. Comedy 96 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Errol Flynn departs from his customary role and gives a satisfactory account of himself in this farce-comedy which will entertain his followers and also many others. For the women, there is a surprise in store when they get a glimpse of Forrest Tucker. The swoon-agers will find he has plenty of what it takes to "send" them.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This should draw well wherever Errol Flynn is popular.

Cast: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker, Lucile Watson, S. Z. Sakall, Forrest Tucker, Donald Woods, Peggy Knudsen, Tom D'Andrea, Hattie McDaniel, Charles

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Visitors Are Barred from the Hollywood Studios for Duration of Jurisdictional Dispute; Production Now 'Hobbling' Along at Considerable Cost to Producers

A complete ban on film studio visits has been put in effect at all major studios as a result of the current strike and will be continued for the duration of the trouble. Studios reported that before the strike began the volume of sightseers on the sound stages had grown into a serious production problem, and that added difficulties brought about by the strike made it impossible to continue tours of the lots. This is another phase of the labor problem, which added to the laboratory situation, is proof of the difficulties confronting the studios. Production is hobbling along at great cost and for an undetermined period.

U-I Signs Viennese Coach

Elsa Schreiber, Viennese stage director, has been signed by U-I to a term deal as coach and test director by William Goetz, president in charge of production.

Meanwhile, two films continue on U-I's agenda, the long-shooting "I'll Be Yours" and the recently started "The Egg and I."

6 Shooting at Warners

Warner Brothers have a full schedule before the cameras, working their sets with replacements for the striking CSU members. Elder of the lot is "Possessed," Joan Crawford starrer, which is getting final scenes. "Love and Learn" is in its second month, with Jack Carson, Robert Hutton, Martha Vickers and Janis Paige. Others going are "Night Unto Night," "My Wild Irish Rose" (in Technicolor), "The Woman in White" and "Deep Valley."

Columbia Starts Serial

Producer Sam Katzman is a mighty busy gentleman, having just completed a film for Monogram and immediately starting a serial for Columbia. Katzman selected location sites for his production, released through Harry Cohn's lot, of "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy," a 15-part chapter-play. Based on the radio program, it has just started shooting.

Ruth Donnelly, veteran comedienne, is the most recent addition to the cast of "Millie's Daughter," being directed by Sidney Salkow. Gladys George, Gay Nelson and Paul Campbell play other major parts. Columbia has six other pictures going, including the Cinecolor independent, "Twin Sombreros," being produced by Harry Joe Brown.

'Fifth Avenue' in 11th Week

Originally scheduled to be finished by now, Monogram has added a week to the shooting of Roy Del Ruth's "It Happened on Fifth Avenue." The film is in its 11th week of production.

Starting date on the next Johnny Mack Brown was pushed back to Oct. 28 to enable Raymond Hatton to finish his role in a Cecil B. DeMille picture at Paramount. Lambert Hillyer will direct for producer Barney Sarecky. "Ginger," dog story produced by Lindsley Parsons, had added scenes made and is now completed. Oliver Drake directed the additional footage, with Frank Albertson, Barbara Reed and Johnny Calkins working.

Arthur Dreifuss finished his direction for Sam Katzman on "Teen-Agers Go West," which featured Freddie Stewart and June Preisser and the bands of Jerry Wald and Spade Cooley. A 50-piece orchestra, under Eddie Kaye, is scoring "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

Paramount's Quartet

Paramount has cut production to a quartet of pictures, including two in Technicolor. They are "Unconquered" and "Desert Town," Hal Wallis Production. Others are "The Big Haircut" and "Variety Girl."

Robert S. Taplinger is staying with the studio in a production capacity for a few weeks and will then leave to establish his own offices for industrial and public relations in this country and abroad.

PRC Starts Michael Shayne

PRC finished "Wild Country," with Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates, Stan Jolley, Doug Fowley and Peggy Wynn. Shot mostly on location, the singing western was produced by Jerry Thomas and directed by Ray Taylor. A new Michael Shayne detective drama, under the direction of Sam Newfield, was started; it is "The Corpse Came Calling," being produced by Sig Neufeld and featuring Hugh Beaumont, Cheryl Walker, Paul Bryar and Louise Currie. It's a field day for the Neufelds, with Stanley serving as assistant director.

Also going, on distant location at Mount Shasta, is "The Red Stallion."

EL Completes Scoring

Scoring of "It's a Joke, Son," Senator Claghorn (Kenny Delmar) starring vehicle, has been completed at Eagle Lion by a 55-piece orchestra. The music was built around Southern tunes, chief among them Dixie. Irving Friedman, musical director, will complete background music for "Bedelia," English-made picture, before it is released. The original score is being sent from England.

MGM Starts 'Maisie'

MGM started "Undercover Maisie," Ann Sothern's latest in that perennial series. Harry Beaumont is directing. Leon Ames gets an important role in the film. Another picture just begun by Metro is "The Personal Touch," with Lionel Barrymore, Lucille Bremer, James

Would Use Same Cast For Four Productions

A new production plan which calls for the same stars and supporting cast of players for three pictures and a possible fourth, now being written, and which will be spread out over a period of years is being discussed by Walter Wanger and William Goetz, Universal-International production chief.

Idea stems from Wanger's purchase of James Street's novel, "Tap Roots." If he succeeds in purchasing "Oh Promised Land" and "By Valour of Arms," remaining two of the trilogy, and a fourth now being written by Street, it would mean that the stars signed for the first film would be put under contract for a period covering all four pictures, since the characters carry through the entire series, although not in sequence.

Harry Stern Productions To Film Epic Drama

Harry Stern, distribution executive, has formed Harry Stern Productions to film an epic drama, "Imperial Valley," whose background will be the Colorado River valley which was transformed into one of the richest agricultural regions in the world.

Although only 44, Stern is one of the veterans of the industry's distribution branch. He entered the motion picture field in 1920 when he joined the old Fox Film Corp. Subsequently he was associated with United Artists, and at one stage of his career was charged with the American distribution of Gaumont British product.

Rossen to Direct Garfield Vehicle

With production scheduled to start November 15, Robert Rossen has been signed by Enterprise as director for John Garfield on that actor's first independent production, "The Burning Journey."

Rossen has checked onto the lot for meetings with screenwriter Abraham Polonsky, Garfield, and producer R. B. Roberts.

To Direct 'Guilty'

John Reinhardt, who has concentrated almost entirely on the direction of 20th-Fox and Paramount Spanish pictures, has been signed by Jack Wrather Productions to direct its initial film, "The Guilty," which will co-star Bonita Granville and Don Castle. Production starts next month at Monogram.

Screenplay by Arthur

Art Arthur, former columnist for the Brooklyn Eagle, who served three years as an Army private, has been signed by Producer Seymour Nebenzal to write the screenplay of "Heaven Only Knows," forthcoming United Artists release. Al Rogell will direct.

HOLLYWOOD

'Coup de Grace' to be Made Entirely in France

Anatole Litvak's production, "Coup De Grace," based on the French novel by Georges Cassell, will be produced entirely in France. Litvak, who is currently directing "A Time to Kill" for Hakim-Litvak Productions, announced that he would take a troupe of top-flight American stars to Paris early next summer to perform in the adventure story of the French Foreign Legion.

Litvak will use noted French actors in the cast, in addition to his American stars. Approximately 75 per cent of the production will be in English, while the balance of the dialogue will be spoken in French to lend authenticity to the story. "Coup De Grace" will be made under the auspices of a major American film company. Distribution deal has not yet been set.

Completes Personnel Of New Company

Michael Curtiz, Warner Bros. director, has completed the personnel of his own organization which will produce at the Burbank Studios for Warner release.

In addition to Curtiz as president, Jacques Leslie has joined the unit as vice-president and general manager. Leslie formerly was with the Feldman agency. Bess Meredyth is vice-president and story editor, and Margaret Ettinger is secretary. Board of directors includes Curtiz, Leslie, Miss Ettinger, Roy Obringer and Ed L. Depatie.

Sperling Announces New U. S. Pictures Setup

The new organization of United States Pictures was announced last Thursday in Hollywood by Milton Sperling, who is president and production head. Other executives are Donald Hyde, vice-president and general manager; Oliver Schwab, secretary, and Charles Yoss, treasurer.

United States Pictures' first film, "Cloak and Dagger" is now being distributed by Warner Bros. The second, "Pursued," is nearing completion.

Named Art Director

Art direction for Paramount's forthcoming aviation epic, "Blaze of Noon" has been assigned to Roland Anderson. The action of the picture centers around the first commercial airmail. Sterling Hayden, Sonny Tufts, William Holden, William Bendix and Johnny Sands, will appear in the film.

Plays Russian Baroness

Elsa Lanchester has been signed for one of the major roles in Republic's forthcoming Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer, Rudolf Friml's original operetta "Will Tomorrow Ever Come?" Miss Lanchester will portray a Russian baroness, screen wife of Hugo Haas. Allan Dwan is the director and associate producer.

As Vehicle for Garfield

Purchase of the Forrest Rosaire novel, "East of Midnight," which he will produce as a John Garfield starring picture for Universal-International release has been announced by Mark Hellinger. Hellinger has also signed the author to do the screenplay.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Amparo Iturbi joined her brother Jose Iturbi under the baton of Georgie Stoll, to pre-record de Falla's Ritual Fire Dance, with a 50-voice mixed chorus for MGM's "The Birds and the Bees," which Joe Pasternak is readying for production with Jeanette MacDonald, Jose Iturbi and Jane Powell in top roles.

Gilbert Roland has been handed a new contract with Monogram and will make three "Cisco Kid" films during the entire year. In addition, the studio has an option on a fourth picture not in the "Cisco" series.

Stanley Clements was assigned to Paramount's all-star "Variety Girl" for his first role since his discharge from the Army. He will be featured in a production number with Mary Hatcher. George Marshall directs and Daniel Dare produces.

Rhonda Fleming, who just completed a starring role opposite Rory Calhoun on loan-out to Pine-Thomas for "Adventure Island," has had her option renewed by Vanguard Films. The young actress made her screen debut as the psychopath in "Spellbound."

John Auer signed a producer-director contract with Republic, and his first assignment will be "Mike Was a Lady."

Daniele Amfitheatrof, distinguished Russian-Italian conductor and composer, was signed by Universal-International to a term deal. His first assignment will be to compose an original score and conduct the entire musical arrangement for Walter Wanger's "Smash-up," which co-stars Susan Hayward and Lee Bowman.

Monogram will send a camera crew to Vienna for backgrounds for "Tragic Symphony," which is based on the life of Tchaikovsky. Picture is scheduled to go before cameras in November.

Warner Anderson has been assigned a major role in "The Personal Touch," currently before the cameras at MGM. His part in this latest of the Dr. Gillespie stories is that of a hypochondriac who is cured of an imaginary ailment.

Shelley Winters has been signed by Jules Levey for the important role of Arturo de Cordova's secretary in "New Orleans," current Levey production for UA release.

Elisha Cooke, Jr. has been added to the cast of "A Time to Kill," the Hakim-Litvak production for RKO release. His role is a definite departure from type, since he has long played either "heavy" or comedy portrayals. In "A Time to Kill" he will interpret the dramatic part of a blind veteran who finds himself involved in a killing. Henry Fonda, Barbara Bel Geddes, Vincent Prince and Ann Dvorak are starred.

Two 10-year olds, John McGovern, "Little Beaver" of "Red Ryder" radio fame, and Ann Burr, have been signed by Warners to play the children of Rosemary DeCamp and Broderick Crawford in "Night Unto Night," Ronald Reagan-Viveca Lindfors starrer which Don Siegel is directing.

Clarence Kolb, member of the vaudeville team of Kolb and Dill, was signed by Eagle Lion for a supporting role in "There Goes the Groom," starring Franchot Tone and Ann Richards. Leigh Jason will direct for producer Lee Marcus.

Tom D'Andrea was set in the important role of Humphrey Bogart's taxi-driver accomplice in "Dark Passage," Bogart's forthcoming co-starrer with Lauren Bacall for Warner Bros.

Michael Kirby, former national ice-skating champion, gets an important role in MGM's "Green Dolphin Street," which stars Lana Turner, Van Heflin, Donna Reed and Richard Hart.

Virginia Huston has been awarded the feminine romantic lead in RKO's "Build My Gallows High," in which Robert Mitchum and Jane Greer will co-star. Jacques Tourneur will direct the film, to be produced by Warren Duff.

Alan Young, radio comedian, has been added to the cast of 20th-Fox's production, "Chicken Every Sunday." He will play a comedy romantic role opposite Jeanne Crain, who plays the daughter of co-stars Maureen O'Hara and Henry Fonda. George Seaton will direct for producer William Perlberg.

Enterprise announces the signing of Mary Field for the important head nurse role in the David Lewis production, "The Other Love." Barbara Stanwyck and David Niven are co-starred in the film which Andre de Toth directs.

Herbert Anderson, long-faced comedian, has been cast as Martha Vickers' excitable neighbor in Warners' "Love and Learn," with Jack Carson, Bob Hutton and Janis Paige.

Allan Roberts and Doris Fisher, Columbia song-writing team, have completed a special number, Please Don't Kiss Me, which Rita Hayworth will sing in "The Lady From Shanghai," in which she co-stars with Orson Welles. Film is not a musical, and this will be its only tune.

'Upwards to Stars' Next for Montgomery

Pleased with the results of "Lady in the Lake," Robert Montgomery's first actor-director effort, MGM has purchased Charles Martin's original screenplay, "Upwards to the Stars," and has assigned it to Montgomery to handle in the same dual capacity. As in "Lady in the Lake," Montgomery will be co-starred with Audrey Totter.

George Haight will produce the Martin screenplay, which Martin (also a director) plans to publish as a novel.

'Variety Girl' Builds

Betty Hutton, has been assigned to the cast of Paramount's 30-star "Variety Girl" in a star-specialty routine. Gail Russell also has joined the cast, as have Deforest Kelley, Donald Kirk, reecntly discharged from the armed forces, and Roland Dupree, dancer.

Craig, Alma Kruger and Keye Luke. Willis Goldbeck is directing and Carey Wilson producing. Edward Arnold returned from his appearance in Chicago before the AFL convention for the Screen Actors Guild to go into this latest "Dr. Gillespie." Also placed in the release was Art Baker, radio commentator.

Two more weeks remain for "The Romance of Rosy Ridge" location company at Santa Cruz before returning to Culver City. The film has been shooting there for nine weeks.

RKO Starts 'Build Gallows'

RKO started "Build My Gallows High" under a cloud. King Brothers, who introduced Robert Mitchum to the screen, feel they have a claim on the actor, who is starred in the RKO picture. They want him for one of their productions. Meanwhile, Mitchum continues to work on the RKO film, with Jane Greer and Virginia Huston, Warren Duff is producing and Jacques Tourneur is directing.

"They Won't Believe Me" has been completed. Still shooting are "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer"; the Hakim-Litvak production. "A Time to Kill"; the dog picture, "Banjo"; Sol Lesser's "Tarzan and the Huntress"; and a western, "Thunder Mountain," starring Tim Holt.

4 UA Films in Work

Producer Jules Levey added Shelley Winters to his "New Orleans," as secretary to Arturo deCordova. Miss Winters is doubling in brass, enacting the screen role as well as playing in the stage version of "The Merry Widow." Shooting schedule on the jazz film had to be revised one day to allow Dorothy Patrick, playing the femme lead, to be with her mother at the hospital because of an operation.

Other United Artists pictures going are Preston Sturges' "Vendetta," Howard Hawks' "Red River," and Hal Roach's "Who Killed Doc Robin?" (in Cinecolor).

Enterprise Busy with 'Arch'

The other day director Lewis Milestone called in 370 extras for further sequences in a restaurant episode in "Arch of Triumph," making the total extra call for that one scene 7,287! Additional scenes remain to be shot between Charles Boyer and Charles Laughton at the restaurant, occasioned by Laughton's replacement of Michael Chekhov and the necessity for re-shooting several sequences.

Still going is "The Other Love," being directed by Andre de Toth, who also did "Ramrod." The latter is now being recorded in two separate sessions for fire and conflict scenes.

Republic's Lone Effort

"Web of Danger" has been the lone effort going at Republic. J. Farrell McDonald is the latest addition to the film, featuring Damian O'Flynn and Adele Mara.

Wilde Suspension Settled

Although Cornel Wilde's contract was suspended by 20th-Century Fox for refusing to play the role of Bruce Carlton in "Forever Amber," matters were later adjusted, with Wilde taking over the role at an increase in salary.

Twentieth-Fox finished "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" and "The Homestretch." Producer Gene Markey has had his option lifted, as has Hugh Cummings, the studio's dialogue director who worked on George Jessel's "I Wonder."

Only 20th effort in production is "Boomerang," now on location in Stamford, Conn., and White Plains, N. Y., which leaves the home lot emptier than a theatre on Christmas Eve.

Republic Sets 8 for Cameras Before 1947

Eight pictures have been scheduled to go before the cameras at Republic studios before the end of the year, thus winding up approximately two-thirds of the studio's 1946-47 program.

"Gallant Man," Frank Borzage's second production, starring Don Ameche and Catherine McLeod, and "Along the Oregon Trail," a musical-Western in Trucolor starring Monte Hale and Adrian Booth, will go before the cameras this month.

Four pictures have been slated to start in November, including the Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer, "Will Tomorrow Ever Come?" with Allan Dwan as associate producer and director; "Wyoming," co-starring William Elliott, Vera Ralston and John Carroll, with Joe Kane as associate producer and director; "Marshal of Cripple Creek," a Red Ryder western starring Allan Lane; and "Bells of San Angelo," a Roy Rogers starrer with Edward J. White as associate producer.

In December, two pictures will get the go-sign, to wind up Republic's production activities for the year. They are: "Slippy McGee," to be filmed in Trucolor with Lou Brock as associate producer, and "Virginia City Raiders," last in the Red Ryder series for the year.

'Ruth' Score to Dolan

Robert Emmett Dolan has been named musical director of Paramount's "Dear Ruth," Joan Caulfield-William Holden starring comedy now being edited by Archie Marshek. Dolan will work on the music score during the month vacation which Producer Paul Jones will take beginning November 1, and scoring will begin after Jones' return. Director William Russell has completed dubbing the film.

Orth Reverts to Type

Frank Orth, who recently deserted his usual role of bartender to portray very sober judges in "The Bride Wore Boots" and "Ladies Man," returns to his first love in Columbia's "The Guilt of Janet Ames." He will play a bartender.

Scotland Yard Inspector

Sir Cedric Hardwicke will play a Scotland Yard inspector in Hunt Stromberg's forthcoming United Artists release, "Personal Column," which stars George Sanders and Lucille Ball. Douglas Sirk will direct.

'Dan Patch' Agreement Between Frank, Disney

Conclusion of a deal under which W. R. Frank, who is preparing to produce "Dan Patch," the saga of the great harness racer, has granted Walt Disney permission to highlight the pacer and his achievements in the latter's forthcoming Technicolor feature, "How Dear to My Heart," was disclosed last week.

References to Dan Patch as a central figure and story-motivating factor in the Disney production are given right-of-way by the agreement. Frank, who owns rights to the Dan Patch story and will film it with John Taintor Foote, noted magazine writer and horse authority producing, believes the Disney films will augment interest in Frank's own production venture and cultivating added curiosity about the great stallion who never was beaten in a race.

Schilling Goes Into Hayworth-Welles Film

Gus Schilling, veteran of Minsky burlesque, Shakespearean road companies and the Mercury Theatre, has been assigned one of the top roles in support of Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles in Columbia's "The Lady From Shanghai."

Schilling, who will do comedy relief in the film, previously appeared with Miss Hayworth in "You Were Never Lovelier." In the new film, he plays the role of a jolly, unemployed merchant sailor.

Wanger Sets Plans For Three Pictures

Plans for three pictures to be made under his present Universal-International commitment have been announced by Walter Wanger.

The first is "Washington Flyer," an original story by George Worthing Yates, which will star Susan Hayward, under contract to Wanger. This will be followed by a story of the west which will be directed by George Marshall early in 1947. Although the final picture has not been selected, it will be in Technicolor in accordance with a commitment now held by Wanger.

John Carroll Signed To Republic Contract

John Carroll has been signed by Republic to a long-term contract and assigned an important lead in "Wyoming," in which he will co-star with William Elliott and Vera Ralston. Others in the cast include George "Gabby" Hayes, Albert Dekker and Maria Ouspenskaya.

Carroll recently received his release from MGM in order to sign the new contract with Republic.

Trick Roper Signed

Johnny Judd, one of the foremost trick ropers in the country, has been signed for a supporting role in Zane Grey's "Twin Sombreros," Columbia's Randolph Scott-Barbara Britton-Dorothy Hart starrer. Judd, once identified with the famous 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, made many stage appearances with Will Rogers. "Twin Sombreros," filmed in color, is being directed by George Waggner and produced by Harry Joe Brown.

Coleman, Patti Brady. Credits: Directed by James V. Kern. Screenplay by I. A. L. Diamond and James V. Kern. Original story by Ben and Norma Barzman. Adaptation by Lewis R. Foster. Photography, Arthur Edeson. Wardrobe by Leah Rhodes. Produced by William Jacobs.

Plot: The youngster of a divorced couple finds herself divided between her two parents for six months at a time. She is close to her father, a well-known artist, and happy with her mother so she plans to bring them together. A Marine to whom the child has been writing, appears in time to help her out and all ends happily.

Comment: While the plot is obvious and there are quite a number of familiar routines, this latest Errol Flynn pitcure is nevertheless good entertainment for most audiences. It is a farce-comedy—a departure for Flynn from his customary role—and he gives a good enough account of himself to not only entertain his followers but appeal to others as well. Corny though the gags are, there are numerous laughs throughout the picture, and the addition of Forrest Tucker as a big, hulking Marine adds much to the visual appeal the film will have for the swoonagers. Besides the two male leads, there is the fine performance and the magnificent wardrobe Eleanor Parker displays and the introduction of a juvenile, Patti Brady, for those who enjoy child performers. Turning in splendid portrayals in supporting roles are such outstanding players as S. Z. Sakall and Lucile Watson, with Donald Woods, Peggy Knudsen, Tom D'Andrea and Hattie McDaniel exceptionally good in lesser roles. As escapist fare, this should do well wherever played, especially after the feminine contingent get a peek at Tucker, who is so good as the Marine he practically steals every scene in which he appears. James V. Kern, the director, shows an experienced hand with the understanding way in which he plays up the comedy and William Jacobs' production vaules are tops; heading the list is the wardrobe by Leah Rhodes.

Affairs of Geraldine

Republic Comedy-Drama with Music 68 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fairly entertaining comedy-drama that will please average unsophisticated audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Jane Withers' name and fair word-of-mouth should help at the box-office.

Cast: Jane Withers, James Lydon, Raymond Walburn, Donald Meek, Charles Quigley, Grant Withers, William Haade, Michael Branden, Johnny Sands, David Holt, Tanis Chandler. Credits: Producer, Armand Schaefer. Director, George Blair. Screenplay, John Butler, based on story by Lee Loeb and Arthur Strawn. Photography, Don Alton.

Plot: A wealthy small-town girl in a big city gets mixed up with a man whose hobby is to marry wealthy women whom he meets through a matrimonial bureau. She agrees to marry him, but his previous wives—whom he hadn't bothered to divorce—all turn up at the wedding. Also present is the bride's home-town sweetheart, who eases her out of the embarrassing role of a bigamist's bride by marrying her, himself, and making her like it.

Comment: Fans of former child star Jane Withers will have a heyday when this film is shown because Miss Withers is all over the place making with the personality, singing and emoting. The picture has nice production values, thanks to Armand Schaefer, and director George Blair has done an intelligent job with John Butler's often impractical but adequate screenplay. The studio wisely selected a cast of established favorites, who while not of a top marquee variety, nevertheless will help draw 'em in as old film friends of the fans. Included are Jimmy Lydon, Donald Meek, Raymond Walburn and Grant Withers, all of whom turn in their usual professional performances. Several incidental musical numbers are well handled and technical departments are up to par.

SHORT SUBJECT REVIEWS

Skating Lady (Smooth)

RKO (74,301) Sportscope 9 mins.

Gretchen Merill, Ladies Amateur Figure Skating Champion of the United States, is the heroine of this Sportscope, and we get to know Gretchen very well after nine minutes. The film shows her at home, doing her limbering exercizes, bicycling, playing tennis, cutting the highly skillful precision figures of championship competition, and finally a session of free skating. The last episode is handled with the aid of a spotlight and contains some of the best skating shots yet made. Miss Merill is personable and reminds of a younger Sonja Henie. A very pretty number for any aduience.

I'll Build It Myself (Hilarious)

RKO (565) Edgar Kennedy 15 mins.

Without wasting any time, be it said that this is the best Kennedy number in a long, long time. Edgar's precious family has a contractor in to estimate on an added room, but Edgar decides he'll build it himself. From then on the film is a series of mishaps, flying bricks, plaster and some beautiful falls, with the climax coming when Edgar mistakenly throws the building inspector into the plaster bin. This is one Kennedy that will go with any audience.

Flicker Flashbacks No. 1 (Excellent)

RKO (74,201) 9 mins.

Ah, sweet memories! The first of the new season's Flashbacks gives us a hot piece called "Wages of Sin" or "Hounded by Fate" in which the landlord's daughter marries the boarder. The latter beats it soon after, with the irate brother on his trail. Catching up, he finds the bridegroom sick in bed. "All is forgiven, come home," says the over-acting brother. But rather than that the bridegroom dies. Then "The Wanderer," a Biograph release of 1909, shows Lionel Barrymore as a Spanish Don who cares more for his jewels than for his wife, Claire McDowell. The latter is tempted by the smooth William Miller, but just then Henry Walthall comes along playing a flute, accompanied by Mae Marsh. The tune saves the day and Don Lionel and Claire are reunited. You can't miss with this series.

The Answer Man No. 1 (Interesting)

Universal 10 mins.

This is based on the radio program of the same name and answers questions of universal interest. While answers are given by the mysterious "Answer Man" whose back is to the camera at all times, scenes shift to the subjects about which the questions have been propounded. A trailer following the short offers audience members $50 for each question accepted for use in the series. Good exploitation angles.

Toccata and Fugue (Intriguing)

UA Musicolor 10 mins.

A note preceding the actual shots in this Cinecolor film states, "The strange and wonderful formations of Bryce Canyon, Utah shown in this picture express visually the exalted spirit of Bach's great music," and whatever Johann Sebastian Bach had in his mind when he wrote the music might have been just about what a motion picture audience sees on the screen as the fantastic shapes and coloring of the canyon appear, accompanied by the Janssen Symphony Orchestra of Los Angeles. Like the art collector who said he didn't know much about art but knew what he liked, motion picture audiences who know little about music will know what they like when they see this short. It's good entertainment aurally and musically. Produced by Werner Janssen.

Son of the Guardsmen (Exploitable)

Col. Serial 15 Chapters 20-27 mins.

The most important aspect of Columbia's new serial is the fact that it has many angles for natural exploitation, such as the tieup made with the Ben Pearson outfit, America's largest manufacturer of archery equipment. The value of this tieup was demonstrated when Columbia was exploiting its "Bandit of Sherwood Forest" and obtained innumerable window displays throughout the country. The new serial tells a tale of adventure during medieval times when the lords and knights of England were exploiting their tenants and serfs. An organization of so-called outlaws sprang up in Sherwood Forest to protect themselves and all of the poor. First chapter, "Outlaws of Sherwood Forest" indicates that serial fans will have plenty to get excited about as the inevitable conflicts between the evil lords and the band of free men of the forest start in earnest. While the action of the serial is directed primarily toward the amusement of the younger generation, some of the elders in audiences may be entertained. The press book for the serial contains many excellent exploitation ideas and should be carefully perused when the subject is booked.

The Schooner the Better (Funny)

Columbia (7704) Phantasy 7 mins.

A black and white cartoon of the days when men were shanghaied aboard vessels to complete the crews. The villain in this one finds the tables turned with the intended victim accepting payment for his job of delivering the villain.

Jamaica (Excellent)

20th-Fox (7252) Movietone Adventures 8 mins.

From the modern capital of Kingston in tropical Jamaica the Technicolor camera takes audiences through the Hope Botanical Gardens, St. Catherine's Cathedral, the Rodney Memorial and other points of interest and then tours the agricultural regions, including the areas where bananas and sugar cane are grown. The short closes with views of the Nelson plaque, honoring Britain's hero admiral. Lowell Thomas narrates.

Sudden Fried Chicken (Fast)

Para. (P5-6) Noveltoons 7 mins.

Herman the Mouse saves henpecked Hector from his wife and induces him to fight One Round Hogan, the horrific rooster, because he knows Hector has had plenty of practice taking punishment. With Herman's help again, Hector wins and the two celebrate. But Mrs. Hector arrives and Hector joins Hogan in the hospital. Hogan goes after him, but he gets away with the aid of Herman's trusty mallet. This Technicolor job is fast and furious calculated to entertain any audience.

Race Horses Are Born (Good)

Para. (R6-1) Sportlights 9 mins.

The lesson of this film is that race horses are born, not made, and the footage takes you to the famous Rancocas Farms in New Jersey and shows how the horses are bred and then trained for the track. The shots of the colts and their mothers gamboling in the fields are especially pretty, and when the yearling wins his first race you are likely to feel quite elated. Good narration by Ted Husing and Don Wilson help this Grantland Rice number.

Jasper in a Jam (Novel)

Para. (U5-7) Puppetoons 7 mins.

A new element enters into this Puppetoon, for Jasper's doings are linked up with the music of Charlie Barnet and his orchestra, plus the vocalizing of Peggy Lee. Jasper gets locked in a pawnshop and all the instruments become animated at midnight. As Barnet plays, the instruments act up to Jasper, and their gyrations form the chief part of the entertainment. The film is novel in this respect, but absence of a story line does not help. Adults may be slightly bored, but the kids will certainly go for it.

Brooklyn, I Love You (Superb)

Para (K6-1) Pacemakers 10 mins.

Justin Herman had an idea that the whole country would like to see a short about Brooklyn and its baseball club. So he wrote, produced and directed the aptly titled "Brooklyn, I Love You," which attempts to prove (and pretty nearly does) that everyone in that borough is an avid baseball fan. The short opens in Boston, where an erudite gent tells about Boston's culture, switches to the Deep South where a caricatured southern colonel tells about that section's prides and then arrives in downtown Brooklyn where the first thing a fan reveals is an incident that took place that day at Ebbett's Field, home of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Thousands of Brooklyn fans are shown wildly cheering their team, win or lose, with some of the more eccentric characters that follow the team everyday doing their laugh-provoking stuff. A highlight shows Leo "Lippy" Durocher, Brooklyn team manager, in an argument with no less than four umpires on the field of battle. This is an extremely laughable short subject that should delight audiences everywhere, even if they know nothing about baseball, or care whether or not Brooklyn loses.

Timepieces Insured

Producer Jerry Fairbanks has taken out a $400,000 insurance policy covering a collection of 100 antique timepieces now in use as props in a Popular Science short for Paramount. The watches are the property of United States Time, Inc., and include items dating back to 1525. One watch is fashioned entirely of ivory and a skull watch is said to have belonged to Mary, Queen of Scots.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

CISCO AND THE ANGEL (Mono.) Western. Principals: Gilbert Roland, Frank Yaconelli, Teala Loring. Director, William Nigh. Plot: Cisco, the famous bandit who robs the rich to give to the poor, tries to help a wealthy young girl whose fiance is after her money. He finds a hidden will and reveals the plot by her uncle and her fiance to defraud her.

DESERT TOWN (Para.) Technicolor. Principals: John Hodiak, Lizabeth Scott, Burt Lancaster. Director, Lewis Allen. Plot: The rebellious daughter of the boss of a desert town refuses to heed her mother's orders and the warning of the young deputy sheriff who loves her, and runs away with a big-time gambler. She barely escapes the fate of his first wife, killed in a mysterious automobile accident, when she flees from him after he shoots his pal, and she witnesses his own tragic end as his car crashes through a bridge.

THE GUILT OF JANET AMES (Col.) Principals: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Sid Caesar. Director, Charles Vidor. Plot: A woman whose husband was killed by a grenade, saving five of his companions, is involved in an accident and as a result she believes she cannot walk. Blaming the five men for her husband's death, she had set out to find them, and the accident is her excuse not to do so. She is shaken out of her bitterness by one of the five, who shows her that these men had something to live for, while her husband did not. In the end, they help each other to find contentment.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Cloak and Dagger	Family	.....	Adults	Mature Family
Margie	Family	8-14	Gen. Patronage	.....
Shadowed	.....	.....	Adults	Mature Family
Shadow of a Woman	Mature	.....	Objectionable in Part	.....
Song of the South	Family	8-14	Gen. Patronage	.....
The Jolson Story	Family	8-14	Gen. Patronage	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

RENDEZVOUS WITH ANNIE (Rep)—Bright as a newly-minted dollar—plenty of which, parenthetically, it should attract to the cash drawer—is the lighter approach to the problems confronting one GI. In every department, the picture is a standout; would classify as a solid hit from any studio, and definitely is one of the all-time best to come from Republic. Eddie Albert, Faye Marlowe, Gail Patrick. Allan Dwan directed.

BOXOFFICE

"Rendezvous with Annie"

Republic Comedy 89 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An excellent light comedy that should prove to be thoroughly entertaining for all types of adult audiences.

Comment: Republic evidently has gone all out to give "Rendezvous With Annie" the excellent production values it deserves, and Associate Producer-Director Allan Dwan has taken full advantage of a fat opportunity to turn out an excellent comedy. The Mary Loos, Richard Sale magazine story on which their screenplay was based, follows along lines of a true life story that took place in California during the war. That story, too, worked out satisfactorily. Eddie Albert, Faye Marlowe and Gail Patrick, really have a rollicking time in this picture, transmitting their fun to audiences. The picture is exceptionally well done in casting, acting, production and direction from a good story. Who could ask for anything more? Proper exploitation could make this return better than average grosses.

Republic 89 Mins.

LIVELY COMEDY BUBBLING WITH SUBTLETY TOLD WITH WARMTH, SKILL; FINE BOX-OFFICE POSSIBILITIES.

Permitted to mount a screenplay from their own magazine story, the authors of "Rendezvous With Annie," Mary Loos and Richard Sale, turned in a script that was directed with veteran skill by Allan Dwan and played to peak value by a cast of worthies. The writing job is a model, finished work that keeps the plot bubbling with subtlety, humor, characters and incident.

In a theme-wise sense the picture is adult fare. It pokes fun at small town reacting to what on the surface appears to be adultery and illegitimacy. That's what comes of going AWOL—on a three-day pass—from London to New Jersey.

On his first wedding anniversary, Eddie Albert, a corporal in the Air Corps, stationed in the finance office in London, is handed a pass for three days in the British capital. He wants a furlough but that is out of the question. Philip Reed and James Millican, a couple of flyers on the ATC Atlantic route, who value Albert's friendship for his wife's chocolate cake drag him off to New York. He's there the following night and with his wife a few hours later. He returns to London with no one the wiser and brings a piece of cake for Sir C. Aubrey Smith who shares an air raid shelter when Albert's office is alerted for an air raid.

A year later Albert is discharged. He returns home to find his wife in a hospital and the townspeople look down their noses when he learns, happily, that he is a father. But the town attitude's meaning hits him with a jolt when he learns that his son stands to inherit a half million dollars from an uncle, providing Albert can establish his presence in town at a logical time.

Albert has a number of leads to track down from the local banker to Sir C. Aubrey Smith who turns out to be a visiting diplomat. These leads provide diversion and excitement. There is a deadline.

Smith comes through by virtue of the cal and Albert, Jr., gets his inheritance. T telling is smart, the pace quick. G Patrick has a good part which she hand very effectively as a night club sin There's a good song in the proceed called "Dream Man," by Jack Elliott.

Rendezvous With Annie

"'Rendezvous With Annie" is smooth and glittering farce comedy with a smattering of belly laughs, a steady succession of chuckles and a lot of hearty human interest. It even has a novel gimmick to make the plot go around and, all-in-all, it looks like sure fire box office.

Attempt of Eddie Albert, as a returned G. I. to prove himself father of his wife's baby is a new basis for farce complications. Subject is one of those that could have been made thoroughly risque, but isn't. It is worked exclusively for laughter and the homey touch with Albert making a successful bid for audience sympathy and Faye Marlowe, as his wife, gets heart throbs out of her role.

Albert's dilemma develops when, stationed in London, he makes a trip home to New Jersey to see his wife on a three-day pass. Jaunt is promoted and made possible by two ATC pilots, played by Philip Reed and James Milligan. They persuade him it will be a cinch to sneak him on and off the plane, get him to the home town and back to London without a hitch.

They do just that, although there are some difficulties involving a traveling general picked up in Newfoundland, a banker from Albert's home town met in a New York night club, and a few minor brushes with the military police. Albert spends his night at home, but has to keep it a secret because he is technically A.W.O.L.

The real trouble comes when he is discharged from the Army and gets home to find his wife has just given birth to a son. The villagers, with a memory for dates, suspect the worst. So does the family lawyer in the matter of $500,000 left by a deceased uncle of Albert's for the latter's first son. Albert can't disclose the irregular plane trip without getting his flying pals into trouble. He can't prove parenthood without admitting the plane trip and the baby can't get the $500,000.

It is worked out eventually in high comedy involving Gail Patrick, as a night club singer, Sir C. Aubrey Smith, as an English diplomat and air-raid shelter companion of Albert's in London, Wally Ford as a New York reporter, and Raymond Walburn as the village banker.

They all handle their parts to top effect for comedy.

Picture is Allan Dwan's first production for Republic and he has done a top job in his dual capacity as producer and director. The picture is well mounted and photographed, of Reggie Lanning is notably good.

'RENDEZVOUS' DELIGHTFUL

Dwan Scores With Bright Yarn, Cast

"RENDEZVOUS WITH ANNIE"
(Republic)

Few pictures ever released under the Republic trademark have matched the delightful quality of "Rendezvous With Annie." There are moments in the story and its presentation that are nothing short of inspired. With this production under his belt, Allan Dwan can certainly be hailed as the most promising new light at the Valley studio. The casting values of the show are consistently faultless, many bits really gorgeous, and Dwan's direction is a work of love. This success cannot fail to put him in a position to write his own ticket anywhere.

The story idea probably stems from that news item about the GI who twice flew the Atlantic in order to spend a single night at home. In this fiction the lad is really shanghaied by a pair of playful fliers who excuse their prank on the grounds that the GI's wife, Annie, baked the best chocolate cake any Army man ever ate. And so she does. There's a big one on the table when Jeff Dolan comes home all the way from England for just one night.

He covers this session of being AWOL so cleverly that his trip is difficult to prove when, after discharge from service, proof is demanded. It happens that Annie has had a baby, a bouncing boy who is heir to half a million dollars. Yet no one will believe he is the son of a GI who has been overseas for more than two and a half years. The chase to gather proof of the legality of the heir is brilliantly shot with fun. But so is the whole picture, thanks to Dwan.

Eddie Albert has the most amusi fall guy of his career to play, and takes "Jeff Dolan" to town. Fa Marlowe is quite attractive as the wif Annie. There is a grand part of nightclub entertainer to engage th distinguished services of Gail Patrick and she is at her best. Philip Reed anc James Millican are excellent as the prankish flyers. Sir C. Aubrey Smith lends warmth and charm to the English gentleman who becomes Dolan's last chance.

Then, there are those gorgeous bits enacted by such surefire dependables as Raymond Walburn, William Frawley, Wally Ford, Lucien Littlefield, Will Wright and Mary Field. Attention of this sort to minor casting always pays off. The Richard Sale who brings roars as Clarence is credited with Mary Loos as co-author of the

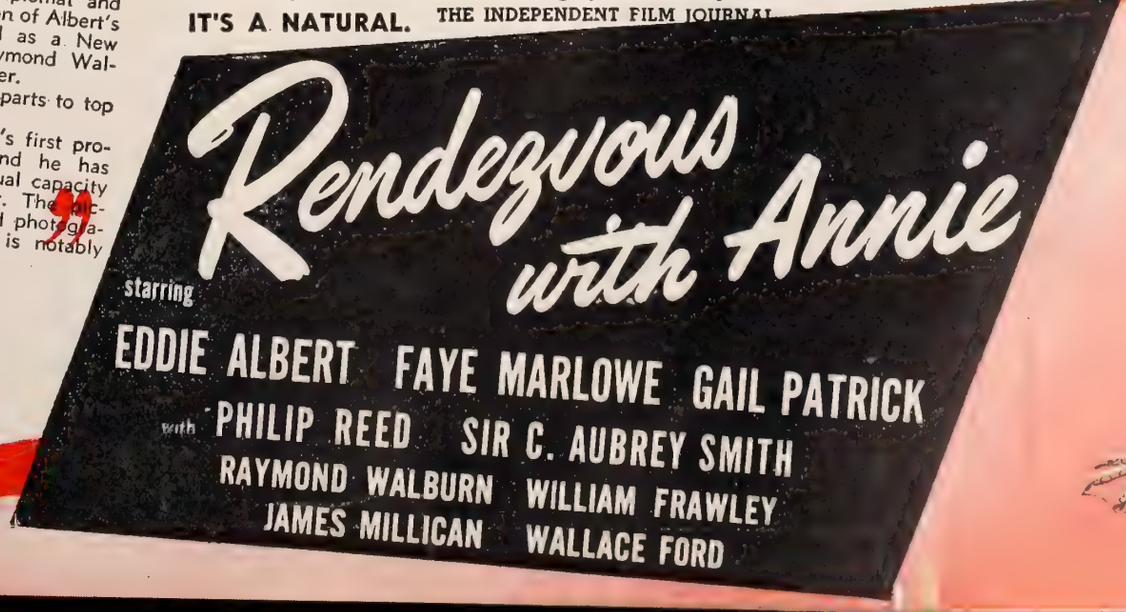
A completely delightful and sweet yarn by Mary Loos and Richard Sale has been transposed to film by Allen Dwan who produced and directed with a rare sense of humor and wealth of human warmth. "Rendezvous With Annie" is due to gross 'way out of proportion to the budget. It's got those sleeper qualities.

Plot stems from an actual news item—you may have read it—about a flyer during the war who sneaked back home for a secret rendezvous with his wife. When she has a little stranger about nine months later, no one believes anything but the worst, inasmuch as hubby obviously hasn't been home for a coupla years.



That this premise could easily have hit the sexy note bears evidence of both the shrewdly handled script and Dwan's graceful helming—for the story is clean as a whistle and wholesome as fresh bread.

Eddie Albert turns in an utterly loveable portrayal of the nice young G.I. who goes A.W.O.L. to keep an anniversary date with his wife. Albert's performance sparks the whole running time. Charming too is Faye Marlowe, the girl in his life. Gail Patrick, Sir Aubrey Smith and others are highly satisfactory.

Reminiscing

A quarter of a century is a long time, especially in the picture business—a fact that is emphasized by the reminder that Hal Young has been on the job for more than twenty-five years of uninterrupted action in the trailer and accessory field with National Screen Service.

We can go farther back than that. Let's see. It was around 1916 when we first crossed trails with Hal. At that time we were both involved in promoting newspaper contests in eastern cities out of which came the casts for a locally-made movie for exhibition in the town. It was called, "Who Will Be Flo" and it is interesting to note in passing that a hell of a lot of gals and boys wanted to play the leads in those amateur pictures.

In the years prior to 1923 when he first joined NSS, Hal and this writer saw a lot of each other—and beware the day when we start revealing each other's secrets. (Okay, Sally, I'll tell you all about it some day.)

In his day, Hal probably knew, personally, more exhibitors and circuit executives than anyone else we know and to his credit we can add that most of them still remember and ask for him.

Here's wishing you another 25 with NSS, Hal. You're a nice guy and they're a nice outfit.

While in a reminiscing mood we must take note of the recent retirement of Tony Gaudio, ace cameraman. Tony was handling the old box camera at the IMP Studio in New York when this writer broke into the picture business in 1909 as studio boy, (another name for combination office boy, errand boy, assistant mechanic, floor mopper and actor).

It really doesn't seem so long ago that we sat on a high stool and watched Harry Salter direct his wife, Florence Lawrence, in the one-reel epics that were being ground out for the movie fans of that day and age. Nor does it seem so long ago that the IMP studio was all agog over the impending arrival of Mary Pickford, recently "snatched" by Carl Laemmle from the old Biograph Company.

And then there were Tommy Ince and his wife; J. Farrel MacDonald, King Baggott, Owen Moore and a host of others whose names are deeply engraved in the minds of those who were a part of those bygone years.

Gosh, all this makes us feel kind of old. . . .

Still another pioneer came into the news this week with the passing of Jules Brulatour. His affiliation with the industry dates back to about the same time as the period referred to above. As a matter of fact, we made many a pilgrimage to his office and store down in the East 20's whenever the studio needed some additional negative stock. We might mention in passing that it could be had but not without payment of a certified check.

Jules had been a conspicuous personality around the industry here in New York for so many years that it won't feel the same without him.

Current Observations

For the first time in many weeks a thin streak of light breaks through the Hollywood strike clouds and there are real indications that the mess finally may be ironed out around the arbitration table. Too bad they had to wait so long to arrive at this conclusion.

Steve Broidy's announcement that Monogram will release more pictures this season than any other company will find a hearty welcome from many thousands of exhibitors who were beginning to wonder where they would be able to find enough product to keep their theaters running.

The move is, unquestionably, a smart one that will probably give Monogram its biggest year in total number of pictures played.

Fred Wehrenberg, prexy of the MPTOA, sounded a warning this week to exhibitors to be careful not to cheat on percentage pictures.

Hi-Ho; where are those good old days when exhibitors could run percentage pictures without checkers and end up paying only the guarantee?

It's getting so tough that you can't make a dishonest dollar any more in this business. . . . If it keeps up we'll all end up in the same place in the hereafter . . . and wouldn't that be awful?

Welcome back to Cliff Lewis. Here's a guy who has been around the picture business for so many years that whenever he moved into other fields he was missed.

He has severed his connections with an ad agency to take over the advertising manager post for Argosy Pictures Corp., and we'll be mighty happy to see him again on our occasional trips to Hollywood.

Speaking of trips to Hollywood, your reporter makes his annual fall invasion of the movie capital starting the eighth of November and looks forward to meeting and greeting his many friends in the studio city.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

DECREE—A decree by Christmas was expected in industry circles this week as the three judges of the federal statutory court in New York—Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Augustus Hand and District Court Judges Henry L. Goddard and John Bright—presumably will get down to studying the mass of words which all interested parties have piled before the court, and then set about to writing the decree, which, as far as the statutory court is concerned, will be final.

United Artists and Universal were scheduled to file their decree proposals to the court Monday and United Artists might file an argument in defense of road shows.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is also scheduled to file with the court Monday the results of its poll of directors and regional heads to the "some run" plus arbitration proposals made by the Big Five as a substitute for competitive bidding. The American Theatres Association has told the court that while it is split on this matter, many of its members would accept this in preference to competitive bidding if there were no other alternative while the Conference of Independent Exhibitors has not formally stated its views, though they are reliably reported to be against the proposition. The Government has already opposed it. (MORE, P. 9).

IN COURT—RKO, Universal and Loew's (MGM) Wednesday filed suit in the federal district court at Buffalo, New York, charging the Martina Theatres and Martina Circuit with fraudulent returns on admission receipts. The circuit operates 10 houses in New York.

In New York a state court judge reserved decision in the suit of Walter Futter against Paramount in which Futter sought to claim the profits of the short "Unusual Occupations" on the ground that he had suggested the idea. Futter said he had brought the idea to Paramount but the deal had fallen through and then Paramount produced the short. Paramount Attorney Louis Nizer procured the admission from Futter that a short on unusual occupations was not an idea upon which a monopoly could be claimed.

EXHIBITOR ACTIVITIES—Exhibitor meetings showed increased activity this week with the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska voting to rejoin national Allied, from whom they bolted 15 years ago, after listening to the eloquence of Jack Kirsch. The exhibitors also criticized checkers, wanted to muzzle Commentator Jimmie Fidler and set May 5-6 for their next convention. (MORE, P. 9).

Texas Allied voted to increasing expenses from $10,000 to $20,000 a year to serve exhibitors, (MORE, P. 9), while in Philadelphia the Motion Picture Associates held their annual election and in Oklahoma City, the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., set Dec. 2-3 for their convention.

LABOR—In Hollywood hopes for peace were seen as all involved parties accepted arbitration and as a further probing into jurisdictional awards upheld the IATSE in its contention that it had the right to erect sets on studio stages. Flies in the ointment: trouble with the processing technicians and provision for the IATSE employes who replaced the CSU when it walked out. (P. 8).

Early this week Eric Johnston had declared that if labor didn't set up arbitration machinery the federal government would. (P. 10).

CENSORS—In Milwaukee where the mayor and the common council want to establish city censorship a tempest of mild proportions blew up as Exhibitor Andrew Spheeris of the Towne Theatre charged that Lester Bradshaw, secretary of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission had met him in a tavern to discuss deletions of a picture to make it acceptable to the Commission and then had discussed insurance.

The Commission is purely an advisory body which cannot enforce its suggestions and Mr. Bradshaw is an insurance agent while Mr. Spheeris is an exhibitor whose theatre must use insurance, so it possibly was all in the good tradition of American business. But Mr. Spheeris raised the roof to the mayor and Mr. Bradshaw resigned.

The name of the picture discussed? "The Outlaw."

Incidentally "The Outlaw" was to fight for its right to be shown in New York state this week as New York City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding, who has blocked its presentation through threats of license revocation against exhibitors, moved to get the State Board of Regents to revoke its censor approval of the film. (P. 11).

And the American rights owners of "Amok," French film dealing with a physician and a lady who may have been in trouble if you have that kind of a mind, are attacking in court the constitutionality of the powers under which the censors act in New York. The censors ordered deletions.

Coast Picks Arbitrator, Labor Peace Seems Near

By JAY GOLDBERG

Hollywood's turbulent labor front seemed closer to peace this week as all parties accepted the principle of arbitration in jurisdictional disputes and the Conference of Studio Unions accepted an interpretation of jurisdiction upon which the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes had based its right to erect sets in studios.

Both the CSU and the IATSE, as well as the neutral unions unanimously accepted the suggestion that Joseph Reenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor and former vice-president of the War Production Board be invited to become impartial paid arbitrator. His salary, which would range from between $20,000 and $30,000 a year would be paid half by the unions and half by the producers.

By-Product Threatens

The one rut in what appeared to be an otherwise smooth road to labor peace lay in a by-product of the recent strike—the refusal of laboratory processing technicians Local 683, IATSE, to cross CSU picket lines, despite the orders of the IATSE for them to remain on their studio jobs.

This action, apparently caused in part by the fact that the technicians' contract with the studios had not yet been signed, has precipitated a series of situations which may require both sides to indulge in some face-saving maneuvers.

First, the IATSE moved to take over the rebelling union but when its representative, Ray Brewer, tried to enter the building, armed guards barred him from the premises. Then Brewer ordered all technicians to be back on their studio jobs by 6 p.m. on Oct. 24, threatening to advise employers to discharge those who did not return.

He also reportedly told the members of the union that they must no longer pay dues to that union.

The CSU leaders, faced with the fact that the laboratory technicians stood by them, have refused to negotiate further until the technicians contract is signed. At the same time, officers of the rebellious technicians, who probably believe that their future in the IATSE might be very dim, have been rumored ready to take the union out of the IATSE and into the CSU. If this

Would Rejoin Allied, 'Muzzle' Jimmie Fidler

The Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, meeting at Des Moines this week for their mid-season convention, ignored an invitation to join the American Theatres Association and instructed officers to begin negotiations to reaffiliate the organization with National Allied. The organization broke away from Allied 15 years ago.

The convention also passed a resolution chiding Commentator Jimmie Fidler, stating: "We would like to see the radio broadcaster Jimmie Fidler muzzled."

The meeting also voted to work for establishment of a midwestern exhibitor organization modeled along the lines of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners.

Other resolutions covered protests against "third degree" methods allegedly employed by checkers; opposed "exorbitant film rentals" for playbacks and reprints and urged exhibitors to use "honest advertising" to publicize such bookings; attacked playdate and sales drives and requested distributors to reduce existing clearances to the minimum.

In a seven-point program adopted by the convention was a plea for a united front, development of better theatres and showmanship, better public relations, a pledge to show only the "finest and highest type" of entertainment, to fight monopoly, adverse legislation and discriminatory taxation.

The ATA invitation of long standing, had been referred to committee and presumably was not taken out. All sessions were executive with the press barred. The annual convention was set for Omaha, May 5-6, with a series of regional group meetings scheduled in the meantime.

Texas Allied Will Widen Activities; Raises Dues

Members of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas Tuesday voted at their 27th annual convention in Dallas to expand activities as a clearing house for exhibitor information and other services by raising the budget of the Dallas office from $10,000 to $20,000 a year, an increase which is to be met by raising dues from 25 to 33-1/3 per cent.

Many of the members present also signed agreements to book the four pictures Allied

Misunderstood

An erroneous impression that ATA's Thurman Arnold might have proposed cross-licensing in federal court, may have been created from a quotation Warners' Attorney Joseph M. Proskauer (Showmen's Trade Review, Oct. 26, p. 12) who, in attacking cross-licensing said: "This proposal that Mr. Wright and Mr. Arnold take out of the air amounts to divestiture."

Proskauer meant "Mr. Wright and Mr. Myers," a point which he conceded when Arnold reminded him in court that Abram Myers of CIEA had approved cross-licensing in his "friend of the court" brief, and that ATA was appearing as friend of the court only to attack competitive bidding.

Avoid Dynamite-Laden Clause Against Film Buying Pools

Lawyers Fail to Press Objections; Divorce Still Is Bone of Contention

By BILL SPECHT
News Editor

They planted the dynamite but they didn't light the fuse.

And observers who sat through the arguments on the decree proposals in the federal statutory court at New York last week may have wondered why the touchy subject of outlawing buying combines through the decree was not pressed even though the stage was set for what might have proved the most dramatic act of the play.

They may still be wondering, for what promised to be another intra-industry explosion did not come off—at the time anyway, as neither Columbia or Universal argued the clauses against buying outfits which they had inserted into their "findings of fact."

Buying combines in the past reportedly have been a sore spot with both of those distributing organizations.

When the court handed down its opinion in the case last June—the opinion which said what it thought should be in the decree—it left what some attorneys thought was an opening against buying combines when it said:

"Each of the defendants shall be enjoined from operating, booking or film buying through any agent who is also acting in such matters for any other exhibitor, independent or affiliated."

There was considerable legal disagreement as to whether this applied to booking or buying combines as such and the report that the Government did not interpret it that way, probably led Columbia and Universal to seek to tie it in.

Columbia, in its "findings of fact" told the court:

"We should like to have the court insert in its decree a provision enjoining all the defendants: 'From offering films for license in the future to any agent who is acting for any group of exhibitors, independent or affiliated, in which he has proprietary interest.'

"While the Decree as presently proposed by the Government may be open to the construction that booking combines throughout the country cannot impose their restraint upon these defendants under the proposed method of selling picture by picture and theatre by theatre, we think that there is too much ambiguity in the Decree at present with respect to the above situation. The evidence clearly shows that in addition to the affiliates there are unaffiliated circuits and even booking combinations throughout the country. No reason exists why they should have any special immunity. It is therefore requested that the above provision in the Decree be inserted so that it will catch them."

Universal declared:

"Certain exhibitors have employed common agents to purchase pictures for them. This practice, under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence, is unduly restrictive of interstate trade and commerce and tends to monopoly and is therefore illegal."

But when Columbia and Universal argued their cases in court last week, neither touched upon the requests for action to end these units.

No Neglect

Lawyers who have been observing the tactics employed by all parties in the suit believed that this apparent neglect by attorneys for both Columbia and Universal to follow up their original request lay in the fact that they did not wish to indulge in any name calling in court which would have compelled them to cite the specific exhibitor combines to which they objected.

This together with the practical fact that if pictures must be sold individually theatre by theatre, the buying combine will find itself up against a tough dealing proposition which will probably negate its value as a means of obtain-

Supreme Court Faces Busy Period As Film Industry Appeals Loom

The motion picture industry probably will occupy a very prominent amount of space on the docket of the United States Supreme Court shortly, with predictions that the "anti-trust decree" suit, still in statutory court at New York, would eventually be appealed, and that the Government intended to take an appeal on its defeat in the Griffith Circuit case at Oklahoma City.

Meanwhile, a case similar to Griffith and one of the pattern which also includes the Crescent Amusement Company and the "decree" case, has already been appealed to the high court. Schine Circuit is seeking a review of a lower court judgment ordering divestiture of theatres.

The Government is opposing the appeal on the ground that it was filed prematurely and is not proper until the final judgment is handed down.

Schine, on the other hand, holds that its appeal is in order because even before final judgment it has been enjoined from expanding its circuit and from other practices. This injunction—as well as final judgment—is based on the finding by the Buffalo court that Schine has violated the Sherman Act. Basic question for the Supreme Court is whether the court erred in finding Schine in violation of the law, it is argued.

Government appeal in the Griffith case is certain, with appeal from both sides in the New York case possible. In neither case will appeal be entered, however, until final judgments are handed down by the lower courts.

In addition, a number of Sherman Act suits for damages and injunctions are piling up in district courts which may eventually result in appeals.

Coast Picks Arbitrator, Labor Peace Seems Near

were done the IATSE is not expected to relinquish its jurisdiction over the processing laboratories and more trouble could develop.

Also the IATSE insist that the replacements it furnished for carpenters, painters and the like who walked out when the CSU called a strike, be retained.

The IATSE victory in jurisdiction came when representations of the Screen Actors Guild, which was urging arbitration of the jurisdictional difficulty, and members of the Conference of Studio Unions phoned two of the three American Federation of Labor arbitrators who had made the original jurisdictional allocations. The third arbitrator, W. C. Doherty was absent in Europe on a government mission.

The arbitrators, Felix Knight, who spoke from Kansas City, Mo., and W. C. Birthright, who spoke from Indianapolis, made it plain that their original decision had given the IATSE the right to erect sets on studio stages. This was the point which had precipitated the argument and upon which the IATSE stood firm.

The arbitrators further denied issuing any clarification which had been relayed to the Conference of Studio Unions through the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor. This clarification, which muddled the labor situation, had given the CSU grounds for claiming that the IATSE was wrong in its claims.

Meeting in a two-day session, the Texas showmen reelected Col. H. A. Cole, president, A. W. Lilly, secretary-treasurer and the following vice-presidents: Rubin Frels, C. D. Leon, B. R. McLendon and Mrs. Martha McSpadden.

In his opening address Col. Cole predicted cross-licensing bans as an eventual remedy in the statutory court proceedings and eventual theatre divorce.

Philadelphia Meet Closes With Election

The Motion Picture Associates of Philadelphia, meeting in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel of that city Monday elected the following officers:

Lester Wuertele, president; William Doyle, vice-president; William Cohen, treasurer; Moe Koppleman, secretary.

Elected to the Board of Directors were Charles Bielan, Joseph Engel, Eli Epstein, Lou Formato, Mort Magill, C. E. Peppiatt. The officers, with the past two presidents, John J. McFadden, Jr., and William Humphries, are also members of the directorate.

New York Site for Film

Production of St. Frances Cabrini in New York City was announced this week by Clyde Elliott who said that this dramatization of the life of the canonized saint would be filmed as much as possible in cities of the nun's activities here.

Black, Tie, Or Else

Walter Reade, who added cubits to his stature as the tony impresario of the films this week by opening a subscription theatre in the swank Park Avenue area of New York, made sure that everything would be socially correct at his Park Avenue Theatre by issuing an edict to Confidential Reports, Inc., that checkers presenting themselves at the theatre for work must be dressed in dinner jackets.

The Reade dictum was issued to CRI some time ago—before, even, his ultimatum of last week that local checkers would be persona non grata at any and all theatres of the Read circuit.

Arbitration By Choice Or By Law—Johnston

Either labor will establish its own machinery to decide jurisdiction disputes or it may find itself with federal legislation setting up such machinery, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association declared last week in New York prior to sailing for Europe.

Johnston said one of his purposes in going abroad was to study the Trade Union Congress aribtration system in England. Speaking of legislation on jurisdictional strikes, he said:

"I think the American people will move for such legislation."

Asked if the industry had any plans in hat direction, he remarked:

"I think the industry is part of the American people." Later, he added: "We have no present plans to do so."

The MPA president said he thought the all industry conference would have to await settlement of the present coast strike. He said he had offered his services as an arbitrator to the American Federation of Labor in Chicago recently but that they seemed to think the matter was one for labor to decide. However, he added, he stood ready to fly back on 24 hours notice from Europe if his services were needed.

Johnston refused to discuss the situation of "The Outlaw" in New York where it is meeting with police opposition despite its approval by the state censor board.

Johnston said that part of his European visit would be to meeting new political leaders and to trying to get better conditions for American pictures, which are meeting difficulties of "restrictions, exclusions and government subsidies."

Detroit Exhibitor Seeks Injunction for Foto-Pay

Foto-Pay was in the Detroit courts again this week as Paul Broder, on behalf of the Rex, Kramer and Times theatres of Detroit, sought to enjoin the mayor of Detroit and other officials from prosecuting or threatening to revoke his theatres licenses for use of what he says is a legitimate advertising scheme and what the city says is a lottery.

Industry Circles Expect Decree Before Christmas

ing films at reduced rentals through buying power.

The reticence to bring the buying unit argument into the open was only one phase of what seemed to be some behind the scene action going on last week in the court room of the Foley Square building.

To one observer at least it appeared that the Big Five defendants—Paramount, RKO, Loew's (MGM), 20th Century-Fox—were willing to be very reasonable on a wide front of different points provided they were not faced with the alternative of giving up their theatres.

The theatre divestiture angle, which keeps returning like an ill-mannered Banquo at the table of the defendants' counsel, seems to have even more bearing on what is going on in the industry legal marches and counter marches, than actually appears on the record.

It is no secret that Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the attorney general, who is conducting the Government's case, is a devoted disciple of theatre divorce. Wright can bring divorce into the legal conversation at the most unexpected and assumably, the most embarrassing times. For this fixation on a subject which the Big Five attorneys find distasteful, he has been lambasted and almost lampooned. He sits there with his face relaxed into what might be a grin or might be wrinkles, and takes it.

Sticks to Divorce

Then he comes back to the virtues of divorce again, while the disciples of the "death do us part" theory again point out the evident fact that the court did not mean to divorce the distributors from their exhibition holdings under certain conditions. The court, they say, specifically said that this appeared a harsh measure. Wright doesn't seem to agree.

The current report is that the day after the decree is handed down, Wright will be ready to appeal and start the United States Supreme Court chapter of this litigation which has already consumed nine years of the court's time plus two years of preliminary investigation.

Tribune Cuts Theatre Ads to Save Stock

In order to conserve newsprint the Chicago Tribune this week decided to drop theatre ads from its first two editions, allowing the theatres a 20 per cent reduction in their billing for the omissions. According to the Tribune, the measure is temporary and will be lifted.

Hughes, Sturges Split

Howard Hughes and Preston Sturges split Wednesday over the production of "Vendetta," second production of their jointly owned California Pictures and Hughes, with Hughes exercising his partnership right to acquire control of the company through purchase of two per cent of Sturges stock. Sturges, who had owned 51 per cent of California Pictures prior to the Hughes action, reportedly then stopped production. The company's first was "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock" with Harold Lloyd.

'Outlaw' In 2-Front Fight Over New York Showing

United Artists was set to fight on two fronts this week in efforts to get a New York showing for "The Outlaw," Howard Hughes production being distributed by the company.

One front was at the state censor board before which License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding has a request to revoke the board's approval of the film. United Artists asked for a continuation of its hearing when its president-attorney, Edward C. Raftery, had to appear also in the federal statutory court on the decree hearings. The censor board fight is to be resumed late this week.

The second front is in the appellate division of the New York State Supreme Court, to which UA is appealing a refusal of the state supreme court to compel Arthur Mayer of the Rialto Theatre and Harry Brandt of the Gotham and Republic, to carry out their contracts for a three-theatre day-and-date showing of the picture, which was to have opened Oct. 26.

The state supreme court, which in New York is a lower court and not the final authority, had ruled that since the exhibitors had been warned that they would be subject to police action and license revocation if they played the picture, the court could not order the exhibitors to lay themselves open to criminal prosecution. The appeal may be heard Nov. 4 at 10 a.m.

Fielding, after winning in the state supreme court, had gone to the censor board to revoke censor approval on the grounds of questionable advertising.

Meanwhile, City Councilman Eugene P. Connolly attacked Fielding's action as "repugnant," and said he was studying the city charter and the administrative code of New York City in order to introduce legislation in the city council "to put an end to this trifling with fundamental rights."

Gets W-K Bookings

The Wilbur-Kincey circuit announced this week that it had set playdates for "The Outlaw" in 24 of its 40 theatres.

Quits Movie Board Over Insurance Talk

Lester Bradshaw, secretary of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission since 1944, resigned Oct. 28, after newspapers had published a claim by Andrew Spheeris, part owner of the Towne Theatre, that Bradshaw, an insurance agent, had solicited the Towne insurance business at a tavern meeting during which Bradshaw and Spheeris discussed deletions which would make "The Outlaw" acceptable to the commission.

The Commission has only the power to recommend films and cannot ban them. Bradshaw in his letter presumably resigned so that the mayor could investigate the charges. The mayor previously had said he had not received any complaints before this about Bradshaw's conduct. Bradshaw claimed that he had not brought up the subject of insurance but that Spheeris had broached it, and that after that he had talked insurance with Spheeris.

Criticize 'Open City' Ads

Some criticism was directed this week in St. Louis against the advertising of "The Open City," now playing the World Theatre. Complaint seemed to be against alleged "sexiness."

More City Censors?

That Milwaukee's Motion Picture Commission, which at present is purely an advisory board which passes on films in this area without power to do anything to compel action on its advice, might become an out and out censor board with power to reject motion pictures, seemed possible this week.

The mayor of Milwaukee is known to be in favor of city censorship and recently the common council voted unanimously to draw up an ordinance organizing a censor committee "with teeth." This ordinance is due for action shortly.

Vendors May Seek Cut In Candy Percentage

A move on the part of candy vendors to reduce the percentage they pay to exhibitors for sales made in theatres through vending machines, was seen in New York this week as the wholesale costs of candy reportedly were rising.

Counter sales would presumably be unaffected by this change, since the vendors are free to tack an extra penny to the five cent bar to take up the difference. But vending machines, which are geared at five cents, provide a problem and in concession circles, the report was that an attempt might be made to get a cut in the exhibitor's take, usually around 30 per cent on vending machine receipts, to a slightly lower figure.

Television Ready to Go, RCA Statement Says

Within a year, 30 million Americans will be within effective service range of television sent from new stations now being erected, according to a news letter issued by RCA.

"All the elements making for television are ready—manufacturers, broadcasters, the FCC, consumers, network facilities, technical facilities, advertisers and industry," the letter declares.

RCA is currently in production on two table-model home receivers to sell at $225 and $350, respectively, and shortly after the first of the year will produce larger console type receivers.

Columbus Business Up As Transit Strike Ends

Theatre managers in Columbus were jubilant this week as the end of the transit strike sent business soaring back to normal.

The 25 day old strike ended when the CIO Transport Workers Union agreed with a Citizens Committee plan calling for return to work during an arbitration period, when the question of wages, time and half for work on six holidays a year and free transportation for those covered by the contract, will be arbitrated. Wage boosts of 12 cents an hour, a compromise between the strikers' demands for 14 cents and the company's offer of 10, had been settled.

Theatremen estimated business was off 50 per cent during the strike.

Bus Strike Busts Trade

Efforts to settle the Chicago bus drivers strike continued this week as box offices in the Loop felt its impact on their matinee trade.

Schwartz Quits ATA In Policy Disagreement

Century Circuit Vice-President Fred Schwartz, a regional vice-president of the American Theatres Association, last week resigned his post with ATA on the grounds that the organization was violating the original purpose for which it had been formed.

Schwartz, who had opposed ATA's attempts to intervene in the antitrust suit to fight competitive bidding, told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW that the original platform adopted at St. Louis was good and there was need for such an organization.

"They had," he added, "no right to enter into a trade practice fight. They are going to defeat the purpose for which the organization was formed. I still think the original idea is darn good and we would like to go through with it."

ATA decided to embark upon its competitive bidding attack after a poll of membership was said to have shown that a majority believed the effects of competitive bidding would transcend trade practices of selling and distribution, subjects against which ATA's by-laws prohibit activity.

Century Circuit's houses had never actually joined ATA, though Schwartz declared the houses were "spiritually" part of the original movement. Schwartz has openly approved competitive bidding and the circuit's future plans are understood to be slanted to conform to an anticipated setup on such basis of distribution.

Coast Theatre Applicants Few; So Is Building

West Coast theatre construction and remodeling probably will be strictly curtailed until the spring of 1947, Charles King, representing Louis Dreves, regional director for the Civilian Production Administration, told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW this week.

Dreves pointed to the critical building situation, due in part, he said to piling up of materials aboard ships by strikes. However, he added, since the present system of controls went into effect the Southern California-Arizona district has had only 15 applications for building or remodeling.

A quonset hut type of show costing $3,900 is due for construction in San Bernadino, Cal., and indications are that this may be the only type of theatres that will get by. Two drive-in theatres have been approved for Riverside, Cal., and one in the Los Angeles Country district.

Trick Horse Outdraws Empire State Politicians

Gallant Bess, be it known, is a horse who plays in a picture reelased by MGM.

Gallant Bess, be it understood, has just about done everything. But Saturday at Binghamton, N. Y., according to the veracious and authentic Associated Press, Bess, appearing on a day and date booking with Gubernatorial Candidate Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, and Gubernatorial Candidate James M. Mead, Democrat, outdrew both gentlemen about 10 to 1 and stalled traffic.

Bess did her bag of tricks. The candidates did theirs . . . pardon, discussed issues. The big difference was that Bess had an audience that stalled traffic.

RKO Exchanges Handle 16-mm.

RKO led off this week as the first distributor to offer its 16-mm. service through its regular exchanges as this product became available to non-theatrical accounts through the company's branches in the United States.

The branches have been equipped with 16-mm. inspection apparatus and are now shipping prints. The pictures are restricted to hospitals, convents, sanitariums, prisons, welfare agencies, summer camps, armed force units and schools. They will not be available, RKO's 16-mm. department said, to those who are in a position to attend regularly established theatres.

Monogram Features Total 53; Sign King Bros. for 6

Signing of a new contract with King Bros., as part of Monogram's expanded production program which will give it a total of 53 pictures in the next 12 months, was announced in New York Wednesday by Monogram President Steve Broidy.

This total, which gives Monogram the largest total number of productions to be made in any one Hollywood studio, includes the scheduled attractions of Producer Roy Del Ruth with his $1,500,000 budget for each picture, as well as the productions of Benjamin Glazer, and Nat W. Finston; Jeffrey Bernerd; Hal E. Chester; Lindsley Parsons; Walter Mirisch; Jan Grippo; Irving Allen; Barney Sarecky.

The King Bros. contract calls for a series of six productions on a budget of $1,000,000 each, with three of the pictures to be completed for the current season.

Strong Booking Lineup For Warners in Detroit

Detroit—Warner Bros. releases will get the bulk of the playing time at the big Michigan Theatre for some weeks to come, including Thanksgiving weekend, with "The Big Sleep" currently in its second week there, while "Two Guys From Milwaukee" is booked to come in November 5 and "Deception" on November 28.

Warners also have set "Cloak and Dagger" to open November 29 at the Palms-State, giving the company two standout bookings here for the Thankgiving holiday.

Blue Skies

Running nearly nine million dollars above the corresponding figure for 1945, the admissions tax collection for September hit a fat total of $38,559,485, the Internal Revenue Dept. reports. Although this figure was nearly a million dollars under the collection for a month earlier it represented better box-office through 64 of the 65 collection districts. The take in the Broadway area—Third New York collection district—fell off by more than a million.

Collection figures so far point to a two-billion dollar box-office for the current fiscal year. For the first three months of this fiscal year the total take is $118,-345,507—more than $22 million above the three-month take last year. Unless there is a sharp falling off, the 12-month total should be close to $500,000,000.

Field Men for PRC Eagle Lion Meet

Discussion of the proper liquidation of sales contracts was the principal topic Saturday (Nov. 2) at an all-day meeting of the PRC and Eagle-Lion field representatives held in the Hotel Warwick, New York.

The meeting was presided over by PRC Vice-President and Assistant Sales Manager Lloyd L. Lind with Grover C. Schaefer, PRC home office representative; Frank Soule, PRC field representative head; and Alfred W. Schwalberg, vice-president and general manager of Eagle-Lion Films, as the principal speakers.

Siritzky Gets U. S. Rights on 8 More Pagnols

Rights on the distribution of eight more Marcel Pagnol pictures produced in France were acquired this week by Siritzky International Pictures, it was announced in New York Wednesday by Joseph Siritzky.

The new product, added to the Pagnol pictures Siritzky already has, will probably give that country exclusive American rights on the French producer's output. The pictures acquired are: "Harvest," "Schpountz," "Angele," "Merlousse," "Cigalon," "Jeffroi," and the trilogy—"Marius," "Fanny," "Cesar," which had previously been unavailable to the United States because Pagnol had sold the rights of "Fanny" to MGM with the understanding he would not release the other two here during a specified period, now expired. MGM produced it as "Port of Seven Seas" with Wallace Beery.

The Hoboken, N. J., Rialto, which won national prominence during prohibition days when Christopher Morley and associates ran it for a revival of the "The Black Crook" was sold this week to Albert H. Income Taxes High

A net income of $255,864,000 before taxes was reported in 1943 by 2,714 film firms, with a compiled net profit less tax of $112,860,000, the Treasury reported this week. The firms included in the study were not identified. In addition, a net loss of $4,163,000 was reported by another 838 firms. Total assets of the profit-reporting firms were set at an astronomical $1,354,410,000, with cost of goods and operations at $550,970,000 and compensation of officers at $21,539,000.

Jules Brulatour, Industry Pioneer, Dies at 75

Leading figures of the motion picture industry in which he was a pioneer and one of its most colorful personalities, paid final tribute Tuesday to Jules E. Brulatour by their presence at funeral ceremonies held at St. Ignatius Loyola Church, New York, or through statements mourning his loss by those unable to attend the services for the 75-year-old organizer and financier who died Saturday Oct. 26 at Mt. Sinai Hospital following an illness of several weeks.

Brulatour. who was the president of J. E. Brulatour, Inc., distributors of Eastman motion picture film, was closely identified with many important companies and enterprises in the industry. He was a former director of the Famous Players Corporation, Paramount Publix Corporation, was the organizer of Universal Film Company and its first president; founder of the Paragon and Peerless studios at Fort Lee and other companies.

A native of New Orleans, Brulatour entered the industry through an association with an optical company. He went to New York in 1898 and in 1912 acquired from Eastman Kodak the exclusive distribution rights for that company's motion picture film to the industry in the United States.

Brulatour and Hope Hampton Brulatour, former film star and his third wife were familiar figures in New York theatrical and social circles for many years, and particularly were noted as first-nighters at the opening of Broadway stage plays and important motion pictures.

New competition to the kid clubs in theatres in Canada which were launched by Odeon and taken up by Famous Players Canadian Corp., is the junior branch of the National Film Society.

Pay As You See

Manager Lou Holleb of the Majestic, Columbus, O., is still reeling over this one.

He was subbing for the cashier during lunch time when a lady came up and fished a dime and three pennies from her hand bag and passed it to Holleb instead of the expected 25 cents admission. Holleb called the discrepancy to her attention:

"Oh," she said, coldly, "but I only want to see the main feature."

'Years' Campaign Biggest In Hollywood History

Samuel Goldwyn's advertising campaign on "The Best Years of Our Lives," computed on the Standard Rate and Data certified circulation figures, is the biggest in Hollywood history. Magazine circulation alone is 123,000,000 paid (Audit Bureau of Circulations figure), with key insertions scheduled for triple runs.

Radio coverage includes two 15-minute sessions and countless station-break and one-minute spots. Foote, Cone & Belding scouts are canvassing the country to tie up outdoor space for the film, and the eventual newspaper campaign, synchronized with the regional openings after the New York early winter premiere, will be on an unprecedented scale.

Actual space-buying outlay will exceed $750,000 aside from normal overhead, art, exploitation and publicity.

Meanwhile, in New York station WNEW is sponsoring a veterans' writing contest in cooperation with the American Theatre Wing. Prizes of $300, $150 and $50 will go to the veterans writing the three best fifteen-minute radio scripts inspired by the picture's title. Scripts are to be submitted on or before December 4 and the winning script will be dramatized over WNEW, on a special program December 18, with all-veteran talent participating. Guests on the program will be Robert E. Sherwood, who wrote the screenplay for the film, and MacKinlay Kantor.

PRC Exploiteers Hold First Meet in Chicago

With Arnold Stoltz, PRC's national director of advertising and publicity, presiding, the company's exploitation men held their first joint meeting in Chicago last week to discuss future production under the company's new and expanded budgets and its plans to exploit and publicize its product.

Present at the meeting were Lige Brien, PRC exploitation manager; Milt Overman, exploiteer assigned to the Dallas territory; H. M. Addison, Atlanta; Leon Brandt, Chicago; Ira Gross, Pittsburgh; and also Arthur Jeffrey, of Eagle Lion films.

Following a discussion of forthcoming product, the exploitation men witnessed a screening of "Her Sister's Secret," PRC's first million-dollar production.

Later in the day, all exploitation men attended a press cocktail party at the Polo Room of the Ambassador East which local newspaper and trade paper men gave for Harry H. Thomas, PRC president, and Stoltz.

Following the meeting, Thomas and Stoltz journeyed on to Hollywood to visit the studio, while Brien returned to New York.

Publicizing Producers

Monogram is launching an extensive publicity campaign on its producers which will be directed at national and fan magazines. First steps in this direction were taken several days ago when Talmadge Morrison made portrait settings of 13 company producers.

Whale of a Stunt

Dan Martin, manager of the Huntington Station Theatre, was really on his toes when that whale was washed ashore at Huntington, New York. He had a flash poster made that read, "If you think he's big, wait till you see the Talent Sweepstakes' at the Station Theatre every Thursday night."

He had the sign put on a stick which was then carried on the beach where the crowds had gathered.

200 Window Displays On 'Angel' in Atlanta

More than 200 window displays in Atlanta's downtown area, plenty of free radio time, an extraordinary tieup with the Southeastern World's Fair and special promotions at sporting events and night clubs were highlights of the exploitation campaign on "Angel on My Shoulder," essayed by Manager Boyd Fry and his assistant, Hugh Rainey of Loew's Grand, assisted by Ben Hill, United Artists field representative.

The RCA Victor Personal Radio tieup alone accounted for 75 windows. Others were in diners, drug stores and hotel lobbies. Additional window tieups were based on the national tieups with GE Automatic Blanket and Bendix Washing Machines.

"Angel on My Shoulder" grabbed a prominent place in the huge parade which opened the Southeastern World's Fair, by having an enormous banner attached to one of the gigantic Macy balloons, announcing the title of the picture and playdates at the Grand.

The Chesterfield Hour, Dimes for Rhymes, Stage Door Program and Man on the Street programs were most prominent among the twelve radio shows on which "Angel" publicity was broadcast.

Loudspeaker announcements about the film were made at two football games and at a wrestling show. Some nice "gag" publicity was obtained from Harry Stevens, emcee of the floor show in the Paradise Room of the Henry Grady Hotel, when he appeared five nights in a row with an angel on his shoulder.

Jane Russell's 'Charms' Cause Swiss Vandalism

The recent appearance of a paid ad offering 100 francs reward in the daily newspapers of Geneva, Switzerland, told a story of vandalism in Rue Malbuisson by which a showcase was broken and a number of Jane Russell photographs stolen.

Paul Rappaport, United Artists manager in Switzerland, in a letter to Walter Gould, foreign manager, explained that the Jane Russell stills were part of his advance display on "The Outlaw" and that he was inspired to offer a reward because this was the third time "this regrettable incident" had occurred. He also said something about Miss Russell's "obvious charms" being the cause of the incident.

Plans Set for Premiere Of 'Razor's Edge' Nov. 19

Preparations for the world premiere of Darryl F. Zanuck's production of Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge" at the Roxy Theatre in New York on December 19 were completed last weekend. The two-day program of events will start on November 18 with the arrival of a large contingent of Hollywood stars headed by Tyrone Power and Gene Tierney, two of the film's stars, and will close with a reception in honor of Zanuck and the visiting celebrities on the night following the premiere showing.

The Hollywood stars will be joined at the opening by Clifton Webb, also one of the leading players in the film, who will close his Broadway play, "Present Laughter," on that night so that the entire cast can attend, and by June Haver, Dana Andrews and Jane Wyatt, among others, who will be in New York at the time on various assignments. Edmund Goulding, who directed "The Razor's Edge," will arrive in New York November 1 and will remain until after the premiere, and Lamar Trotti, who wrote the screenplay, also will be present. The occasion also will serve as a birthday celebration for Gene Tierney and Clifton Webb.

All the brilliance of an international event is planned for the premiere, with invitations going to the chief delegates of the 51 nations now in New York for the United Nations General Assembly. On the invitation list also are other dignitaries of the foreign groups and prominent members of New York society, leading figures in the theatre, the publishing field and the motion picture industry.

Meanwhile, a new large electric animated sign atop the Schraft Building at 43rd and Broadway will herald the world premiere and later will be used to advertise future 20th-Fox pictures. The huge sign will be electrically animated and will have two sides; one, 92 feet by 75 feet, will face on Broadway, and the other, 80 feet by 75 feet, will face 43rd street. Both will be visible to the Broadway crowds for several blocks. An elaborate ceremony for the unveiling (the sign is expected to be completely assembled by November 10) is being planned, with one of the 20th-Fox stars pressing the switch for the initial illumination.

Rosner in Paramount Exploitation Department

Joseph Rosner, formerly in charge of publicity for the International Microfilm Co., and at one time handling publicity for the American Chemical Co., has joined Paramount's exploitation department and will work on the Paramount Sales News. Rosner succeeds Fred Goldberg, who will be in charge of exploitation kits for the company while continuing to handle eastern exploitation tieups and home office exploitation.

Goldberg takes over some of the exploitation duties formerly assigned to Joseph Callahan, who has been promoted to the post of assistant to D. John Phillips, Paramount's short subjects publicity director.

Maggie's 'Mission for Monogram' Is Revealing

A lesson can be drawn from the cross-country tour of Renie Riano in behalf of Monogram's "Bringing Up Father" in which the veteran actress plays Maggie to Joe Yule's Jiggs. The lesson is simply that an actress of the calibre of Miss Riano could see the exploitation possibilities inherent in the film based on the George McManus comedy strip and decided that come hell or high water she was going to see to it that the film's exploitation possibilities were known to one and all who would have anything to do with its exhibition. And this 'mission for Monogram' included exchange managers, franchise owners, field exploitation men, exhibitors, newspaper and radio men. Upon examining the evidence contained in newspaper tear sheets, radio transcriptions of her interviews, records of her reading the local comics, etc., and other personal appearances in theatres long before the film would be available, it appears that Miss Riano might have done very well as a press agent if she hadn't been the third generation of thespians in a famous acting family.

Traveling across country in a 1934 automobile, dragging a household trailer in which she spent most of her nights, accompanied only by her canine pal "Stoogie," Miss Riano has visited 26 cities since August 10th, and intends to extend her "selling job" to many more before she returns to Hollywood to make one sequel, and possibly several others, in the Jiggs and Maggie series for Monogram.

Miss Riano says very frankly that her ignorance about exploitation was "appalling" at the outset of her trip, but like any good actress she could learn lines and pick up information about the exhibition and exploitation of motion pictures as she went along. The fact that her recorded success in newspaper tear sheets should make some press agents ashamed of themselves bears evidence that she learned her job well.

Some of the stunts that became SOP (Standard Operational Procedure) for those in the tour included the appearance with the mayor of each city and the signing of a large McManus cartoon by each city's chief executive. Somehow or other this one became a cinch, with amused and wondering cooperation by the mayors. The somehow, of course, was Renie's positive and compelling personality. Of course, the newspaper and camera boys of each city's newspapers recorded the event for their journals, with Maggie clowning all over the place to make colorful copy, insuring publication.

She appeared at dinners of the Lions Clubs, the Kiwanis, the Chambers of Commerce, made herself known over the air by working with someone in each town who read the comics to the youngsters, with Uncle Whosis and Aunt Whatsis, and if no uncle or aunt was extant locally she just appeared on the local radio station with some celebrity or other who was sure that her presence would add life and color to his program. And none were disappointed.

There were many other stereotyped gags that ceased to be stereotyped when Maggie took part in them, as can be seen from some of the photographs at the top of this page.

Most of all what Maggie wanted to do, and what she has succeeded in doing, was to impress upon the distribution and exhibition end of the motion picture business the fact that in "Bringing Up Father" they had an exploitable film. And from now on it can be expected that newspapers, radio stations, magazines and trade papers will be flooded with news about "what was done with 'Bringing Up Father'."

Set Tieup on Belita

Monogram has set a tieup with the Ventnor Speed Boat Company whereby their star, Belita, will be pictured in all the company's advertising. In addition to carrying page ads in all boating magazines, Ventnor for the first time in its history is going to advertise in newspapers and national magazines.

Reisinger Does It Again With Cooperative Ads

Several descriptive items have appeared in these columns about manager Bill Reisinger's proclivity for obtaining enormous amounts of cooperative advertising space in the newspapers of Dayton, Ohio in connection with films he has played at Loew's in that city.

Another example of Bill's ability to see eye to eye with local advertisers recently appeared in the Dayton Herald amounting to about three fourths of a page of space, absolutely free to Mr. Reisinger, in which MGM's "No Leave, No Love" was the beneficiary. A very large proportion of the space was devoted to an illustration of Van Johnson and Pat Kirkwood in an intimate pose with the headline reading, "No, Leave, No Love . . . No Ring, No Girl!" and then, of course went on to tell about the lovely things that might be bought at a local jewelry shop.

The jeweler got plenty of attention value to his selling message and, certainly, Reisinger got plenty of free selling appeal for the film's showing at Loew's.

'Arch' Tieup Based On Bergman Gowns

A tieup has been set by Enterprise with the Butterick Company whereby patterns based on the gowns worn by Ingrid Bergman in "Arch of Triumph" will go on sale in 1,585 U. S. and Canadian department stores which will display three-color posters, send out fashion letters to their clientele, and employ mats supplied them for newspaper use.

Commitments for covers and editorial spreads have been received from Woman's Home Companion, Pattern Book, Fashion News and three fan magazines. Four hundred radio stations and 110 newspaper fashion editors have pledged time and space. Nine traveling combination models and fashion advisers will tour the U. S. and Canada to model "Arch" dresses and advise on home dressmaking. The coverage, it is estimated, will embrace every American home, with 47 per cent overlap as insurance.

Nice Middle Level for Levy's Tieup on 'Rage'

There are tieups and tieups. Sometimes they mean nothing more than a card in the bootblack's window, while others become elaborate affairs with apparently no limit to the doings. There is a nice middle level in this sort of thing, however, that can be executed in the average-sized city very successfully. The point is to make the most of each tieup, instead of just biting at the edges.

An example of how to do it is offered in the recent campaign put on by Loew's Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa. for the engagement of "Rage in Heaven," a re-issue with Ingrid Bergman and Robert Montgomery. Larry Levy, manager, and Ed Gallner, MGM representative, did a raft of other things for this picture, but their treatment of the tieup was a classic. The arrangement was made with Merritt's Gift Shop, in this case a rather large shop.

Featured above everything was a live window. What do you put in a live window? Answer: a pretty girl. In this case the pretty girl was an artist—well-known in Reading, Miss Betty Fisher. The gag was that she painted one of the dramatic scenes from the picture, starting three days in advance of opening and going three days during the run.

Besides Miss Fisher and her easel the window also included a 40x60 with selling copy and a 30x40 full colored blowup built around the idea: "Merritt's, the Home of Dramatic Decorations for the Home, Salutes One of the Most Dramatic Pictures Ever Shown!" Also there was an announcement of a movie quiz contest conducted by the shop, with prizes of $10, $7.50, $5, $2.50 and 25 pairs of guest tickets. Incidentally, the five questions in the quiz were not easy.

To put this over the store and theatre distributed 10,000 heralds containing the same gag copy presented by the shop, with copy on the picture and details of the contest.

A week before opening the shop took a four-column ad on the same general plan, and repeated it on the Tuesday before opening.

The result was that large crowds watched Miss Fisher every day and 200 answers came in to the quiz. That's making a complete job of it, isn't it?

'Night and Day' Awards Modeling Scholarship

For the opening of Warner's "Night and Day" at the Rialto Theatre, Joliet, Ill., considerable attention was attracted by holding a fashion show in the lobby of the theatre and broadcasting the event over a local radio station. As a special inducement to the participants, a scholarship worth $175 was awarded to the most charming model by the Patricia Stevens Modeling School in Chicago.

On the Saturday before the show, all the girls selected to model "Night and Day" fashions in the theatre were invited to come into Chicago and receive coaching at the Stevens School.

Kline's Department Store, sponsor of the fashion show, used a series of big newspaper ads to advertise the event. The store also devoted their display windows to "Night and Day" and the fashion show, while salespeople throughout the store wore ribbons calling attention to the "Night and Day" fashions.

Newspapers cooperated with stories.

READ'S COLORFUL LOBBY DISPLAY. This excellent display piece was set up in the lobby of the Fox, Atlanta, by Tommy Read. The entire 18-foot long background was illuminated. Lights flashed on and off to get attention and viewers were then apprised of the film's attributes through the smaller figures, set slightly in front of the block-lettered title. The picture: Universal-International's "Canyon Passage."

Plate Glass, Pro-Football Tieups are Set in New York for 'Duel in the Sun'

Advance selling activity on David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" continued apace last week as Sid Alexander, eastern advertising and publicity director for Vanguard Films and the Selznick organization, announced a merchandising tieup with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and plans whereby a weekly "Duel in the Sun" $100 Victory Bond will be awarded the outstanding New York Giant football player at each week's tussle at the Polo Grounds.

The Plate Glass tieup, which was arranged by Ted Baldwin, Vanguard exploitation and promotion manager, provides for the release of a series of attractive color ads by Pittsburgh in national magazines; two different types of window displays; the distribution of special colored window cards and release mats and special feature stories to newspapers and magazines.

Basis for the tieup deals with the skillful use of color both in the motion picture industry and as it applies to the home through the principles of Color Dynamics. Through the medium of Technicolor in "Duel in the Sun" it is proven that each color tends to heighten the audience's emotional reaction. And this unusual use of color, the campaign will seek to point out, calls attention to the fact that the housewife can find in color the answer to many of her decorating problems.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass will release a series of full-color ads in December issues of American Home, House Beautiful, Better Home and Garden, and Fortune. Additional four-color consumer ads will be placed in other decorating publications.

To further publicize the value of this tieup, Pittsburgh Plate Glass is now releasing a series of feature stories on Color Dynamics as well as several special mats to 5,000 newspapers and 1,100 magazines. In addition they are getting out 16,000 pieces of window display material to 8,000 dealers as well as special color cards for window display purposes. Additional details of the campaign will be completely outlined in a four-color illustrated booklet which will be sent to more than 1,500,000 consumers.

The opening shot in the pro football tieup got under way last Sunday when the Giants met the Chicago Bears, and continues for five additional home games. By means of the P.A system at the Polo Grounds, spectators are urged to turn to a particular page in their program which contains full details on the "Duel in the Sun" contest. A coupon is imprinted and spectators are urged to send in their votes as soon as possible. The player receiving the largest number of votes is winner of the Victory Bond.

To climax the weekly awards, a special $500 bond will be given the Giant player voted the outstanding star of the year. In addition to the money prize the player will also receive a specially designed "Duel in the Sun" trophy.

Special Brochure On 'Sister Kenny'

RKO Radio has prepared a sales promotion piece on "Sister Kenny" which exhibitors will find useful in selling the picture.

The brochure consists of three color lithos, one of the James Montgomery Flagg portraits of Rosalind Russell as "Sister Kenny." There are also scenic highlights from the film.

How Many Were There?

As a stunt for "Claudia and David," Manager George E. Freeman of Loew's Poli, Springfield, Mass., and 20th-Fox Field Representative Al Fowler arranged to have all married couples named Claudia and David attend a showing as guests of the theatre.—HFD.

Money Dates for December

Marking the second observance since the end of World War II, Christmas is getting back into its old prewar stride. Practically all of the boys are home now, families are once more together (did someone say something about housing?) and most people are working, so that there is little doubt but that this Yuletide will be a cheerful and generous one. Yes, we said generous, for there is quite likely to be a loosening of the pursestrings during this joyful season. Some of the money that will be spent should come your way, and it is up to you to make certain that it does by being in the center of activities. The ideas below should help you to put over stunts that will stimulate December business.

Special Observances

Dec. 5: 18th Amendment Repealed, 1933. There are so many differences of opinion regarding this anniversary that, in order to incur no enmity, you should desist from making any tieins. Should liquor dealers proffer cooperation, refuse it.

Dec. 7: Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, 1941. This is the fifth anniversary of Japan's treacherous attack. If there is local observance of the day, perhaps your theatre could participate.

Dec. 16: Boston Tea Party, 1773. School youngsters might re-enact this event on your stage.

Dec. 17: Wilbur Wright's First Flight. Now Proclaimed as "Pan American Aviation Day." If your theatre happens to be near an airplane training station, airplane manufacturing plant or kindred industry, you can probably get cooperation for the observance of this day.

Dec. 21: Landing of Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, 1620. Known also as "Forefathers Day" and celebrated mostly in New England, this day can also be observed in other communities. As in the case of the Boston Tea Party suggestion, here, too, the school students might be enlisted to re-enact the event on your stage. In addition, there is the possibility of generating interest among the civic clubs and leaders, with heads of their organizations or church dignitaries delivering short talks on the strides made by the nation in elaborating on the privileges and freedom that had its world inception with the landing of the Pilgrims.

Dec. 8-15: International Golden Rule Week. You can depend on churches, schools, business men's organizations, civic leaders and others to contribute to any effort that will create interest in this week. School children could engage in an essay contest where tickets are awarded the winners; newspapers or radio stations could distribute tickets to those of their readers or listeners reporting the kindest deeds performed of the best manifestations of the Golden Rule observed by the readers, listeners or special observers of the paper or station. Because the observance is particularly timely during the Christmas season, it might be wise for the paper or radio station to appoint the various street Santas as observers. If the last is decided upon, be sure that a change is made daily in the location of the men appointed.

Dec. 15: Bill of Rights enforced, 1791. The Bill of Rights is the guarantee of the existence of the Four Fredoms for which we have fought. Get after the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, etc., and the newspaper, radio station, school and civic leaders to join you in observing the day. A great deal of publicity and added attendance is certain to result.

Legal Holiday

December 25: CHRISTMAS

Of all observances, the influence of Christmas prevails throughout the month. Last year was the first postwar Christmas, and now that more and more of our service men have returned to civilian life and the inroads on peace have progressed, despite some uncertainties here and there, much more activity is bound to prevail. There is an influence, however, which tends to draw business away from the theatres into the stores (as if you didn't know); your job is to counteract that influence. The day itself, of course, has always been an attendance bellringer and needs only nominal attention to guarantee flattering grosses. For the period immediately preceding we recommend: That you start members of your staff canvassing the factories, industries and larger stores. At this time of the year every employer is anxiously searching for some manner of manifesting seasonal greetings to employes in which all will feel equally recognized, and a party at your theatre would be an ideal solution. Quote special block prices and promise mention from the stage of the attendance of the group. This activity can grow really big and reward you with your major attendance throughout the headachy pre-Christmas week. Be sure that you watch your seating commitments carefully to avoid over-selling, and arrange to stagger the parties night-to-night in a manner that will cause no inconvenience to regular patrons. If you work hard on the idea you will find employers of 30 or more persons avidly grasping at the solution to the Christmas present problem, and in communities where extremely large industries are in evidence it will be necessary to departmentalize the service to accommodate the entire personnel. Success of the canvass will guarantee better-than-average business during the week.

The various civic, social and fraternal groups are the possibilities for seasonal get-togethers and will more than likely be amendable to similar approach. By exhausting the entire possibilities and including school groups and others, you can go a long way toward filling your seats for performances covering the 14 days prior to the visit of Santa Claus. As much or more than at any other time, this is the month when you should exert every effort to keep the name of your theatre and its attractions in the newspaper columns and on radio programs. Take part in all activities that will encourage and promulgate observance of the Christmas spirit. Let your publisher and radio station manager decide on several charitable activities in which you can engage, such as toy collections for the poor kiddies, food matinees for donation to some organization that intends making up baskets for the unfortunate, matinees for the various orphanages, old folks' homes, etc. By making them partners to the event you automatically place the responsibility of assuring comparable success on their shoulders and assure yourself of a greater volume of publicity. Spreading these events over a period of two weeks or more will keep you well in the limelight of the community Santa Claus program. This publicity should be in addition to the regular attraction effort of the theatre. Cooperate with the churches. Even if the event they hold is in conflict with your exhibition schedule, go out of your way to help them advertise it. If possible, get them to arrange their outstanding celebration at your theatre by offering to share receipts with their various funds. One or two mornings of Christmas week should be set aside for the use of special religious services, with the prominent church dignitaries officiating at ceremonies. This is the kind of activity that is particularly in keeping with the sprit of the season and that makes lasting friends because of the total absence of any commercial tinge, and because of its very apparent contribution to the general welfare and uplifting of the people you serve.

Much attention should be devoted to the front, lobby, auditorium and stage, making sure that everything possible is done to foster the Christmas spirit. Use large Santa Claus cutouts or Christmas trees on either side of the screen. Play Christmas Carols at every performance. Festoon your chandeliers, wall bracket lamps, foyer rails, lobby frames, etc., with appropriate decorations. Decorate your marquee with Christmas greenery, place large Santa Claus cutouts on top, and if possible, borrow bells to toll at regular intervals.

Get in touch with an enterprising store and extend to them the privilege of erecting a Christmas tree in your lobby and putting a Santa Claus in attendance. If this is accompanied by a sizable display of toys, so much the better for both store and theatre, as it is possible for the store to place a shorthand operator behind the display where names and addresses of children making their requests to Santa Claus can be secretly taken down, together with information as to the child's desires. The store can use this information in contacting the parents and swell its business considerably. Be a good fellow during Christmas week and give a couple of free matinees to the kids who will be on vacation from school. Their parents will appreciate the gesture and the kids will never forget you. Try to tie-up with merchants who are anxious to crowd as much business as possible into the early December shopping days by setting up special block prices on tickets to be given away with quantity purchase by early shoppers. The idea can also be used by merchants anxious to press the sale of certain units of merchandise. Newspaper advertising, window displays and handbills distributed in packages should be part of the store's cooperative effort. Special shows at which gifts solicited from local merchants are given to customers will help swell attendance. Giving the merchant stage and lobby card mention is sufficient payment for the low-cost gifts. Discount coupons on more expensive merchandise are usually available in quantities. Look over the situation to determine whether or not it is advisable for you to change your exhibition schedule to allow for a later start on your last show to accommodate the shoppers who will be patronizing the downtown stores. You might be able to get mention on all of the display advertising of local merchants by agreeing to hold special late shows. Perhaps they would sell or give away specially priced tickets.

Inaugurate a check-room service early in the month as a service to shoppers. Perhaps you can make arrangements with your local postmaster for the sale of stamps in your lobby as a means of relieving the crush and jam at the post office.

Pigtail Contest Feature of 'Kid' Campaign

Opening gun in the Mission Theatre's "Kid From Brooklyn" campaign in Vancouver, Wash., was a promotion arranged by Ray McCall, advertising manager of the A. W. Adamson Theatres, with the Vancouver Sun called the "1946 pigtail queen contest." Despite the newsprint shortage the newspaper devoted generous space to stories, rules on the contest and a contest blank. Ritchie Quinn, the Sun's advertising executive, handled details of the contest.

McCall handpicked a board of judges from leading merchants in the downtown area, most of whom donated prizes. The cooperating firms also set up window displays.

Mayflower Dairy collared its milk bottles for delivery throughout the area and ran a three column, 13-inch ad in two colors in the Sun. The ad featured a caricature of Kaye wearing his milkman's uniform and was headed "The Kid from Brooklyn has fallen in love with Mayflower Milk."

Seventeen entrants in the pigtail contest appeared on the stage for judging on opening night with proceedings broadcast via KVAN.

Don McGregor, RKO Radio field representative assisted McCall in the campaign.

Bride, Groom Ballyhoo

Ernie Grecula, advertising and publicty director for Hartford Theatres Circuit, Hartford, had an idea when "Easy to Wed" was booked into the Colonial Theatre, Hartford. Instead of using the regular "bride and groom" street ballyhoo for the picture's exploitation, Grecula had two ushers in bride and groom get-up. The ushers carried banners plugging the picture.—HFD.

BING TIME. Reviving a different Bing Crosby picture each Sunday during September, Manager E. Gislingham of the Gaumont, Cheltenham, England, exploited the occasion with this lobby board. It will be noted that "Bing" and a head of the star suffice to identify Crosby.

M-G-M EXECUTIVES DO BETTER HANDSPRINGS THAN ANYBODY!

WE WISH you could have been over to the M-G-M Home Office the last week or two.

THE FRIENDLY COMPANY boys were practically doing handsprings out of the Projection Room.

AND good reason!

THEY saw:

"THE YEARLING" in Technicolor, already talked about as the most potent contender for this year's Academy Award.

"TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" in Technicolor, the life and songs of Jerome Kern, with the Biggest Big-Star cast ever assembled, and unquestionably one of the greatest musicals of all time.

"UNDERCURRENT" the year's top tense-taut-terrific love story with a baffling mystery and starring Katharine Hepburn and Robert Taylor, newly returned to his fans.

WHO SAID: "The Big Ones Come From M-G-M!"

VARIETY, among others, just said it in their industry survey which showed M-G-M leading all companies with almost forty percent of total Top Hits!

HAVE YOU practised handsprings lately?

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

PLAN IN ADVANCE AND YOU CAN BEAT THAT PRE-XMAS BOX-OFFICE SLUMP

By Jack Jackson

Perhaps you haven't thought about it and mebbe I shouldn't bring up the subject—but at the sound of the gong some 84,960 minutes after this appears in print Santa Claus will be making his yearly rounds filling Christmas stockings.

If you're a smart little—or big—showman you'll start right now on the all-important job of seeing to it that as little as possible of the wherewithal habitually expended at this time of year for gifts from Santaland is not siphoned from your private pool of theatre revenue.

Everybody in the entertainment field is well aware of how the folks start padlocking their pocketbooks immediately following Thanksgiving so they will be able to "keep up with the Joneses" and give a little better than they get in the way of Christmas gifts. It's an admirable and commendable trait—and one that I most certainly wouldn't think of discouraging—but it sure gives theatre business a terrible pasting. From the very first glint of December morn right through to Christmas breakfast, showmen everywhere join in a constantly rising crescendo of "Geronimo" to ease the shock of parachuting grosses.

Just why the ruddy-faced, white-whiskered, jovial dispenser of Christmas cheer should be so lavish in his treatment of other merchants and so niggardly to us engaged in dispensing of happiness throughout the year is a paradox—tough but real. It seems that Santa never thinks of the theatremen until he and his sextet of antlered chargers have entirely completed their world-girdling mission and are safely back in their sky castle. Then, when the check-up reveals the oversight, I suppose he figures "Better late than never" and tries to make up for it between Christmas and New Year's. I suppose Santa feels—and rightly—that, since the other merchants lay their plans far in advance to stock the merchandise and engage in the activities conducive to garnering the hoarded public savings, they are entitled to his exclusive pre-season attentions. And I also suppose the same process of reasoning fosters the conclusion that, since theatremen have, for so long, been effortlessly conceding a bloodless victory to the mercantile establishments, we really don't mind his yearly raids on the theatre larder and are content to supply the "gravy" for the Christmas dinners of our commercial competitors.

Capitalize on the Spirit of the Season

Don't tell me—or ask me! I've heard that "What are we going to do about it?" line before. The very same planning that makes the Christmas business of the other merchants reach revenue pinnacles can be applied to mitigate if not eliminate the yearly drain on our box-offices. A few moments spent studying the avenues open to you to capitalize on the spirit of the season will provide such a fund of real, workable ideas of revenue and "good will" or "community betterment" potential that you'll actually find yourself confronted with the job of elimination rather than conception. Just to start your "idea incubator" percolating let me list a few notions that can be turned into immediate or deferred bank deposits.

Start planning your week before Christmas programs right now. Look over the availabilities in the feature and shorts market and build the kind of shows that come closest to fitting the spirit of the season—not necessarily religious pictures, but there have been occasions where presentations of "King of Kings," "After Six Days," "The Passion Play" and others of their kind have proved mighty profitable attractions during the pre-Christmas period. This has been especially true where the cooperation of churches was solicited and the films shown at special morning matinees

Park Avenue Opening Preceded by Reception

Numerous prominent stars of screen, stage and radio, representatives of the press and others were the guests of Walter Reade last Tuesday evening at a special reception held at the Park Ave. Theatre, new New York subscription house. A private screening of a new picture followed the reception.

Walter Reade

Gala opening of the new motion picture theatre, first to sell seats on an annual subscription basis, took place on Wednesday evening, with "Anna and the King of Siam" as the initial attraction.

At Tuesday night's reception Reade addressed the gathering, explained the theatre's policy and thanked all who helped to make it possible.

Also, a few days ago, Reade dispatched a letter to all subscribers of seats, pointing out the theatre's advantages.

"The Park Avenue Theatre," wrote Reade, "is a result of a lifetime of experience, and will afford its patrons the most perfect comfort. Every attention possible will be given subscribers. A Charles of the Ritz trained attendant will be on duty in the ladies' lounge. A Dumont television set will be on hand for your enjoyment. The Snack Bar will serve coffee, tea and biscuits. Everything will be done to make your visit to the Park Avenue Theatre enjoyable. The atmosphere presented will be equal only to that of your living room.

"We hope we will not have to apologize for anything. The productions shown at this theatre will be motion pictures created and produced by the world's leading directors and artists.

"We anticipate that this movie season at the Park Avenue Theatre will be the most enjoyable you have ever experienced."

For the first time in theatre exhibition history, the Park Avenue is regularly showing the 16mm. type of sound short subject. Five to 15 16mm. shorts have been screened daily before a special reviewing board made up of members of the Parents Association, the Parents League and the New York Junior League in an effort to select the proper shorts to be included in children's shows as well as at other performances. Sources for the shorts are film libraries, many foreign embassies, some small producing companies and government agencies.

Loew's Election Returns

Special arrangements have been completed to handle election returns by direct wire at all Loew's New York theatres on the evening of November 5, according to Oscar A. Doob, Loew theatre executive. All theatres will have special staff representatives handling the tabulations, and returns of the state and Congressional elections will be announced from the Loew stages at regular intervals.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Beat That Pre-Christmas Box-Office Slump

with extremely low prices charged. In such instances the theatre profited both in revenue and good will. I really had in mind the selection of light, frothy attractions of the kind that will appeal to the kiddies and give visual rebirth to that feeling of "the coming fairyland" that, during the season, seems to crystalize in the hearts and minds of adults.

I don't like to plug anybody's product, but a glance at the list recently suggested as desirable "Children's Show" material provides an excellent example. Most of these are re-issues that can be bought at prices commensurate with the expected grosses—and you might be agreeably surprised. Go through the short subject field with a fine-tooth comb to get the kind of material that lends itself to Christmas exploitation. There is a fund of this from years gone by that will "never grow old" and will always prove a "lift" of the kind that makes people talk—and, incidentally, this is where you can inject the religious angle to best advantage.

If you build your shows carefully and engage in enough of the "public spirit" activities to get them to the attention of folks through newspaper and radio hook-ups as well as the friendly word-of-mouth of the church organizations, you'll be in the mood to really celebrate Christmas.

To my recollection the following idea was only worked once. But, that once it was a pronounced success and why it wasn't duplicated year after year has always puzzled me.

In 1930 Charles C. Perry, now handling the Downtown and Adams Theatres in Detroit, was Paramount-Publix district manager in the Rochester-Buffalo territory. Charlie had the managers of three Rochester theatres on the job early in November contacting the larger industries and employers of quantity labor to help them in the planning of Christmas parties for their employes. Yes, you guessed it, the parties were to be held at one of Perry's Rochester theatres. As I recall it the argument for participation went something like this:

Plenty of Leg Work

A theatre party guaranteed that every employe would receive a present of "equal" value and thereby eliminate any possibility of offense to anyone on grounds of "partiality" or "favoritism." That the theatre party could be arranged without taking any of the needed time of the executive personnel of the company. That a few moments would be given for an address to the company personnel from the theatre stage to allow for the mentioning of other gifts to deserving personnel or the building of company morale. That in the absence of such address an announcement would be made from the stage by theatre personnel calling the attention of the audience to the fact that the theatre was playing host to the employes of such-and-such an establishment and thereby give advertising to the company or its owners. Of final importance was the ease of discharging the obligation to the theatre which accepted a check in advance for the number of seats reserved and allowed a discount determined by the quantity purchased.

Pretty smart notion, huh? And it worked. The theatres could have been playing a return engagement of "Orphans of the Storm" and still would have done a swell business. But Perry really put on a swell show and everybody was satisfied including the New York office who banked a better-than-average week's receipts. But it took a lot of leg work to supplement the head work.

You can't expect to duplicate the success of the Rochester effort unless you

Maintenance

BUILDINGS — Maintenance I

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

With buildings, a stitch in time saves nearer ninety times nine.

The three primary principles of good building maintenance are:

1. Anticipation of Trouble.
2. Inspection for damage.
3. Immediate repair of damage.

COPINGS

Coping provides a finishing cap for the top surface of the parapet wall. It serves the double purpose of providing decorative trim and of protecting the wall structure against absorbing moisture from rain or melting snow. Moisture if absorbed would cause damaging expansion and contraction and would dissolve the soluble contents in mortar and brick.

Coping that is not water-tight does not properly protect the wall structure. The mortar joints of tile, stone or terra cotta copings, and the soldered joints of metal coping must be checked every six months and kept in a water-tight condition. Defective coping should be repaired immediately. Wall structure deterioration caused by absorbed moisture progresses very rapidly once it starts.

PARAPET WALLS

A parapet wall is that part of the wall structure which extends above the roof surface. When inspecting it, look for cracks, loose mortar and disintegrated building material. While most trouble in parapet walls comes from defective copings they also may become damaged because they have no protection from the weather on either side.

Weak parapet walls may fall under heavy load conditions caused by wind, snow or sleet, constituting a serious hazard to life and property below. Inspect them thoroughly and replace bad sections if structural weaknesses have developed. Small cracks or open mortar joints may be satisfactorily sealed with cement, mortar or a sealing compound.

Much water damage to the interior of the theatre may be caused by defects in parapet walls or their copings. Water seeping into the parapet wall may flow around the edge of the roof and into the interior of the building, rotting decking and trusses and causing expensive plaster damage.

FLASHINGS

The water tight seal between parapet wall and roof covering is provided by the flashing and counter flashing. Flashing is formed by extending each layer of roof covering up along the parapet wall. The counter flashing is a metal strip embedded in the wall above the top of the flashing and bent down over it to prevent water from seeping between the flashing and the wall. Where the flashing is equip yourself with a good, strong sales talk and then do a door-to-door job on every merchant and manufacturer in town. You'll have to be certain about staggering the parties through the week to make sure of having the reserved seats available on the given night and at the given time. You'll have to arrange for the blocking off of seats in selected sections and proper demarkation between the employes of different companies selecting the same night of their party. But the results are well worth the effort and can be used in any and all situations by substituting clubs, societies, lodges, etc. for merchants and manufacturers in towns where the commercial activities are negligible.

Builder of Good Will

Here's one that's sure fire as a builder of good will and offers prospect of immediate revenue in that it brings people to the theatre who may be intrigued by some lobby piece into opening their pocketbook. Open your house for special services all through the week before Christmas to the various churches of your community. If you can arrange for the exhibition of a couple of religious short subjects and append trailers on current or coming attractions as part of the services so much the better. An act of this kind is certain to find high favor with the men who occupy the pulpits and they get to talk to a heck of a lot of people in a year. Getting them on your side is mighty good business maneuvering.

You can even go Charlie Perry's Rochester accomplishment one better by tying in with some merchant or merchants who will give away tickets to purchasers of merchandise in specified quantities. You'll have to make a price concession and if you do, be sure to take into consideration the Federal tax on the regular admission price.

Be sure to take advantage of the lax period to make the season happy for the aged, orphans, crippled and indigent. Divide up the groups you will be able to handle during the afternoons and get rival newspapers or radio stations to undertake sponsorship and publicity to the occasion. The mention of the attraction playing is sure to reflect favorably in the cash box.

Then there's the priceless profit of personal heart happiness induced by doing something for those unable to do for themselves to consider.

It may be possible for you to get the services of a local church choir to supplement your evening program.

The merchants buying radio time might be interested in allowing the talent they use to appear on your stage in person as a sort of Christmas present from the sponsor.

There are literally dozens of smart notions that all bear high promise of making the week before Christmas anything but dull. Get at the job of ordering your holiday decorations today—before the department stores and other merchants have the stock slimmed to tag ends—and start doing something to keep the flow of customers trekking to your box-office. Maybe you will have to take a licking during the pre-holiday season, but for pete's sake you don't have to take it lying down. Get up and fight for business and make this a different Christmas.

Check the Lamps

A weekly or monthly inventory of lamps will give a clear picture of usage. If a sharp rise shows at any time, then is the time to check up. The theatre may need a power governor or it may need a new maintenance man. In any case a check on this item at regular intervals is a money saver.

The Ticket Machine

In addition to checking the motor, the mechanism and the cutting knives of ticket machines, be sure the cleaning crew are reminded to polish the top plate often enough to maintain that clean, gleaming finish.

felt, the metal counterflashing also protects it against accidental damage from shoes and tools.

Poor or damaged flashing and counter flashing result in roof leaks. These parts of the roof should receive the most critical inspections. Check flashing for breaks, ripped seams, pocket formation and loose bond to wall. Check counter flashing for rusting, broken seams, holes and loose connection to wall.

Repair all damage to flashing or counter flashing immediately. Keep roof clean to prevent damage to them.

ASPHALT ROOFS

The first or lowest layer of asphalt felt roofing is applied by nailing it to wood decking, or by cementing it to concrete decking with hot asphalt. Succeeding layers are cemented together with hot asphalt, and the top layer is treated with a heavier coating of asphalt, called the flood coat.

The first sign of failure will be the wearing off of the flood coat on top of the felt. Also this coat (if it was applied too heavily) tends to crack, exposing the felt. Cover cracked or worn areas with a new coating.

Blisters and buckles are caused by separation of the felt layers, owing to failure of the bonding asphalt. The felt involved in these blisters will quickly deteriorate and open up, forming pockets that collect dirt and water. The layers under these pockets of dirt and water soon deteriorate.

If buckles and blisters are not too numerous, slit them open, clean them out, tack the felt together, embed a new piece of felt and apply a coating of hot asphalt over the repaired area. Be sure to coat the entire patch. If buckles and blisters are very numerous, a competent roofing contractor will be needed.

TAR AND GRAVEL ROOFS

These resemble asphalt roofs except that the felt is saturated with tar when it is manufactured, the bonding cement is a tar product instead of asphalt, and the flood coat is covered evenly with a specified amount of crushed stone.

Tar melts at a lower temperature than asphalt, and runs more easily. The gravel slows down this tendency. To inspect, sweep away the loose gravel at several places and examine the condition of the flood coat. If this has dried out or deteriorated apply a new flood coat and redistribute the gravel.

TIN ROOFS

These are seldom used directly over the auditorium because of the noise produced by rain and hail. But they may be used over other parts of the structure, and most marquees have tin roofs. They are of two types of tin roofs—locked seam and standing seam. The latter can be identified by the standing or upright seams about one inch high, which run parallel to the direction of water flow. Extreme care must be taken to prevent damaging standing seams by stepping on them or by allowing anything to fall on them.

Rust is the great hazard to tin roofs. They should be properly protected by paint, renewed often enough so that rusting will not occur; it is much cheaper to prevent rust than to repair it. If rusting does take place, all affected areas must be thoroughly cleaned and scraped before protective paint is applied.

High summer roof temperatures under a tin roof can be lowered by using aluminum paint for the finishing coat.

The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.

Woman Makes Theatre a Civic Institution

Skouras Roosevelt Active In Community Life Under Miss Mildred FitzGibbons

Granted that woman's place is in the home, which is an institution, there is also room for the right kind of woman in the theatre, which is also an institution. And when that right kind of woman is patterned after the alert, progressive abilities of Mildred A. FitzGibbons, then the theatre is certain to become an influential community institution.

The Skouras Roosevelt in Broadway-Flushing, L. I., and its feminine manager are well known throughout the length and breadth of that community, with their fame extending beyond its borders. And that's because Manager FitzGibbons and her well trained staff are almost constantly active in their efforts to make the Roosevelt an integral part of Broadway-Flushing community life.

One need only visit the theatre and meet Miss FitzGibbons to realize what a dynamo she is and to marvel at the manner in which she oversees the destinies of the Roosevelt.

Was Efficiently Handled

With Vincent Trotta, art director of National Screen Service, as chairman, several members of the trade press, Long Island Star-Journal and National Board of Review served as judges at a Children's Halloween Costume Party held last Saturday at the Roosevelt. If the visiting delegation expected the usual methods of theatre operation, they were in for a pleasant surprise. For Miss FitzGibbons, herself a licensed matron, and her staff of predominantly feminine assistants, acted as hosts at a party of 1800 youngsters that was as thoroughly enjoyable as it was efficiently handled. Admittance was limited to the theatre's seating capacity, with a number of children necessarily turned away, and the program of cartoons, comedies, other shorts and a feature, as well as the opportunity to compete for prizes for the best costumes, were enough to delight the hearts of all the youngsters and remain in their memories for months to come.

Manager FitzGibbons herself acted as mistress of ceremonies during the costume parade, with movie and still cameramen on hand to record the event for later showing to the youngsters and publicity purposes. More than half of the 1800 youngsters were costumed, and the judges faced a difficult decision in choosing 30 winners from nearly a thousand contenders. But the job was done, and even though some were temporarily disappointed, they had such a swell time that their disappointment was soon forgotten.

Representatives from neighboring parents groups, including the Mothers' Club of Public School 22, Mothers' Club of St. Andrews Parochial School, Mothers' Club of St. Mary's Parochial School and Parents' Association of Public School 32, were in attendance. Ambrose P. Gardiner, vice-president and executive secretary of the Whitestone Savings and Loan Association, sponsored the show and was present to greet the children.

The Roosevelt manager explained to the visiting delegation how the children are trained to conduct themselves properly, and how their welfare is constantly guarded by the staff of matrons. The youngsters have been trained how to visit the restrooms without disturbing others in the audience; they aid in keeping the theatre clean. In short, they have learned to act like little ladies and gentlemen, and they love it.

Although she may not be the first to institute the practice, Miss FitzGibbons keeps a record of the birthdays of her juvenile moviegoers. And when their birthdays come along, they are invited to one of her Saturday matinees and given cuts of birthday cake.

But the activities of the Roosevelt manager are not confined merely to the youngsters. Earlier in the week she celebrated the 20th anniversary of the theatre not from a purely entertainment standpoint, but as a community event. Several screen, radio and stage stars came to Broadway-Flushing and received a rousing welcome from an audience that passed the 1600 mark. But the real "home town" touch was given when Manager FitzGibbons introduced from the stage officers of the newly organized Broadway-Flushing Civic Association, who initiated a drive for new members.

Organized a few weeks ago at a meeting held at the theatre, the Broadway-Flushing Civic Association is an off-shoot of the community group which worked at the theatre throughout the war, when the Roosevelt was community headquarters for bond drives and sales. During that time the volunteer group of 150 men and women worked loyally and hard to push the theatre's bond sales over the $5,000,000 mark. When war ended, it was agreed that the workers' efforts should be diverted towards helping to win the peace. Accordingly a representative group met in the office of Miss FitzGibbons, and the Broadway-Flushing Civic Association was born. Non-political, the association's purpose is the promotion of goodwill, neighborliness, mutual help and advancement towards a Greater Broadway-Flushing. Among its tentative objectives are a safety and recreation program for children; consideration of ways and means to make the community better known by distinctive neighborhood and bus signs; better housing, including garden-type apartments, and other progressive activities.

Frank Maguth, a prominent citizen, and Mrs. Dorothea E. E. Pincus, member of a high school faculty, acted as chairman and co-chairman to plan the association's part in the theatre's birthday celebration. Resident high school students formed the orchestra for the occasion.

The Roosevelt was in gala dress for the affair. Pennants and bunting adorned the marquee. Beautiful floral displays arranged by Mrs. Baier Lustgarten, neighboring florist, framed a portrait of the late President Theodore Roosevelt (loaned by the Queensboro Public Library), for whom the Roosevelt was named. Two- and three-tier birthday cakes were donated by neighborhood bakers, and a souvenir program of the theatre's opening night 20 years ago was on view together with portraits painted by two Flushing artists, Vincent and Guiseppe Trotta.

Notable Guests Introduced

The program opened with the parade of colors by two newly formed American Legion Posts from the neighborhood. Notable guests were introduced from the stage, including screen actor Roddy McDowall, distinguished Broadway actor Taylor Holmes and his daughter, Madeline Holmes, singer; Miss Eileen Henry, "Miss New York City of 1946," who received a $1000 scholarship as runner-up for the "Miss America" title, and others.

Not only was it the Roosevelt's birthday, but also that of Manager FitzGibbons, and she received many congratulations during the evening. Also, it marked the fourth anniversary of her management of the theatre—four years during which she has worked unceasingly to make the Roosevelt the favorite theatre and outstanding institution it has become to the citizens of Broadway-Flushing.

Banish Rowdyism, Paper Urges

Rowdyism in Milwaukee theatres has reached such proportions that the Journal in that city was recently moved to editorialize on the subject. Said the Journal:

"In many Milwaukee theatres youngsters in the audience at times practically take over the show house. They are noisy. They climb over adult patrons getting in and out of their seats. They throw things, sometimes casting shadows on the screen. They scatter edibles about.

"Some theatres are making reasonably successful efforts to meet this problem. Others seem merely to ignore it. In few cases has a management been able to cope with the difficulty completely.

"Isn't it about time that the theatres got together to work out ways and means? It is bad social policy to permit rowdyism to continue and to grow. It is also bad business policy to permit it to drive adult patronage away.

"If the theatre managers would discuss ways and means among themselves and with experts in the child welfare field, it seems likely that a plan of action could be worked out—to the great advantage of everybody concerned.

"Movies are excellent entertainment for young and old, if they can be seen and heard in a proper environment. It is to the interest of the industry, as well as of the public generally, that everything practical be done to insure such an environment."

Harriet Lubin Heads Century Research Dept.

Fred J. Schwartz, vice-president of Century Circuit, has named Harriet Lubin to head the theatre chain's opinion research and survey department. A graduate of C.C.N.Y., Miss Lubin has been active in the field since Pearl Harbor, spending most of her time in Washington where she shifted from the Department of Agriculture (Program Surveys Division) to the executive office of the Secretary of the Navy; where she did personnel research.

During a recent visit by a member of the Bridgeport Fire Department to a local movie house, the fireman was assured by the house manager that everything was in tip-top shape and he needed to make no inspection. After finding the aisles, cellar, exits and emergency lights O.K. the fireman said: "Now," said the inspector, "we'll take a look at the projection booth." The theatre manager smiled. "Why look at the projection booth?" he queried. "You fellows know nothing about what might be a hazard in a movie booth. That calls for a trained man with plenty of experience." The fireman and theatre man entered the booth. A projectionist was running the day's feature picture. "How's it look to you?," asked the manager after the pair left the booth. The fireman made no answer but took a book from his pocket, made a notation on one of its pages, tore it out and handed it to the manager. "When I leave," said the fireman, "read what is written on this note. Maybe it'll show you that we firemen know more than you think about projection booths." After the inspector left the manager opened the folded piece of paper. On it was written: "Rectifiers in projection booths are not to be used for clothes' lines. Tell your operator I said so." What the fireman discovered in the booth was the projectionist's shirt thrown loosely across the hot rectifier. A good way to start a theatre fire.

Jack Schwartz, owner-manager of the West End, celebrated his recent birthday by getting out and working quite a bit harder on the local Community Chest drive.

MILWAUKEE

PEERLESS THEATRE BOUGHT BY MUSICIAN; LIBRARY SHOWING EDUCATIONAL FILMS WEEKLY

The Peerless Theatre, one of the smaller show houses on Milwaukee's northside, which was sold in October, is said to have brought about $60,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed for the property. The Baker family, which was reported as being the purchaser last week, consists of Oscar W. Baker (a music teacher), his wife, Anna M., and Clifford H. Baker and his wife, Sheilah. It had been owned and operated for some time by William Heinman.

The Russian movie—"Russia on Parade"—which showed at Milwaukee's downtown legit show house—the Pabst—during the week ending Oct. 26th, was fairly well received. It was publicized as Russia's first attempt at an all-color feature, and it appealed mainly to the more seriously minded.

A new feature introduced at Milwaukee's branch public libraries, in four neighborhood branches, was the showing of films for educational purposes, without charge to the audience. Afternoon and evening performances were given on the following subjects: Machine—Master or Slave, this being for grown-ups. For children, at evening and afternoon performances, the following films were shown: Brazil's Fishing School, showing the colorful school at Marambaia, and Defense Against Invasion, being Walt Disney's picture on the war against disease through vaccination. Good crowds showed up at all performances. It is expected that the movies will be continued.

At Antigo, Wis., the Palace Theatre has been completely remodeled and redecorated, during the past five weeks. The work was done by Muir Brothers, of Wausau, Wis., who are known as specialists in theatre and church decoration. The ceiling of the outer lobby has panels of delicate light green, set in white. Where the walls join the ceiling there is decoration in raised designs, with paralleled horizontal bands of yellow, white, green and dusty rose. The inner lobby color scheme includes varied tones of green with vertical bands of darker green and silver from the floor to the ceiling. There are two new neon tube illuminated poster boards designed to use standard posters. At the grand opening of the redecorated show house the film "The Virginian" was shown.

As a result of the success of teaching by movies in the class room, the University of Wisconsin has planned a new kind of picture show—one intended for adults, being part of a "seeing is believing" system of education. In this manner, which the professors call audio-visual education, movies will illustrate and dramatize the lessons. The University now has a motion picture library of more than 6,000 films, with 1,600 titles, some of which are in stock to the extent of six or eight of each film. The subjects run from the story of David Copperfield to the atom bomb. Schools, groups and individuals can rent the educational films at prices of 50 cents to $5.00.

NEW YORK

One of the boys at the MGM exchange is quite busy these days trying to keep his money straight. It seems that getting around quite a bit he can find places where sheets, pillow cases, bath towels, and other household articles are available and being a big hearted guy, he'll buy and offer them for the same price to the sales staff that can't get out of the office like he can. But the trouble is he's going to have to get a bookkeeping system, just to be sure that he keeps up with his cash outlay.

Another film row story this week concerns the restrictions on emigration and how they have changed the complexion (and profits) of several houses. When the east side was strictly an emigrant neighborhood and subject to a quick turn over in tenants, film houses there could do a land office business and play exceptionally high rentals on westerns. Today the east side is becoming anywhere from a middle class to a tony neighborhood with tenements thrown in and the houses find their business changing, as well as the tastes of their audiences.

Paris Inspection Trip Reveals Clair Making Good Progress on RKO French Picture; 'Outlaw' Gets British Censors' OK; Louis Jackson Scores Again

By JOCK MacGREGOR

Since RKO and Pathe-Cinema are jointly producing "Silence Is Golden" in Paris, I flew to France with Phil Gersdorf, who came to Britain from Hollywood to look after RKO interests in "So Well Remembered," now in production at the Denham studios here.

MacGregor

This is the first Franco-American picture to be made with the World market in view, and it is likely to be the most expensive production ever filmed in that country.

If Britain has difficulties, France has even greater ones. But in France there is a remarkable spirit among even the lowest paid workmen and there is not the clock watching one finds in so many places.

It was good to again see Rene Clair, who had been exiled from France for some 12 years. Perhaps his greatest difficulty is that the size of the production has necessitated the use of two studios.

Clair believes he has the solution for making foreign language pictures universally understood without losing the national touch and characterization so often the case with dubbing. A narrator will be logically introduced into the story. He will be seen in the opening sequence, but for the rest only his voice will be heard.

In "Silence Is Golden," the narrator will be Maurice Chevalier who also appears as the star. Chevalier, who has been away from the American screen for a long time, will not sing in this film.

Clair has chosen some really lovely French girls for the picture and the Goldwyn Girls will have to look to their glamor. Marcelle Derrien, black haired and dark eyed is unlike any other French actress yet seen in America—I accept Phil's assurance for that. Recently she won first prize at the Paris Dramatic Academy.

My happiest memory however was the sight of Phil Gersdorf and the French publicist discussing the press campaign (neither understanding the others' language) through an intepreter. Oui! Non!

Still another American publicist, doing a big job in England is Suzanne Warner who is putting over "The Outlaw." The British have now a fair idea of Jane Russell. As Dick Richards remarked in The Sunday Pictorial, "Russell promises to become our bosom friend."

Incidentally UA groomed "The Outlaw" carefully with the result that the British Censor has given it a Universal certificate. (The other certificates are "Horrific," which forbids children seeing the film, and "Adult," which forbids children under 16 attending without an adult.)

Speaking of Censor classifications, Glasgow children recently stormed a neighborhood house showing "Frankenstein Meets the Wolf Man" which bears the H Certificate. Police had to be called.

British Film Institute is asking a Government inquiry into the Junior Cinema Clubs to put an end to the rumors suggesting that these excellent institutions are apeing "The Hitler Youth."

Recently HM, The Queen Mary visited the Gaumont State, Kilburn, a 4000 seater suburban house, on Saturday afternoons. On the first occasion she saw "Anna and the King of Siam" and second "Theirs is the Glory."

Her Majesty is a keen cinemagoer and during the war, while evacuated to the country, she had weekly shows in her house. One week I had the honor of providing the program and showed "This Happy Breed." After the screening she received me and we had a most interesting talk on the cinema.

At the preview of "Woman to Woman," the viewer next to me remarked: "you know it is getting monotonous describing each of Louis Jackson's pictures as a box-office hit."

Well it certainly has become a habit and this new offering directed by Maclean Rogers is certainly a smooth, polished offering with an exceptionally strong appeal to women. Jackson, I gather, is to open his own exchange in Canada when his product, which is widely screened throughout the Empire and Europe, gets a foothold in North America

PETERS FILLS BRAGG SPOT IN ODEON AND GENERAL; DEMAND PRICE CONTROL END

At a meeting of the board of Odeon Theatres of Canada, Ltd. and General Theatres Corp., Toronto, the vacancy due to the death of T. J. Bragg was filled by the election as a director in both companies of George W. Peters who has been an executive officer at Canadian Odeon headquarters since the circuit was launched by the late N. L. Nathanson six years ago. During the past year Peters has been company secretary. The directorate also named him to the executive committee of the Canadian Odeon Organization which deals with operating details of the chain.

The complete board of the associated companies is as follows: Hon. J. Earl Lawson, president and managing director; John Davis of London, England; Paul L. Nathanson, George H. Beeston, George W. Peters of Toronto; D. C. Coleman, president of the C.P.R., Montreal; Leonard W. Brockington of Ottawa, and J. S. Duncan, who is president of the Massey Harris Co.

Announcement was made confirming the appointment of Ed. J. Harris of Toronto as general manager of Gaumont-Kalee Limited. Toronto, Canadian distributing company representing the British theatre equipment company of similar name.

While in Toronto for several days, Paul L'Anglais, president of Quebec Productions Corp., Montreal, interviewed Walter Huston, Canadian screen and stage veteran, on a plan for the making at the company's studio, St. Hyacinthe, Que., of a screen version of "Apple of His Eye" in which the actor had just appeared at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto. Production may start late in 1947 with Huston in the starring role, it was stated.

The Canadian Picture Pioneers, of which L. M. Devaney of Toronto is president, expects to make a substantial addition to its benevolent fund for needy film-trade employees through the holding of a ball Nov. 27 at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, the ticket committee of which is headed by Oscar R. Hanson. The program will include a floor show under the direction of Jack Arthur of Famous Players. The fund, which has already reached the $10,000 mark, is administered by Charles Mavety, Ray Lewis, Oscar Hanson and George H. Beeston.

A termination of Canadian Government controls for theatres was demanded by President J. Earl Lawson of Canadian Odeon and J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., in stirring addresses at the fifth annual luncheon of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario at Toronto. Introducing the subject, Lawson asserted that wartime controls had become obsolete and, if the industry were to progress, it would do so only as a free enterprise. Speaking later, Fitzgibbons referred to the current trade entanglements in the United States and expressed agreement with Lawson on the need for abolishment of government controls. Fitzgibbons declared costs were ascending and profits were shrinking.

CLEVELAND

BUSINESS DIVES SLIGHTLY DURING WEEK; WARNERS' PLAN SPECIAL KID SHOWS

Business was slightly off last week, and none of the specialists were able to diagnose the trouble. Weather was fine generally, but the only picture that drew popular attention was "Holiday in Mexico" playing to holiday business at Loew's State where it held over a second week.

It was generally quiet along Film Row all week, too. But the specialists have found a reason for that. All of the out-of-town regular visitors were waiting to the 28th of this month to attend the testimonial dinner at the Statler Hotel in honor of Lester Zucker, who resigned as Columbia branch manager to join the J. Arthur Rank organization as special representative and Dave Miller, transferred from here to Buffalo where his district includes Buffalo, Albany and New Haven. More than 200 reservations for the dinner have been made and a record crowd is expected. Leo Gottlieb, Tony Stern, Oscar Kantor, Joe Lissauer and the other members of the committee on arrangements helped make it the biggest party of its kind ever held here.

Imperial Pictures employes from the bosses—John Urbansky, Jr. and Bernie Rubin,—right down the line shared in the cash first prize the company won in the recently concluded national sales drive on "Good Old Days," Jack Berkson, president of Equity Film Exchanges, New York, notified the boys of their good fortune. Second place in the drive was won by the Pam-O-Film exchange of Buffalo, operated by Eleanor Paradise.

Frank Masek, local National Theatre Supply Company branch manager, says that on the basis of letters from the Alexander Smith Company, he'll be lucky if he can furnish one-tenth of the carpet he now has on order from theatre owners in this area.

Heads of Parent-Teacher Association groups met last Monday with Warner officials to work out a cooperative plan to launch a Saturday morning juvenile motion picture program. J. Knox Strachan, Warner publicity director, announced the 28 titles of pictures now available for these shows which will be shown in Warner theatres of Cleveland and 13 other cities in Ohio. This is said to be the most comprehensive test of the plan in the nation and its success will be closely watched. The plan was evolved in response to parents' demand for suitable juvenile film entertainment. Now that such programs are available, Strachan told his audience that only the closest cooperation from parents and schools will insure its success.

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO RENE BRUNET; LAZARUS CENTER IN 10th BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Rene J. Brunet, veteran independent theatre operator and native of this city, died of a heart attack on Oct. 23. Brunet started in the motion picture business some 40 years ago when he established a nickelodeon in the downtown area, near Canal Street. In 1912 he built the Harlequin Theatre which he sold later to the United Theatres. More recently Brunet operated the Imperial Theatre on Hagen Avenue near Dumaine Street. He was active in war Red Cross activities and in other community work, and was a member of several carnival organizations. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Villere Brunet; two sons—Rene, Jr., and Malcolm—and one daughter, Mrs. Wallace J. Schwab.

New Mirrophonic Sound
JOE HORNSTEIN has it!

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

The Strange Woman

United Artists Drama 101 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Good dramatic entertainment for all types of audiences, but particularly attractive to women who will be fascinated by the doings of an unscrupulous, sexy woman. For the men, there is the eye-appeal of Hedy Lamarr, plus good performances by most of the cast.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should attract heavily, based on appeal of the novel and the marquee names.

Cast: Hedy Lamarr, George Sanders, Louis Hayward, Gene Lockhart, Hillary Brooke, Rhys Williams, June Storey, Moroni Olsen, Olive Blakney, Dennis Hoey, Alan Napier, Ian Keith. Credits: Directed by Edgar Ulmer. Screenplay by Herb Meadow. Based on the novel by Ben Ames Williams. Photography, Lucien Andriot. Produced by Jack Chertok. A Hunt Stromberg production.

Plot: An unscrupulous young lady plans things for her own future by marrying an older man with a great deal of money, then making love to his son. Her connivings bring about the murder of the father, by his son, the suicide of the son because of her cruelty and then marriage to the foreman of her dead husband's lumber holdings. She pays for her deeds when she accidentally brings about her own end in a jealous rage.

Comment: Based on the Ben Ames Williams novel, and with Hedy Lamarr in the title role, this picture should attract heavily and send most patrons home satisfactorily entertained. This should be especially true with the women, for to them there will be a certain amount of fascination in the incidents as they are manipulated by an unscrupulous woman who spares nothing to gain her ends. And their word-of-mouth, plus the advance sale of the book, should influence top grosses. As for the men, they too will want to see the connivings of a beautiful, sexy woman who has plenty of eye-appeal. In a role quite foreign to anything she's done to date, Miss Lamarr turns in her best performance. And she is given excellent support by Gene Lockhart, George Sanders, Louis Hayward and Hillary Brooke. Producer Hunt Stromberg and Jack Chertok have given the picture the benefit of the best in production values and Edgar Ulmer handled the directorial reins with ability.

Secret of the Whistler

Columbia Mystery 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Lives up to the expectations of impending murder and capture of the guilty one which makes for a good show and enjoyable to all who have a sharp appetite for the mystery play. It is very nicely produced, has a class touch about it, and is adequately acted by Richard Dix and his supporting cast.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will not disappoint and may even step up the average for pictures of the series as a popular attraction.

Cast: Richard Dix, Leslie Brooks, Mary Currier, Michael Duane, Mona Barrie, Ray Walker, Claire DuBrey, Charles Trowbridge, Arthur Space, Jack Davis, Barbara Wooddell. Credits: Produced by Rudolph C. Flothow. Directed by George Sherman. Screenplay by Raymond L. Shrock. Story by Richard H. Landau. Suggested by The Columbia Broadcasting System Program "The Whistler." Director of Photography, Allen Siegler.

Plot: Richard Dix is the dilettante husband of wealthy Marie Currier, whose allowance enables him to entertain a Bohemian lot at his studio. The wife is in such poor health that her introduction to you is at a place where they build monuments and she has placed an order for her own grave marker. A certain doctor, however, is very successful in treating her heart condition, and she seeks to surprise her husband by going alone and unaided to his studio. There she learns that he is having an affair with a model. She writes a will, cutting him off, and dies under mysterious circumstances that definitely involve her husband. He marries the model, and later the discovery of the dead woman's diary leads police to put the husband under arrest—but he cheats the law by suicide.

Comment: There is a pervading air of suspense throughout this picture—a good show for the mystery fans. As in other plays of this deservedly popular series, there are many unanswered questions and the fadeout finds the spectator not quite certain as to who did do the murder. Richard Dix plays the leading role with his accustomed vigor. He has excellent support, particularly from the seasoned and camera-wise Mary Currier as the ailing wife. Good performances also are registered by Leslie Brooks, Michael Duane, Mona Barrie, Ray Walker and the others. The picture is a well produced, nicely directed and generally a satisfactory mystery drama of wide appeal.

Terror Trail

Columbia Western 55 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) If they like westerns they'll go for this latest edition of the Durango Kid series—in which Charles Starrett does some of that fast riding, quick shooting and vigorous fighting.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Standard draw for the series.

Cast: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette, Barbara Pepper, Lane Chandler, Zon Murray, Elvin Eric Field, Tommy Coates, George Chesebro, Robert Barron, Bud Buster, Bill Clark, Ozie Waters and His Colorado Rangers. Credits: Produced by Colbert Clark. Directed by Ray Nazarro. Original story and screenplay by Ed. Earl Repp. Director of photography, George B. Meehan.

Plot: Lane Chandler is the smooth-talking ginmill owner who secretly heads a mean and ornery lot of bandits working the trail up through that thar gulch leading into Red Butte. They are also running a sheep-flock invasion of the ranges, much to the distaste, even revulsion, of the cattlemen, and it seems that they've sold the idea of buying a half interest in the enterprise to a gal from back East. They plan to hold up the coach and steal the lady's pocketbook. All very fine until the Durango Kid hoves into sight and takes the purse away from the bandits. That's the beginning of the end for the malefactors—because Durango goes right on to clean up the whole bunch of them. ...

Comment: This is the kind of picture that makes you make sense of the continued popularity for the western melodramas. It's no more logical as to story and incident than most all the westerns, but it has that zip of action, that elemental excitement of fundamental conflict in which black is black and white, white—and no mistaking who is the villain and who the hero. Charles Starrett gives his stirring exhibitions of hard riding on that white steed which seems to materialize and vanish so conveniently to the purposes of the Durango Kid—which is the other self of the personable, law-abiding rancher that Starrett plays in this series of dual-role heroics. The supporting cast, particularly its featured member, Smiley Burnette, and the dispensers of bits of vocal entertainment, Ozie Waters' cowboy chorus, is a good one and the production enlivened by good scenic backgrounds.

Song of the South

(Color)

RKO Drama-with-Music 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Not since "Snow-White and the Seven Dwarfs" has Disney presented a subject so entertaining and so novel. Based on the Uncle Remus folktales, it is an excellent blending of living actors and cartoon animations of Brer Rabbit, Brer Fox and Brer Bear and carries with it all the enjoyment and appeal usually sought by people of all types and ages.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With all its showmanship angles there should be little difficulty in making this picture a box-office success.

Cast: Ruth Warrick, Bobby Driscoll, James Baskett, Luana Patten, Lucile Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Eric Rolf, Glenn Leedy, Mary Field, Anita Brown, George Nokes, Gene Holland, Nicodemus Stewart, Johnny Lee. Credits: Screenplay by Dalton Reymond, Morton Grant, Maurice Rapf. Orginal story by Dalton Reymond based on the tales of Uncle Remus by Joel Chandler Harris. Cartoon story, William Peed, Ralph Wright, George Stallings. Directing Animators, Milt Kahl, Eric Larson, Ollie Johnston, Les Clark, Marc Davis, John Lounsbery. Directors, Harve Foster (photoplay); Wilfred Jackson (cartoon). Associate producer, Perce Pearce.

Plot: To help a youngster who tries to run away from home because his parents have broken up, Uncle Remus (Baskett) tells him numerous stories about Brer Rabbitt, Brer Fox and Brer Bear. Eventually the parents are reconciled and all ends happily.

Comment: Not since "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" has Walt Disney presented a subject so novel and so entertaining as this Technicolor photoplay "Song of the South." And if the signs portend correctly, it looks as though this picture will probably be received by the public with the same enthusiasm as the former record-breaker. Based on the folktales of Uncle Remus, known to most, it is a solidly blended, picturesque story of the colorful Disney-created animated cartoons—Brer Rabbit, Brer Fox and Brer Bear—fused with the drama surrounding the living characters. It marks an epochal advance in the further expansion of the screen medium of combining the two distinct types of action—the performance of living actors and

Novels, Classics Top MGM Production Plans

Outstanding contemporary novels and the classics will highlight MGM's future releasing schedules, according to production plans now under way. The company's emphasis on important literary works extends not only to straight dramatic pictures but also to musicals.

Currently before the cameras is "Green Dolphin Street," best-selling novel by Elizabeth Goudge, a Literary Guild selection and first winner of MGM's $175,000 annual novel contest. "High Barbaree," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, was recently completed. In process of editing is "The Sea of Grass," from the Conrad Richter novel. Also in production are MacKinlay Kantor's post-Civil War story, "The Romance of Rosy Ridge," and a musicalized translation of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness" to be titled "Summer Holiday." Finished and ready for release is "The Yearling," Technicolor picturization of Margaret Kinnan Rawlings' Pulitzer Prize novel.

Planned for future production are: "Before the Sun Goes Down," by Elizabeth Metzger Howard (1945 winner of the company's award); "Cass Timberlane," by Sinclair Lewis; "The Hucksters," by Frederic Wakeman; "East River," by Sholem Asch; "Chimes of Bruges," by Georges Rodenbach; "Green Mansions," by W. H. Hudson; "The Fortunes of Richard Mahony," by Henry Handel Richardson; "B.F.'s Daughter," by J. P. Marquand; "The Burning Secret," by Stefan Zweig; "If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson; "Black Oxen," by Gertrude Atherton; "Christian of the Bounty," a novel written directly for the screen by Charles Nordhoff; "Along the Mississippi," a musicalized version of the Mark Twain classic, "Huckleberry Finn"; "The Forsythe Saga," the famous six-volume collection of novels and short stories by John Galsworthy; "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel DeFoe; and "A Love Story," a music drama of the lives of Clara and Robert Schumann and Johannes Brahms, by Bernard Schubert and Mario Silva.

Peters in Wallis Film

Ralph Peters, veteran featured and character actor, has been signed to play the cafe owner in Hal Wallis' "Deadlock," from the Broadway production, "The Beggars Are Coming to Town." Other top roles already cast will be played by Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and Kristine Miller. With Byron Haskin making his directorial debut, the picture is scheduled to go into production around November 15.

E-L Signs Picker

Leonard Picker, former executive producer at Columbia, has been signed to a long-term producing contract by Eagle Lion, according to Bryan Foy, vice-president in charge of production. Picker's first assignment will be announced later.

Settlement of Hollywood Strike With Resumption of Production on Full Scale Looms as Steps Are Taken To Rule on the Disputes of the 2 Warring Factions

Signs of a "permanent" peace in the Hollywood strike appeared imminent early this week when the warring factions agreed to appoint a high-salaried arbitrator to rule on minor disputes between unions and that no work stoppage would be undertaken during the arbitration. A three-man board consisting of one delegate from each of the complaining factions and a neutral arbitrator will attempt to settle the major disputes. Producers will pay half the costs, the other half to be taken care of through contributions from all studio unions. Last week, production activity was still more or less slow, but it appeared to observers that it would be in full swing once more within a short time.

Green Light for 'Amber'

Everything is centered on "Forever Amber" once again at 20th-Century Fox. After a setback comparable to that which held up "Gone With the Wind," the picture went before the cameras October 24, with Linda Darnell playing Amber. The film is being made in Technicolor at a reputed cost of $3,500,000. George Sanders, who plays Charles II, arrived just in time for his part after an ocean voyage from England. Linda Darnell's "son" was picked after a two-months' search; seven-year-old Perry William Ward plays Little Bruce.

Marcella Napp, 20th's assistant talent chief, flew to Mexico City to cast types for Henry King, who will direct "Captain from Castile." Producer Lamar Trotti started "Mother Wore Tights," in Technicolor, with Walter Lang directing a cast headed by Betty Grable.

'Arch' Nears Completion

Enterprise is putting the finishing touches to its three million-dollar production, "Arch of Triumph," leaving one picture shooting on the lot. It is "The Other Love," to which Barbara Stanwyck's brother and sister-in-law, Bert Stevens and Caryl Lincoln, were just added. Alpine lodge sequences are being shot currently.

Yates, Jr., at Screen Guild

Herbert Yates, Jr., recently resigned treasurer of his father's Republic studios, joined James S. Burkett and Sam K. Decker in Hillcrest Productions, Inc. The company will reportedly make six films for Screen Guild release.

Eagle Lion Adds Several

Eagle Lion signed Richard Basehart, noted Broadway stage star, to a long-term contract. At the same time, Leonard Picker, former executive producer at Columbia, was given a long-termer as a producer.

Stromberg Starts Film

Hunt Stromberg started "Personal Column" for United Artists release on October 23, with Lucille Ball and George Sanders scheduled for leads. Douglas Sirk is directing the picture, which was originally supposed to be made at General Service studios. However, later plans called for a switch to the Goldwyn lot. The story pertains to the mysterious disappearance of various beautiful women.

Jules Levey used a 100-piece symphony orchestra and 300 dress extras on the Hal Roach lot for an Opera House sequence in his jazz type film, "New Orleans." Directed by Arthur Lubin, the picture stars Arturo de Cordova and Dorothy Patrick. Other UA films being produced now are Sturges' "Vendetta," Howard Hawks' "Red River" and Hal Roach's "Who Killed Doc Robin?"

Sinatra Completes Role

Frank Sinatra finished his starring role in MGM's "It Happened in Brooklyn," but director Harry Beaumont celebrated his 30th year in motion pictures by starting his directorial assignment on "Undercover Maisie." Producer George Haight put the Ann Sothern starrer before the cameras October 24, with a supporting cast including Barry Nelson, Mark Daniels and Leon Ames.

Van Heflin came over from Warners to resume his role in "Green Dolphin Street." He had left the MGM lot temporarily to do added scenes on a Joan Crawford picture at the Burbank lot. "Green Dolphin" moved outside to MGM's back lot for a month's filming of exteriors, including a set that has a quarter-mile long street representing the main thoroughfare of St. Pierre in 1840.

Actor Jim Davis, playing the villain in "Romance of Rosy Ridge," had to take time off from battling Van Johnson to battle a heavy cold that kept him from his scenes in the film. It is being made on location at Santa Cruz, Calif.

Columbia Filming Fire

Columbia, which has been a focal point of the strike, has nevertheless managed to keep its production rolling. Five films are before the cameras, including "The Guilt of Janet Ames." Jack Leonard, juke box and record favorite, recently signed to a term deal by the studio, was added to the "Guilt" cast.

Abby Berlin is set to direct the next Blondie, "Blondie's Holiday." Picture is scheduled to roll November 4.

Gladys George returned to work in "Millie's Daughter" after collapsing on the set from a recent attack of double pneumonia. In the interim, director Sidney Salkow shot around her, concentrating on scenes with Gay Nelson, Paul Campbell and Ruth Donnelly. "King of the Wild Horses," to be directed by George Archainbaud, gets the green light on November 4 after a postponement from October 31.

Bruce Cabot is supposed to finish his featured

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Leslie Fenton Set to Direct Alan Ladd in 'Saigon'; 20th-Fox to Produce Factual Story, 'The Sugar Trek'

Preston Foster was signed by Columbia to play the male lead in "King of the Wild Horses," outdoor feature to be produced by Ted Richmond and directed by George Archainbaud.

Linda Christian makes her dancing debut in MGM's "Green Dolphin Street," in the role of a Maori dancing girl. She will perform two native routines to authentic Maori chants brought to Hollywood from New Zealand. Lana Turner, Van Heflin, Donna Reed and Richard Hart head the cast, with Victor Saville directing.

Ralph Byrd, who created the original screen role of Dick Tracy, has been signed by RKO to portray the popular cartoon character in "Dick Tracy vs. The Claw," and in future films of the series. Morgan Conway, who played the title role in the last two "Tracy" films, will continue under contract to RKO, playing dramatic roles.

Bruce Bennett joins Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall in their forthcoming starrer, "Dark Passage," which will be directed by Delmer Daves and produced by Jerry Wald for Warner Bros.

Jim Bannon was cast in a top supporting role in Columbia's "They Walk Alone," Glenn Ford-Janis Carter starrer which Richard Wallace is directing.

Three songs which topped the hit parade in 1915 will be sung by Virginia O'Brien in MGM's "Merton of the Movies." They are: Oh By Jingo, I'm Sorry I Made You Cry, and All Aboard For Dixieland. Red Skelton stars in the film which Robert Alton directs with Al Lewis producing.

Alan Ladd will have the starring role in "Saigon," Paramount's story of adventure and intrigue in the Far East. Direction has been assigned to Leslie Fenton, who was signed recently to a directing contract, and P. J. Wolfson will produce.

20th-Fox will produce "The Sugar Trek," a factual story concerning the journey of seven orphan children from Missouri to Oregon in 1844, based on an idea by Darryl F. Zanuck. The parents of the children are killed by Indians and the youngsters finish the long trek alone. Sam Engel will produce the film and Louis King direct.

Veteran comedian Leo White was picked by producer William Jacobs and director David Butler to portray the character of Joe Weber of the comedy team of Weber and Fields in Warners' Technicolor film, "My Wild Irish Rose."

Enterprise has signed Hazel Brooks, former Conover model, for the role of Sybil in "Arch of Triumph," which co-stars Ingrid Bergman and Charles Boyer under the direction of Lewis Milestone. Miss Brooks will appear with Boyer and Charles Laughton in the Gestapo chamber sequences of the David Lewis production.

Richard Webb has been handed a top romantic part in RKO's "Build My Gallows High," starring Robert Mitchum and Jane Greer with Virginia Huston and Dickie Moore in supporting roles. Jacques Tourneur directs for producer Warren Duff.

Charles Hoffman has been assigned as producer of "The Unsuspected," first Michael Curtiz Productions, Inc. picture, to be made under the director's new deal with Warner Bros.

Director Archie Mayo begins screening over 300 tests of title role possibilities for Edward Small's "The Life of Rudolph Valentino."

Republic Ups Trucolor Feature Schedule to 18

Republic has increased its originally scheduled 12 Trucolor films for 1946-47 to 18, in addition to six short subjects. Roy Rogers had been scheduled to make only two Trucolor films this year, but an extra one has been added.

Having already completed two features on its Trucolor slate for this year, "That's My Gal" and "Apache Rose," the studio will put two more before the cameras within the next two months. They are "Bells of San Angelo," starring Rogers; "Along the Oregon Trail," starring Monte Hale and Adrian Booth, and "Slippy McGee," starring Donald Barry with Lou Brock as associate producer.

To Film Janney Novel

Jesse L. Lasky and Walter MacEwen announce the purchase of "The Miracle of the Bells," the new best seller by Russell Janney, as one of three films to be made by Jesse L. Lasky Productions for RKO Radio release. Production is slated for late Spring. Janney will come to Hollywood to assist with the screenplay.

Finishes Screenplay

Robert Blees has completed the screenplay of "Paid in Full," adapted from a Reader's Digest story by Dr. Frederic Loomis. The film will be produced next season by Hal Wallis for Paramount release. Ann Richards, who recently completed "The Searching Wind," will fill one of the top roles.

Even Cooper's in It

For the first time in his long and colorful career, Gary Cooper will play himself on the screen in a star specialty scene in Paramount's 37-star "Variety Girl," now in production under the direction of George Marshall.

Script by Furthman

Jules Furthman, one of Hollywood's best-known writers, has been assigned to write the screenplay on "Nightmare Alley." Based on the novel by William Lindsay Gresham, the picture will be produced by George Jessel.

Barker Option Lifted

Lex Barker's portrayal of Loretta Young's brother in "The Farmer's Daughter," has brought him an extension of his RKO Radio contract.

Vera Caspary to Adapt New Novel to Screen

Vera Caspary, whose two recent novels, "Laura" and "Bedelia" were brought to the screen, has entered into a deal with Eagle-Lion whereby she will adopt her latest unpublished story, "Out of the Blue," which Eagle-Lion has purchased.

In announcing the deal with Miss Caspary, Bryan Foy, vice-president in charge of production, also revealed that Isadore Goldsmith, European producer who filmed the author's most recent picture, "Bedelia," for the J. Arthur Rank interests, also has been signed to handle the production reins on "Out of the Blue."

Dickie Moore Recovers, Returns to Screen

Dickie Moore, long-time child star, will return to the screen after two years in the Army, supporting Robert Mitchum and Jane Greer in RKO Radio's "Build My Gallows High."

Now 21, Moore was stricken while serving in the Pacific, and was paralyzed from the waist down for almost three and one half months. He is now completely recovered, and has received his discharge from the Veterans Hospital at Sawtelle, Cal.

Trell to Do Screenplay

Max Trell has been signed by Monogram to do the final screenplay on "High Conquest," which Irving Allen will produce and direct. Trell, who recently completed an assignment at Enterprise, last week sold an original, "New Mexico," to Irving Allen. Trell also will do the screen treatment on the latter property.

5 for November Release

Five Monogram pictures will enter national release during November. Pictures and their release dates are: "Wife Wanted," Nov. 2; "Beauty and the Bandit," Nov. 9; "Silver Range," Nov. 16; "Bringing Up Father," Nov. 23 and "The Trap," Nov. 30.

One of the Daughters

Mona Freeman has been assigned by 20th Century-Fox to play one of Betty Grable's daughters in "Mother Wore Tights," the musical comedy which Walter Lang will direct. Others in the cast to date include Peggy Ann Garner, Connie Marshall, Anabel Shaw, Michael Dunne, Sara Algood and William Frawley.

Added to 'Amber'

Natalie Draper has been cast as Lady Castlemaine in "Forever Amber," which co-stars Linda Darnell, Cornel Wilde and Richard Greene. Based on Kathleen Winsor's best-selling novel, the picture will be produced by William Perlberg and directed by Otto Preminger.

Ney Signed for 'Ivy'

Richard Ney has been signed by Sam Wood and William Cameron Menzies to play the role of Olivia de Havilland's husband in Marie Belloc-Lowndes novel "Ivy," which is slated for mid-November production for Universal-International release. "Ivy" will be an Interwood Production. Sam Wood will direct and William Cameron Menzies will produce.

HOLLYWOOD

Laughton as Judge In 'Paradine Case'

Charles Laughton has been signed by David O. Selznick to play Sir Thomas Horfield, the judge, in "The Paradine Case," which Alfred Hitchcock will direct. Laughton replaces Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who withdrew from the picture because of its indefinite postponement when the current strike started several weeks ago. In the meantime Sir Cedric has been engaged by Hunt Stromberg to appear in "Personal Column," with Lucille Ball, George Sanders and Charles Coburn.

Commenting on the delay in connection with "The Paradine Case," Selznick said that production would begin as soon as the strike is settled and sets can be built. Others to appear in the film besides Laughton include Ethel Barrymore, Gregory Peck, Ann Todd and Louis Jourdan. The picture is an adaptation of the novel by Robert Hichens.

Republic Signs Fanchon As Associate Producer

Miss Fanchon, one of the founders of the Fanchon & Marco stage troupes, has been signed by Republic to a long-term contract as an associate producer. Her initial assignment will be "Books Are Lighter Than Rifles," by Thomas R. St. George, which Republic purchased for $25,000. The story, the title of which will be changed for the screen, is a romantic musical with a college background.

Fanchon's film career includes associations with Paramount and 20th Century-Fox prior to coming to Republic where she has served as dance director for the past year and a half.

Wood Signs Rogers to Term Writing Deal

Howard Emmett Rogers has been signed by Sam Wood to a writing contract for Interwood Productions, which releases its films through Universal-International.

His first chore, Wood announced, will be the preparation of the screenplay for "Purgatory Street," the novel by Roman McDougald which was purchased recently by Interwood and which will go into production immediately following "Ivy." William Cameron Menzies will direct. Sam Wood will produce.

Gordon to Direct for U-I

Michael Gordon, New York stage producer and director, has been signed to a long-term director's contract by William Goetz, Universal-International production head. Gordon's first assignment will be "Black Velvet," a mystery drama of present-day New York, to be produced by Joseph Sistrom.

Set 3rd Autry Film

"Robinhood of Texas" has been set as the third in Republic's series of Gene Autry musicals, with production to start shortly after the first of the year.

Ridgely to Republic

Republic has engaged John Ridgely, a former contract actor at Warner Bros., to appear in Gallant Man," which Frank Borzage will produce.

role in the Harry Joe Brown color production of Zane Grey's "Twin Sombreros" about November 1. The picture, to be released by Columbia, stars Randolph Scott, Barbara Britton and Dorothy Hart.

Monogram Ends '5th Ave.'

Monogram completed the lengthiest shooting schedule in its history when "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" was sent into editing. However, the studio started another picture, to keep from being totally idle. Johnny Mack Brown began "The Devil's Deputy" on the Monogram Ranch location, with Peggy Wynne playing opposite. Bonnie Jean Hartley got the second feminine lead. Barney Sarecky is in charge, with Lambert Hillyer directing and Charles Bigelow supervising.

RKO Starts Dick Tracy

Lenses began focusing October 28 on "Dick Tracy vs. the Claw," third in RKO's series based on the comic strip. Herman Schlom is producing under the executive supervision of Sid Rogell. John Rawlins is directing. Ralph Byrd has the title role, with Kay Christopher as romantic lead.

Injuries beset the RKO lot, with Robert Mitchum and two others barely escaping death in a plane accident while they were en route to a location site. Producer Warren Duff drove to the location over the week-end of "Build My Gallows High" rather than fly. Regular flights between the studio and the film troupe were set up again after being canceled. Producer-director Anatole Litvak was slightly injured on the set of "A Time to Kill," Hakim-Litvak Production, when a gun went off accidentally. The picture is being shot at Forty Acres, where three weeks of night shooting are in process.

Robert Riskin Productions finally started "Magic Town," with James Stewart, Jane Wyman, Wallace Ford and Ned Sparks. William A. Wellman directs.

Republic Rolls Again

Republic, quite inactive during past weeks, is beginning to roll again. Director Phil Ford wound up shooting on "Web of Danger," and Frank Borzage's second Republic production, "Gallant Man," was started. Roscoe Karns won the coveted role of the taxi driver who befriends Don Ameche. Originally Jimmy Dunn was set for the part. Catherine McLeod plays the feminine lead. Another Republic production which got under way was a Trucolor musical western starring Monte Hale and Adrian Booth, "Along the Oregon Trail." Lou Gray is associate producer.

Paramount Still Active

Paramount has been fortunate in the strike since its laboratory was one of the few able to maintain itself at virtual 100 per cent efficiency. "Desert Town" returned from location to continue shooting at the studio. In Technicolor, it gives Paramount two color films in the making; the other is Cecil B. DeMille's frontier yarn, "Unconquered."

"The Big Haircut," wheat-cutting action drama, moved into its third month before the lensmen. "Variety Girl" got past its initial week of real shooting, with Mary Hatcher, Olga San Juan, DeForest Kelley and Frank Ferguson heading the "story" cast; otherwise, the entire star roster of the studio will appear in the film.

PRC Shooting Two

Producers Releasing Corp. is "going to the dogs" these days—meaning that "The Return of Rin Tin Tin," starring the great dog's grandson, is back on location for two weeks of added scenes; and "The Red Stallion," in which canines appear, is still locationing at Mount Shasta. Sigmund Neufeld finishes his latest "Michael Shayne."

Assigned 'Pursued' Score

Max Steiner was assigned by Warner Bros. to prepare an original score for U.S. Pictures' "Pursued," recently completed, with Raoul Walsh directing and Milton Sperling producing.

Emma Dunn, veteran character actress, checked onto the lot for her part in the 1859 murder mystery, "The Woman in White," which stars Alexis Smith, Eleanor Parker, Sydney Greenstreet and Gig Young. Peter Godfrey directs and Henry Blanke produces. Blanke is also producing "Deep Valley."

U-I Finishes Durbin Film

Universal-International finished its Deanna Durbin starrer, "I'll Be Yours," which marked the singer's first appearance in pictures since retiring because of motherhood. This leaves one film going on the U-I lot, "The Egg and I," the filmization of Betty MacDonald's best-seller.

Kahane's New Chores Under New Contract

B. B. Kahane, for the past ten years a vice-president of Columbia, will shortly take over the supervision of all productions not personally handled by President Harry Cohn, and will also assist Cohn generally on all production matters.

Kahane, who will continue as a vice-president and general executive, has entered into a new long-term contract with Columbia. Before joining the organization in 1936, Kahane was president of RKO Radio.

Rozsa Scores 'Town'

Miklos Rozsa, Academy Award winning composer, has been signed by Hal Wallis to do the score for "Desert Town," Technicolor drama, with John Hodiak, Lizabeth Scott and Burt Lancaster, now before the cameras at Paramount.

To Do 'Samson' Script

Jesse Lasky, Jr., son of the veteran producer, and Fredric Frank will write the screenplay of Cecil DeMille's next production, "Samson and Delilah."

Joins 'Noon' Cast

Edith King will bow out of a leading role in a New York play "Dream Girl," to join the cast of Paramount's "Blaze of Noon."

A Monthly Feature Dealing with the Booking and Exploiting of Short Subjects

Los Angeles Made 'Traffic-Conscious' By Campaign on 'Traffic With Devil'

The most ambitious campaign on a short subject in the city's history was staged in Los Angeles recently for the 4-theatre premiere of MGM's fact-film, "Traffic With the Devil." So thorough was the campaign's coverage that the city was made "traffic-conscious."

Special trailers in the four theatres called attention to the playdate. This information was also contained on placards posted on city traffic signals.

"Traffic With the Devil" signs were posted on taxicabs, street cars, buses, and truck fleet members of the National Safety Council. Signs were also placed inside taxicabs for the benefit of riders. Five street displays were manned by policeman handing out announcements of the film and playdate.

Officials at Special Preview

A special preview was attended by the Mayor, Chief of Police, Administration Officials, Commissioners and 200 police on motorcycles. The subject was screened in the city rooms of Los Angeles newspapers and also in the courtroom, with traffic offenders sentenced by the judge to view it.

Wrecked automobiles were displayed in front of the four theatres, together with blowups of accidents and information about the fact-film.

From the radio angle, there were spot announcements locally and on networks, as well as two 15-minute police radio programs. In a special broadcast from one of the theatre lobbies, patrons were interviewed.

Announcements were mailed to 165,000 members of the Auto Club, and police officers announced the showing at civic clubs and meetings and public school assemblies.

From 20 to 30 per cent of the theatres' regular advertising space was utilized for the subject.

Heralds passed out by traffic policemen pointed out that "3600 Americans who left their homes this morning will end up tonight in the hospital . . . or in the morgue." A message to all drivers and pedestrians stated: "Collision reports and statistics indicate that nearly all of our so-called 'accidents' are actually caused occurrences. These causes have been found to consist of some violation or violations of our traffic rules and regulations. It is reasoned that if these causes (violations) can be removed, then the attendant results (accidents) will likewise be eliminated. We trust, therefore, that with a law enforcement program directed toward those violations which are proven causes of collisions and fatalities, we may impress the driving and walking public of their responsibilities upon the highway. Your cooperation in the future by driving and walking reasonably, courteously and lawfully will aid greatly in reducing to a minimum our high collision and fatality rate."

Feature in Collier's Bought by Paramount

"Guardian of the Angels," a Collier's magazine feature by L. L. Foreman, has been purchased by Paramount for filming as a Technicolor Musical Parade. Lou Harris will produce.

The subject is a tale of the old west when chorus lines played a circuit of saloons from town to town, with a hardboiled but handsome cowpoke along to see that the ladies were protected.

Racing Short Set

Saul Elkins, Warner Bros. short subject writer and director, is doing the script for "Race Rider," a racing subject to be produced by Gordon Hollingshead on the 1946-47 schedule.

Police Exploit Short in Houston

Working through the Houston Safety Traffic Association, Bill Johnston of Interstate's Metropolitan Theatre in the Texas city, arranged for the cooperation of the Police Department in distributing special heralds on RKO's This Is America subject, "Highway Mania." Johnston's idea was a humdinger, and the Police Department grabbed it, with traffic and motorcycle officers and officers in safety cars issuing the heralds in all minor traffic irregularities instead of a ticket. So desired were the heralds that Judge Cleo Miller of Traffic Court ordered a thousand and clipped them to receipts for fines paid by traffic offenders. Johnston also screened the short for the Traffic Safety Association, the Police Department, civic leaders, radio station managers and newspaper editors.

Copy on the heralds: "A Message to Traffic Violators from the Houston Police Department—Traffic laws have been made by the people . . . for the protection of the people . . . and are to be enforced by the Police Department with the endorsement of the people. When you violate a traffic law you are violating the will of the citizens of Houston. On the program at the Metropolitan Theatre (date) is a subject entitled 'Highway Mania.' This subject is recommended to you . . . and all other traffic violators. Obey the laws and save a life. Break the laws and pay the price."

Shorts Build Unit Programs For Juvenile Matinees and Thus Serve Worthy Purpose

That short subjects are serving a most worthy purpose is evident in the reports of cartoon shows from all sections of the country, a few of which will be found elsewhere in this section. Even if they were of little other value, the fact that most of the one- and two-reelers are utilized to build the unit shows for children's Saturday matinees constitute a thoroughly valid reason for continuing their production.

As we write these lines word reaches us that sixteen Loew's theatres in the Greater New York area will feature three-hour kiddies' programs on Election Day morning. Color cartoons will be featured in all of these programs, together with (in various situations) western features, stage shows and features recently listed in "The Children's Film Library" by Eric Johnston, MPA president.

Perhaps other theatres in other parts of the country are planning similar shows. In any event, the fact remains that millions of children in these United States are becoming the adult moviegoers of tomorrow through the special shows arranged for them. And short subjects are doing their duty in building the shows that keep the youngsters returning week after week.

When we grow up most of us are likely to forget the things that amuse and delight children. Some of us may still enjoy comics; and yet others of us may find them no longer appealing. Where comedies are concerned, there are those of us who can scarcely tolerate such characters as the Three Stooges. But the youngsters—well, we were present at a children's Saturday morning Halloween show at the Skouras Roosevelt Theatre in Flushing, L. I., last week, and we found their amused delight at the Stooges so contagious that we, too, became amused at the goings-on.

It is all very well to produce subjects for adult appeal, but at the same time let us not forget that the children, too, are moviegoers, and that subjects that appeal to their young hearts will keep them that way for the future security of the industry.

The enthusiastic cooperation of police and safety officials in publicizing the showing of MGM's fact-film, "Traffic With the Devil" in Los Angeles, and RKO Radio's This Is America subject, "Highway Mania" in Houston and Washington, proves just how important this problem of traffic accident prevention is. With the fatality lists so regular each year that the National Safety Council can pretty accurately predict how many will meet sudden death in accidents, it is only logical that law enforcement officials, eager to curb violations of traffic rules and thus prevent loss of life, should jump at the chance to help sell these shorts.

Scouts in Three Cities Aid on Warner Short

About 50 Eagle Scouts and other members of the Boy Scouts of America in Des Moines were scheduled to hold a Saturday parade on November 2 in celebration of the local showing of "Men of Tomorrow," Warner Bros. featurette about the Boy Scouts, at the Des Moines and Roosevelt theatres. The parade was to be routed through town to the Des Moines Theatre, where the Scouts were welcomed by the Mayor and other civic leaders.

As part of the activities carried out by the Boy Scouts to promote the Warner short, each member of the organization was directed to conduct a personal word-of-mouth campaign on "Men of Tomorrow."

Radio interviews and newspaper features are among other activities undertaken by the Scout organization in its campaign.

In Memphis a Boy Scout Week was arranged coincident with the local showing of the two-reeler. Jim Barnes, manager of the Warner Theatre, held a preview of the short for local and regional heads of the organization. A special pamphlet was prepared for distribution by the scouts to stress the importance of the picture.

A showmanship contest among managers of Publix Great States Theatres, with a portable Emerson radio as the first prize, has been launched by the Illinois circuit in cooperation with Warner Bros. to promote the Boy Scout subject.

Community Chest leaders, who have placed great emphasis on the boys' organization as most deserving of the community's support, are being contacted for mutual cooperation in exploiting the picture and stimulating response to annual Community Chest drives.

In Williamsport, Pa., Manager J. D. Edwards of the Park Theatre called attention to the featurette by preparing a letter, outlining the content of the short and describing the stage program he would present in connection with it, and mailed 54 individual copies of it to that many Scoutmasters in his area.

Edwards also set up a Boy Scout handicraft exhibit in the theatre lobby, prepared by a cub pack, a Troop and Ship organization, thus containing an appeal to all facets.

The stage program consisted of an important Boy Scout's Investiture with six local youngsters taking the initiation. Color guards from the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars assured attention from these organizations in their Americanization movements.

The Superintendent of Schools extended whole-hearted cooperation by announcing "Men of Tomorrow" and recommending that the principals of Williamsport's schools commend it to their student bodies.

Short Tie-Ins With Decorators' Meeting

One of the subjects on a recent program at the Majestic Theatre, Dallas, was a Paramount Unusual Occupations in which Dorothy Liebes, master weaver, was featured.

So Manager Forrest Thompson cannily used the short as a tie-in with the American Institute of Decorators conventioning then in the city. Needless to say, he snared newspaper stories and shorts customers aplenty.

Success of Cartoon Shows Is Credited to Showmanship

With cartoon shows for children extending practically from one end of the country to another, reports coming in from the field indicate that the success of these special shows is due not merely to the fact that they are presented but to the showmanship backing them.

For example, when Manager Arthur Turner of the Kansan Theatre, Parsons, Kans., held a Bugs Bunny Cartoon Circus there recently, he went about selling the program like many theatremen would exploit a top feature attraction.

Choosing three Bugs Bunny cartoons, three other shorts and a musical western for his program, Turner set out to make it pay at the box-office. He arranged for a display of real live bunnies in the lobby several days before playdate, and offered them as prizes to children who submitted the best names for them. He also arranged to give a free bag of popcorn to every child attending the cartoon show.

But that wasn't all. One week before playdate, Turner tied in with a local comic book agent for the insertion of a thousand handbills in comic books, and distributed another thousand at the theatre.

While most of his newspaper ads were directed to the youngsters, there was one of particular interest to the adults. Addressed to Mom and Dad, the message read:

"No doubt Junior and Sis have been talking a lot this week about Wabbits. And well they should, for this Saturday at 10 a.m. we are presenting on the Kansan Theatre screen our Bugs Bunny Cartoon Circus and All Fun Show. With a free sack of popcorn. All of our advertising has been directed to the kiddies—for we knew you would hear about it from them. But here is a special invitation for you to come along with them . . . the admission for you will be 39 cents and you too will receive a free sack of popcorn, and we would like to make a friendly wager that you will enjoy the show as much as they. What do you say? Come on and be a good sport, and as the psychologists would say, 'Let Your Hair Down'."

Turner planted a picture of children around the bunnies' cage in the newspaper. His campaign, all told, received wide attention, and the show was well attended.

In Harrisburg, Pa., the Rio Theatre's cartoon show was promoted by screen trailers, newspaper ads and a special lobby and street display. The management presented an All-Technicolor Show featuring 12 cartoons, a western and two feature pitcures (which should be plenty of entertainment for any one). We have before us the picture showing the crowd on hand for the opening, and take our word for it that the line, three deep, extended over a block down the street from the theatre.

School kids stormed the gates of a sell-out house when George Page ran a Friday-After-School Bugs Bunny show at Warner's Seco Theatre, Silver Springs, Md., one Friday recently. Police helped in handling the orderly but effusive youngsters, 400 of whom had to be turned away.

Page put on a special campaign including a trailer the week previous, plus newspaper stories. He sold out the 670-seat house by the day of the show. All turn-aways were told to get their tickets early for the next cartoon festival.

And out in Piedmont, Mo., A.B. Jefferis, manager of the Jefferis Theatre, fixed up a striking lobby board for his All Cartoon Show, which featured Little Lulu, Bugs Bunny, Donald Duck, Woody Woodpecker, Tom & Jerry and other cartoon favorites. No report on attendance is available, but we'll bet Jefferis had more than a houseful.

Longest Short Valance

The longest valance (over 200 feet) ever devoted to a short subject was suspended from the rim of the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre marquee recently by manager Gene Pleshette to attract attention to the world premiere of "Brooklyn, I Love You," Paramount's brevity on the Dodgers' valiant struggle for the National League baseball pennant. Pleshette also had four attractive flasher signs decorating the theatre front. In addition, flyers and heralds were distributed, and large newspaper ads served to draw record-breaking crowds to the premiere.

WB Cartoon Carnivals Now in 100 Situations

Growing popularity of the Cartoon Carnival, special Saturday morning program of animated shorts for children, has reached the point where more than 100 theatres in the Warner Bros. Circuit are now putting on these periodical performances.

The shows are given about every two months, with tickets sold in advance, and frequently the demand for seats is so great that two or three houses must be used to accommodate the juvenile turnout.

Cartoon Star Cast Set For 'Dinner At Six'

For the first time, the entire "Tom & Jerry Stock Company," consisting of every cartoon character that has ever appeared in the series, will be assembled for the new MGM Technicolor Cartoon, "Dinner at Six."

The cast will include Tom, Jerry, Butch the watchdog, Toots the glamor puss Spike the alley cat and Nibbles the baby mouse. Production has already begun under the supervision of Fred Quimby, cartoon producer.

Army Books 'Rampart'

The U. S. Army Motion Picture Service has selected and will show nationally, "Northern Rampart" starting November 9. Latest in the "This Is America" series distributed by RKO Radio, the subject deals with Alaska as a vital area in both peace and war.

THE SHOW BUILDER

Shorts Reviews

Samson, Junior (Interesting)

Univ. (1374) Person Oddity 9 mins.

A young man, eight weeks old, is strong enough to grab his dad's fingers and be lifted out of his crib. He can sit up on pop's hand and almost chin himself. Universal shows the youngster's remarkable activities and then shifts to Pittsburgh where an oil company's research laboratories raises ordinary house flies for experimental use on insecticides. In New York the camera shows how a young woman makes a living out of creating paper dolls, and in San Antonio a one-arm man is shown as one of the country's ranking midget auto racers.

Steeplechasers (Eyeworthy)

RKO (64,313) Sportscope 8 mins.

Several shorts have been made recently about the training of race horses, but this one has to do with speed jumpers, and should not be confused with the others. It starts at the Montpelier Stables in Virginia where the young horses are seen in training. Finally the film moves on to Delaware Park in Wilmington, showing an actual steeplechase, some of it in slow motion. Some of the shots are exciting, and altogether you have a nice little sports filler here.

It's a Pity to Say Goodnight (Entertaining)

Col. (8652) Community Sing 10½ mins.

With a slightly new format for the series, Baker and the Song Spinners lead audiences through various songs including the title song, I Don't Know Enough About You, Laguna, Laughing on the Outside, and Coax Me a Little Bit, all of which are nicely presented musically and vocally. Nice, light entertainment.

Rhythm and Weep (Fair)

Col. (8402) 3 Stooges 17½ mins.

The Three Stooges are about to jump off a high building because they have lost all prospects for jobs as entertainers and meet three charming girls about to do the same for the same reasons. They all meet Jack Norton, Hollywood's most famous drunk character, who agrees to back them all in his own show. Both trios go through their idea of various types of dances and think everything is going well when attendants from the booby hatch arrive to take Norton back to his paper dolls. Funny in spots, dull in others.

Army Football Champions (Excellent)

Col. (8801) Sport Reels 11 mins.

Every football fan in the country will want to see this short and will go to see it regardless of the feature if theatre managers are astute enough to let the entire populace know more than just the fact that it's playing. Army has been called the "greatest team of all time" and in this short, partly made in slow motion, and intelligently narrated by Bill Stern, some of the key plays that have Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard breaking into the open for long runs and touchdowns are graphically demonstrated both in practice and in actual games. It is one of the best expositions of how football should be played that has ever been made. It contains exploitation angles that can be a cinch for extra box-office returns if properly handled.

Miniature Box-Offices

Jimmy Neinast of the Rialto and Star theatres, Denison, Texas, celebrated Interstate's 40th Anniversary with a Back to School Cartoon Circus which he used in both theatres. Clever heralds and miniature child-size box-offices were used to sell the show, and school supplies were given as prizes. Results were gratifying in both houses.

The Soviets' Neighbor (Revealing)

20th-Fox March of Time 18 mins.

In "The Soviets' Neighbor" the March of Time poses the interesting and highly speculative question of whether or not Czechoslovakia will (or will be permitted to) maintain its traditional democratic independence. The subject brings out the political angles of the situation, emphasizing that the Communist Party, has won 114 of the 300 seats in the country's constituent assembly and then attempts to explain why the Republic has veered from its former position, pointing out that regardless of the political set-up President Benes hopes to maintain a "working alliance" with Russia without severing friendship with the Western Democracies. Interesting scenes of the country's background of culture are shown as are some gruesome ones, particularly a few sequences showing Karl Hermann Frank, Hitler's destroyer of Lidice in his hey-day, then as the people's court condemn him to death, and finally his execution by hanging. Not pleasant, but perhaps salutory. The subject is timely and offers many angles for exploitation.

So You Want to Play the Horses (Funny)

WB (3402) Varieties 10 mins.

Joe McDoakes (George O'Hanlon) is a confirmed horse player who uses every method known under the sun (and a few he dreams up as he goes along) to pick winning nags at the horse races. Even though the short is intended as a comedy it shows plenty of reasons why actual horse players ought to have their heads examined, including the fact that the corner bookie often fails to pay off when he is hit for a big winner. The comedy is good, the narration funny.

Big Snooze (Excellent)

WB (2724) Bugs Bunny 7 mins.

This time Elmer becomes frustrated at Bugs Bunny's constant supremacy, decides to quit hunting "wabbits" and go fishing, tearing up his contract with Mr. Warner. Bugs pleads with Elmer not to give up their perpetual contest but Elmer decides he'll just fish and sleep. Bugs turns his first sleep into a nightmare, however. Then Elmer decides that perhaps he has acted too hastily, pastes his contract together again and he and Bugs resume their frantic contest, in which poor Elmer is destined always to be the loser. Excellent cartoon in Technicolor.

Omaha Chamber Plugs 'Ranch in White' Short

"Ranch in White," Warner Bros. short subject filmed on the famous White Horse ranch in Nebraska, received some unusual plugging from the Omaha Chamber of Commerce in connection with the engagement of the picture at the RKO Brandeis Theatre in that city.

A bulletin was sent by the Chamber to its entire membership, calling attention to the short and its local playdate. Members of the Omaha Executives Association also advised the employees of their respective firms about the break derived by Nebraska through the showing of this picture all over the country.

Three local radio stations—KOIL, KBON and KOWH—and The Omaha World Herald also carried features on "Ranch in White," while the Associated Press and United Press gave it breaks on their "pony" wire services.

Musical Miniatures Increased to Six

Plans for increasing the number of Musical Miniatures which his studio will make from four to six each year have been announced by Walter Lantz. Enthusiasm of the New York home office of Universal-International in the initial offerings, "Poet and Peasant" and "Chopin's Musical Moments," prompted Lantz's decision, it was said.

Lantz is selecting available material for his series, which he wishes to continue as originally planned, utilizing melodic compositions familiar to everyone.

8 Warner Shorts to be Released in December

Eight Vitaphone short subjects have been set for general release by Warner Bros. in December.

Schedule includes four Technicolor cartoons titled "Goofy Gophers," "Have You Got Any Castles," "Gay Antics" and "Scent-Imental Over You"; a Joe McDoakes Comedy, "So You Think You're a Nervous Wreck"; a Melody Master Band short, "Melody of Youth"; a Sports Parade, "American Sports Album," and a Technicolor Special, "A Boy and His Dog."

200 Premieres Set For 'The Last Bomb'

"The Last Bomb," Warner Bros. featurette produced in cooperation with the U. S. Army Air Forces and scheduled for general release November 2, has been set for approximately 200 day-and-date openings that week.

Number of Technicolor prints ordered by Warners on this subject is 30 per cent more than the customary quota for shorts.

All net profits from "The Last Bomb" will be turned over to the Army Air Forces.

Von Zell Short Ends

"Meet Mr. Mischief," a two-reel comedy starring Harry Von Zell, has been completed at Columbia under the direction of Edward Bernds. Others in the cast include Rolfe Harold, Christine McIntyre, Charles Wilson, Emil Sitka, Fred Kelsey, Dudley Dickerson, Victor Potel, Chester Clute, Vernon Dent, Kathryn Keyes and Lila Dean. Bernds wrote the script and Hugh McCollum produced.

Box-Office Slants

cartoon animations—and carries with it the enjoyment and appeal usually sought by all types and ages of moviegoers. In addition, there are the exceptional and appropriate songs, among which Zip-a-Dee-Doo-Dah and How Do You Do? are certain to win strong popular favor. Proportion of living action to animation is approximately 70 per cent to 30 per cent, and James Baskett as old Uncle Remus, Bobby Driscoll and Luana Patten as the two children in the leading roles, are in most of the human sequences. Their delineations are excellent; particularly outstanding is Baskett's work, for this is his initial screen appearance; it should help to establish him among the screen's top artists. Splendid, too, are such top performers as Lucile Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Ruth Warwick and the portrayal turned in by Glenn Leedy, a nine-year-old who is Bobby's companion. Space does not permit enumeration of all the various credits associated with the making of this picture, but suffice it to say that everybody concerned deserves top praise for a job exceptionally well done.

Home in Oklahoma

Republic Western with Songs 72 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Thoroughly entertaining western in the modern manner, with action, music and the light touch.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do very well indeed in almost every type of operation.

Cast: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Dale Evans, Carol Hughes, George Meeker, Lanny Rees, Ruby Dandridge, George Lloyd, Arthur Space, Frank Reicher, George Carleton, The Flying "L" Ranch Quartette, Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers, and Trigger. Credits: Produced by Edward J. White. Directed by William Witney. Original screenplay by Gerald Geraghty. Photography, William Bradford. Musical director, Morton Scott.

Plot: Roy Rogers, editor of a local newspaper, is visited by Dale Evans, reporter from a St. Louis paper, who wants to do a feature story about the Flying T Ranch and its Hereford cattle. They both are present at the reading of Sam Talbot's will and find that the niece, Carol Hughes, has been disinherited. Roy inherits Talbot's book of hymns and finds in it a hint to the effect that Talbot was murdered, and not in an accident as had been supposed. He and Dale Evans eventually trace the murderers.

Comment: Like all Roy Rogers pictures this one has been given the benefit of a plausible story in the west of today's enormous cattle business. Republic and producer Edward J. White have given the film excellent production values. Director William Witney also shows a competent hand in the direction. The music is particularly good, with each number presented plausibly, not in the haphazard manner so usually accociated with westerns with music. The songs most likely to reach high favor with fans include, I Wish I Was a Kid Again, Home in Oklahoma and a particularly sprightly number, Miguelito. Other good numbers are Cowboy Ham and Eggs, The Everlasting Hills of Oklahoma and Hereford Heaven. Everything in the picture, except a fight between Rogers and George Meeker aboard a moving train, is good and entertaining. The other fights, however, have plenty of action—enough to satisfy the action fans.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

THE BIG HAIRCUT (Para.) Drama. Principals: Alan Ladd, Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston. Director, Tay Garnett. Plot: In this saga of the wheat harvest from Texas to Canada, the leader of a combine crew is at odds with his pleasure-seeking friend and co-worker. They meet a ruthless and ambitious girl who marries one of them although she is in love with the other. The combine crew is chased by irate farmers; there is a fight to a showdown, and the girl loses both men.

ADVENTURE ISLAND (Para.) Technicolor. Principals: Rory Calhoun, Rhonda Fleming, Paul Kelly. Director, Peter Stewart. Plot: This story deals with two beach rats who team up with a young man who is a victim of circumstances. They steal a ship and cargo, and become entangled in action aplenty on an unmapped island ruled by a mad man.

TRAPPED (Col.) Mystery. Principals: Chester Morris, Constance Dowling. Director, Robert Gordon. Plot: An unsuccessful mystery story writer, quite intoxicated, tells his publisher the plot of his new story. Thereafter, the publisher is found murdered in the same manner as the author had sketched in his story. He is freed in the custody of another writer, and the two men solve the crime.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Her Sister's Secret	.....	.....	Adults	Mature Family
Johnny Frenchman	Family*	12-14	General Patronage	.....
Nocturne	Mature	.....	Adults	.....
My Darling Clementine	Family	12-14	Adults	.....
The Years Between	Mature	.....	Adults	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

BOSTON BLACKIE AND THE LAW (Col.) Mystery. Principals: Chester Morris, Trudy Marshall. Director, D. Ross Lederman. Plot: While Blackie, an amateur magician, is entertaining the women in a prison, one of the inmates escapes. Blackie is blamed as her accomplice and taken on the search for her. They trail her to her former husband who still has the $100,000 from a robbery for which she was serving time. Then both the man and his ex-wife are found murdered, but Boston Blackie brings the dead man's former girl friend, who was after the money, to justice.

Big Show at Toledo

With the opening of the four-day convention of equipment manufacturers and dealers at Toledo on Friday, something has been done, at long last, about a need long felt in this industry. This is a national exhibit of new models of theatre equipment and the apparatus of showmanship.

Every step toward the exhibit of equipment which will be a feature of the combined meeting of the Theatre Equipment Manufacturers Association and the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association has been planned and executed with what seems to us to have been very high intelligence and fine organizing ability.

For this excellent result—and even before the opening of the equipment show we can confidently assume it will be a big success—there are many veterans of the equipment branch of the industry to whom credit is due. There's Oscar Neu, president, Bill Gedris, vice-president, and Roy Boomer, secretary, of TESMA; there's Ray Colvin, head of the dealers group, and then there's also the very able Harry Strong outfit and Harold Wendt who cooperated most effectively in helping the two organizations find a very suitable site for the first such exhibit and the facilities which have been so ably set up in Toledo for the event.

Cocktails vs. Ice Cream

We have probably attended as many film industry cocktail parties and receptions as anyone else in this Times Square sector, but it wasn't until Wednesday of this week that we ran into the most novel industry party of them all.

Instead of an excess of heavy smoke, cocktails, highballs and straight drinks, there was an abundance of ice cream sodas, sundaes, cones, balloons, profusely illustrated books, the biggest birthday cake we've ever beheld. And the two guests of honor were aged seven and eight, or thereabouts.

The occasion was a kiddie party tenered by the Walt Disney and RKO outfits in honor of Bobby Driscoll and Luana Patten—those two terrific little troupers of Disney's "Song of the South"—and to which people of the press and members of the industry were invited to bring their youngsters. (And what fun it was to watch those many attractive and well behaved children having a party!)

From here on out I heartily recommend that all future industry parties be passed by in favor of this new, novel and refreshing gathering of the youngsters. It's much more fun, and besides it's high time you again found out how a plate of ice cream, covered with plenty of goo, can taste. And if you are real good, you can take home a few balloons.

We are not sure to whom we are mostly indebted for the privilege of attending this unique function, but we know that Maggie Ettinger, Rutgers Neilson and Harry Blair were very much in evidence and to them and all the others, we make a deep curtsy and say "thank you."

An Industry Foundation

Much interest has been engendered by the recent announcement of an industry meeting to be held in New Orleans early in December to discuss the possibility of organizing a Motion Picture Industry Foundation.

There has been talk of such a move for quite a few years, but this time it appears that a really progressive group has taken the idea into hand with a definite view of giving it substance.

The entire idea is predicated upon such a sensible basis and will serve such a necessary purpose that it is almost certain a permanent organization will come out of the New Orleans meeting.

Every person in the industry, regardless of how high or low his present status and position, should welcome this great movement and give it the utmost support in every way.

It's Unanimous

First reaction of the dozen-odd theatremen whom we asked what they thought about the election results around the country, was: "We'll finally get rid of that 20 per cent admission tax."

We were hoping some one would say something about getting rid of the jurisdictional labor strike headache which to our way of thinking is a darned sight more important than the 20 per cent tax.

But, getting back to that tax, we are wondering how many theatres would pass the saving along to the customers? Remember the last tax cut.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

DECREE—The three federal statutory court judges—Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Augustus Hand, Federal District Court Judges Henry L. Goddard and Frank Bright —were free to go ahead with writing their decree this week as final papers in the anti-trust suit case were filed Wednesday.

These papers, short and sweet, were documents which would permit roadshowing. They were almost identical, calling for one road show from each defendant provided the negative costs of the picture were $3,000,000 or more. The documents differ only on minor points.

Prior to this the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America filed a supplementary brief seeking to have the court make it clear that competitive bidding did not mean auction selling and supporting arbitration, and:

(1) United Artists entered a proposed brief which, among other things, would outlaw independent and affiliated buying agents, would allow roadshowing, clearance based on the revenue requirements of picture and the selling of "character" westerns blind in groups of six with a 20 per cent cancellation clause.

(2) Universal entered a proposed decree wherein it seeks to retain the right to franchise to non-defendants, to fix blind buying cancellations at 10, instead of 20 per cent, and to set up the clearance necessary to "reap the reward it is entitled under . . . copyright."

Neither proposed brief defines competitive bidding.

RENTALS—Faced with what they say are increasing costs of 35 to 50 per cent, several companies this week were earnestly trying to raise the rentals on shorts which have been frozen now for better than a decade. Exhibitors met the attempt for the most part with resistance. The sought for advances ranged from 25 to 50 per cent and apparently did not include newsreels.

LABOR—Hollywood's studio strike, which was thought on the way to immediate settlement last week as the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes was upheld in its contention that it had the right to erect studio sets and not the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was off on another tangent this week as the Conference of Studio Unions interjected a 20 per cent wage increase demand into the situation. The peace-making Screen Actors Guild warned that new issues should not be introduced and said the arbitration strike was not really over until all had signed an arbitration pact and picked an arbitrator.

In New York the film truck drivers appeared to be leaning toward an affiliation with the American Federation of Labor after a work stoppage last week in protest over employment of an employer's relative. They didn't win their point. The drivers at present are unaffiliated.

In Chicago the IATSE-sponsored front house employes union seemed to have the green light before it and reportedly has closed agreements on its wage scale increases after there had been a period of apparently stiff management resistance during which several ushers and candy girls were fired. The union agreed not to take in managers or assistant managers. Settlement came after mysterious loss of sound happened in several Chicago houses when the screens went silent, a phenomena which is still unofficially explained.

TAXES—Forty-four legislatures are scheduled to meet early next year. Each of these is a sure thing to be looking around for new sources of revenue and amusement tax admissions are a popular form of raising money —with legislators. Almost all plan to take advantage of any reduction the federal government may grant on amusement taxes. If the Government cuts the present tax from 20 per cent to 10 per cent, observers believe that several states will immediately add a ten per cent tax of their own. In 27 states where there are no admission taxes, at least two are expected to seek a raise, with a tough fight expected in Kentucky.

Meanwhile election returns may have a bearing on the federal amusement tax. The Treasury Department is now preparing its report, contents unknown, and whether the amusement industry stands a chance of a federal tax reduction, will probably be answered in the question of whether or not it is good politics to cut admission taxes.

LITIGATION—Four separate fraud suits over film rentals were filed in federal court for the southern district of Indianapolis this week against William and Betsy Rosenthal.

United Artists was in court in New York this week because of "The Strange Woman." featuring Hedy Lamar. The film had been advertised by UA for showing in the Astor but the house refused the print and continued to play "Caesar and Cleopatra,"a J. Arthur Rank picture distributed by United Artists. United Artists is now attempting to get a court order to recover "Caesar."

Studio Peace Delayed as CSU Seeks Wage Talks

Hollywood's hope that labor peace was just around the corner grew dim this week as the Conference of Studio Unions attempted to inject a 20 per cent wage increase into a situation which up to now had been primarily concerned with settling a dispute over jurisdictions.

The situation was further complicated when the CSU suggested that approval of a proposed plan of arbitration for jurisdictional differences be left to a two-thirds vote of the Hollywood unions instead of awaiting the approval of the presidents of the national unions concerned.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, who last week won its right to erect sets on studio stages ending the cause of the current strike, refused to accede to this latter suggestion, presumably on the ground that the American Federation of Labor requires national presidents to approve plans, such as the aribtration plan now before the various labor unions.

Family Fight

In addition, the trouble between the IATSE and its local 683, consisting of processing technicians, continued. This trouble, which began when Local 683 defied IATSE orders to remain at work and decided not to cross CSU picket lines, now seems to involve a fight within the IATSE ranks, which presupposes further difficulties.

Seemingly cold to the CSU move to involve wages in what was a jurisdictional dispute between the IATSE and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was the Screen Actors Guild, which acted as peace-maker in the matter and suggested a system of arbitration which would include hiring Joseph Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor as paid arbitrator.

Invited by the CSU Carpenters to attend a meeting to explain why wage scales should be discussed, SAG replied that they did not believe any other issues should be raised "while the present jurisdictional dispute is still unsettled." This dispute, the Actors added in a formal statement, "will not be settled until (1) all local unions involved and their international presidents have approved the Motion Picture Jurisdictional Disputes Contract and (2) appointment of the Permanent Impartial Chairman has been ratified."

Another sour note is within the ranks of the IATSE, where IATSE Representative Roy Brewer, failing in his attempt to seize the headquarters of the processing laboratories Local 683, for their disobedience in the strike, has apparently declared that the striking union's members and officers are no longer in control.

Read Out of Party

Brewer, after being moderately successful in his efforts to get the laboratory men back on the job, has declared a new Local 683 to be in existence with Robert Garton, a former vice-president of the technicians, as business agent and Glen Waite, another member of Local 683, as secretary-treasurer. Brewer had urged technicians to get "new" cards, declaring that the IATSE would not recognize the cards issued by the officials who refused to cross picket lines, and to pay their dues to the new organization.

Studios were operating their processing laboratories with the men who heeded Brewer's re-

Elections Over, Showmen Hope for Tax Reductions

Exhibitors read the election returns this week with a thought, among other things, on what they might mean to theatres as far as taxes are concerned.

While every exhibitor hopes that tax cuts are in the offing, few of them actually believe that the cuts will be won without a hard fight and many can see advance signs that what might be taken off by the federal government may be clamped on by states and cities.

At present the hope is that the Treasury Department will be in favor of a 10, instead of a 20 per cent federal amusement admission tax when it submits its report, which is said to be now in preparation.

Actually most of the exhibitor tax strategy is toward getting a cut and not abolition. They realize that the tax situation of the country may not permit abolition. They realize also that unless they get something done in Washington, they will be facing a very serious situation.

During the early part of next year 44 state legislatures meet. The probability that amusements taxes are on the agenda of these state bodies is great, since stage legislators have been eyeing the motion picture industry and the reports of its profits for some time. The state legislators, faced with the prospect of having to raise more money as well as the prospect that municipalities whose charters enable them to, will certainly seek to tax amusements, may be forced into action.

There are state taxes in 27 states at present with the prospect that there may be battles in some of them to raise the rates. In fact especially difficult battles are looked for in Massachusetts and Kentucky, the latter of which already has a 10 per cent tax, reports indicate.

Exhibitor leaders, who feel that a widespread tax fight may have to be fought, have warned their membership that if they feel the necessity of increasing prices to do it now, and not to wait till a possible federal tax reduction before acting. The latter policy they argue will lead to public indignation and possible tax repercussions.

Exhibitor associations are also said to be preparing their tax fight programs.

The American Theatres Association this week said that it would seek to appear in matters of federal taxes but that it would not interfere in state tax matters unless invited to do so by the exhibitors of the state concerned.

The ATA believes that in state legislation it can best serve as a clearing house of information and thereby avoid the charge that "foreign" interests are attempting to interfere state affairs.

No Interest

Industry indifference to the Agfa color process developed in Germany may mean that opportunity for full knowledge of the system will be lost, the Department of Commerce in Washington said this week. Government investigators have brought back only a part of the research and laboratory data, the department said this week, advising that industry send its own technicians over to Germany within the next six months.

Road Cleared for Decree as Defense Files Last Papers

UA Attacks Buying Pools; 'U' Wants Franchises Kept; All Agree on Roadshows

A single sheet of paper filed by the Big Five in the New York federal statutory court Wednesday afternoon marked the last such paper to be accepted by the three judges prior to the writing of a decree for which an entire industry is waiting.

The paper pertains to roadshows and would allow each defendant the right to roadshow one picture in every 12 month period provided the negative costs are $3,000,000 and the evening adult admissions for the larger part of the seats are a minimum of $1 without including taxes.

This roadshow document followed earlier decree proposals by United Artists (which seeks to sell Westerns in blocks, to get a modified form of clearance, to outlaw buying pools, and which avoids competitive bidding) and Universal (which seeks to retain the right to franchise, to work under a modified clearance, and which also makes no mention of competitive bidding.)

Vanguard Films, appearing as a friend of the court, also filed a roadshow clause Monday. On the same day the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, also as a friend of the court, filed a supplemental brief to its original brief.

This asked the court to make certain in its decree language that it did not mean auction selling by competitive bidding and to retain arbitration in its decree.

Lack of arbitration, the MPTOA told the court, would involve the industry in continued litigation. Presence of arbitration need not restrict the Government in its decree enforcement or compel exhibitors "to use it to the exclusion of other remedies." The MPTOA urges that "the classification of arbitrable matters be as extensive as possible" and further suggested a simplified system which would not be financed by the industry and which would use as arbitrators what the Court had termed "men versed in the complexities of the industry."

The MPTOA poll of regional and unit chiefs and directors on the Big Five alternate proposal which would submit a "some run" guarantee subject to arbitration and would include arbitration in the decree as a substitute for competitive bidding, showed that it had met with approval. However, the brief continued, some had approved it merely as preferable to competitive bidding, and the MPTOA had not discarded its proposal to the Court that it

Short Subjects Seek Price Raise as Exhibitors Stand For Frozen Rents

A steady push on the part of exchanges in many areas to raise short subject rentals from the price levels which have obtained for the past decade, met steadfast opposition on the part of exhibitors, according to reports this week.

While exchange managers were silent on the price-boost subject—a silence which extended to some of the home offices in New York—it appeared that the trend of the average raise was about 25 per cent and in many instances did not include all a company's shorts, but a selected few. In the Chicago area, film buyers reported that they had been asked as much as 50 per cent more for some shorts over past rentals.

For the main part, the attempted raises did not apply to newsreels.

In New York, executives who would not be quoted said that it was obviously necessary to make a raise now. They pointed to the fact that shorts prices had remained frozen for years despite an increase in costs which lately had skyrocketed.

Walt Disney offices denied published reports that Disney planned to drop short subjects unless exhibitors were willing to pay more. A spokesman for that office said:

"There has been no indication that Disney will not continue to make shorts."

Asked about raises, he added:

"We're always trying to get more money on short subjects. We've got to try to get bigger rentals now in view of increased production costs."

Twentieth Century-Fox General Sales Manager Tom Connors said:

"We've been trying to improve our shorts rentals because of the increased costs which range from 35 to 50 per cent. . . . We have no price drive on, however."

At Paramount Short Subject Sales Manager Oscar Morgan, long an advocate of better rentals, said he preferred not to comment at the present time.

From available information it appeared that Columbia had put a 25 per cent raise on a football short and one of its "Three Stooges" comedies and was trying for a price lift along the line.

Universal had been known to seek a 25 per cent raise in the bulk of its shorts, and RKO is said to have similar ideas.

MGM was reported not to be contracting for new shorts at the moment because of print shortages growing out of the Hollywood strike.

The price rise seemed generally more of a trial than a strongly pressured effort. Exchanges for years have been facing shorts as "something that something would have to be done about."

Exhibitors however are meeting higher price requests for the most part with resistance. The midwest reported resistance to any increases with St. Louis exhibitors claiming that they had bought at the old rentals. The south reported a similar resistance. The same applied to the northwest. In the Los Angeles areas independent exhibitors there claimed there had been no changes made in their rentals.

Call N'Orleans Meet to Form Motion Picture Foundation

1 Organization, 1 Fund To Care for Film Industry's Welfare Problems Is Aim

Plans to organize a Motion Picture Foundation which would take over the welfare activities of the entire industry will be laid in New Orleans on Dec. 3-4 when leading exhibitors, exhibitor association chiefs and others interested in the movement will gather in that southern city for a two-day conference.

The Foundation, an idea which has been discussed by industry leaders at various times, at present is conceived as an organization which, according to the announcement of the meeting "will have the aim of helping the needy, the sick and the destitute from all branches" of the industry.

Several individual organizations have been doing a humanitarian job in the past but the wide spread of the industry's activities is felt by some to call for a widened spread of activity backed by a fund built up through united efforts.

"The need," the announcement says, "for such a fund has long been evident and it is only through forward thinking men in our industry that this ideal and humanitarian goal can be made into a living, warm actuality."

The move comes at a time, for example, when the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., is facing increased operating costs which have made themselves felt in every sphere of activity, and is reliably reported to have to be "doing without things" in order to continue operation. The hospital originally was planned to operate on the interest of funds raised by national drives.

Those on the organizing committee, who have issued the invitations to New Orleans, are:

Karl Hoblitzelle, Interstate Circuit; Harold Field, Pioneer Theatres; Jack Kirsh, National Allied; Eddie Silverman, Essaness Theatres; Mitchell Wolfson, Wometco Theatres; Ted Gamble, American Theatres Association; Walter Vincent, Wilmer & Vincent Corporation; Leo Wolcott, Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska; Sam Gillette, Intermountain Theatres; Herman Robbins, National Screen Service; Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures; Fred Wehrenberg, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Bill Rodgers, Loew, Inc.

Road Clear for Decree Writing

enjoin unlawful practices and "open the industry to all lawful avenues of competition."

Universal, in its proposed decree, told the Court that the Big Five practically have franchise privileges through their ownership of theatres and seeks to permit Universal to retain present franchises and make new ones with exhibitors who are not defendants in the case.

The Universal proposal would presumably allow selling pictures by block sight unseen to exhibitors with a 10 per cent cancellation privilege. (Columbia and the Government had previously agreed on 20 per cent cancellation.)

Universal would be enjoined from selling pictures to affiliated exhibitors "in which the right to exhibit one feature is conditioned upon the licensing by exhibitor of one or more features." Apparently it could condition sales to non-affiliated exhibitors.

Clearance

On clearance Universal would permit itself clearance which "is reasonably necessary to enable Universal to reap the reward to which it is entitled under copyright."

Universal also seeks the right to lease theatres for roadshowing and would have the decree subject to modification if it "failed to bring about a correction of the Sherman Act . . ." or if circumstances should make some of its clause "inappropriate, oppressive, unduly burdensome or otherwise inequitable."

United Artists in its proposal, also modified the court's opinion on clearance, and made a direct thrust at buying pools.

Where the court, in its opinion said that the defendants should be "enjoined from operating, booking or film buying through any agent who is also acting in such matters for any other exhibitor, independent or affiliated," UA would have itself enjoined:

"From licensing the exhibition of any of its motion pictures in any theatre through any agent who is also acting as licensing agent for any other exhibitor, independent or affiliated."

(In an explanation to the court, UA says: "If there is to be an injunctive provision against licensing film through buying agents, then it should be against all buying agents whether they be connected with the defendants in this case or have no connection with the defendants. If buying combines, whether affiliated or unaffiliated, are to be put out of existence by judicial decree, then the injunction should be universal in its application and not limited . . .")

On clearance UA would not concert with any group of distributors or exhibitors to fix or maintain uniform clearance systems, but would want a clearance that would protect its revenue. It further would seek the right, "separately and independently, to license exhibition of its pictures for separate runs . . . with separate clearance between runs, provided" both runs and clearance were negotiated with each exhibitor separately and independently.

The proposed decree would further allow United Artists producers the right to control sales policy and selling of each picture and to approve or disapprove each exhibition deal solicited by United Artists.

Blind-Buying Westerns

With the Hopalong Cassidy features in mind, the proposed decree would allow Westerns "where the principal character remains the same throughout the series and where the negative cost does not exceed $200,000 to be sold blind in series of six with a 20 per cent cancellation feature.

The proposed decree would also allow United Artists to insert the admission scale the exhibitor is charging at the time he signed the licensing deal, provided the contract did not specify he had to maintain that admission and provided no penalty were contained should he lower the admission.

United Artists also seeks to roadshow.

Coast Peace Delayed as CSU Seeks Wage Talks

quest to return to work, but it was acknowledged that what work was being done was accomplished by stretching manpower and hours.

The practical results of this slowdown at Technicolor became apparent in New York this week.

Twentieth Century-Fox advised all branch managers that due to the limited number of prints on "Margie" all bookings on the picture would have to be approved by the home office until the shortage ceased.

And at the Astor, showcase for both Samuel Goldwyn and David O. Selznick, a by-product of the Technicolor showdown started another feud.

Share Astor Playing Time

According to the agreement, Goldwyn and Selznick share time in the house. Goldwyn's last tenant was "The Kid from Brooklyn," but when Selznick's turn came, "Duel in the Sun" was not ready so the house booked United Artists' "Caesar and Cleopatra." When "Caesar" showed signs of failing to reach the necessary gross in order to continue, and "Duel" was still not ready, United Artists announced that Hunt Stromberg's "The Strange Woman" with Hedy Lamarr would follow, presumably as a stop-gap until "Duel" was ready.

Meanwhile, Samuel Goldwyn was ready with his black and white "The Best Years of Our Lives."

The Astor denied that "Strange Woman" was opening, reportedly rejected the print when it was delivered and continued to show "Caesar," stating that the next booking was not known.

Sees Greater Future for Shakespeare in the Films

Soaring prices for current story properties may send film producers more and more to the public domain for picture material, Miss Pat Wallace, head of the J. Arthur Rank central story department, told trade press representatives in New York last week. Miss Wallace, estimated that Rank productions are based on about 40 per cent originals, 30 per cent on current novels, 10 per cent on current plays and 20 per cent on the public domain. She anticipates a greater use of Shakespeare by film producers.

It Pays To . . .

Byron L. Speckles, who used to usher at the Austin Theatre in Dallas, now knows that it pays to be courteous. In fact, Mr. Speckles, will probably tell you it pays in a big way. Years ago Mrs. Cornelia Cooke Smith, curator of the O. Henry Museum used to come to the Austin when seeing movies. Usher Speckles would usher her to her seat in the grand manner and with that essence of courtesy which is so highly emphasized in manuals on the art. Last week Mrs. Smith died and her will bequeathed $1,000 to Spreckles in "appreciation of the courtesies he had shown her as a theatre usher."

YOU'LL SEE THIS PAINTING EVERYWHERE!

THE YEAR OF "THE YEARLING"!

Wherever film folk meet, East or West, you hear about "The Yearling." No picture in years has been so intensely anticipated. Watch for announcement of its World Premiere, which is something to look forward to! You'll see the painting above everywhere. Famed artist Douglas Crockwell has immortalized "The Yearling" on canvas. Yes, every year will be the Year of "The Yearling."

Someone New Has Been Taken

There is something new under the sun and Jersey City exhibitors have found it.

For months an attractive woman had been visiting a Journal Square Theatre almost daily, each time with a different man. A few minutes after entering she would return to the box-office, demanding the return of her admission price, which had been paid by her escort, on the grounds that she had seen the picture before.

After this happened several times, the exhibitor started to check. He checked with other exhibitors and found the same fair lady was a patron at other Journal Square houses, where she executed the same refund maneuver. Further check showed she was a young widow supporting three children and that to earn her livelihood, she would pick up men and invite them to take her to the movies.

Once inside the theatre, she would excuse herself "for a moment," slip back to the box-office and get a refund. Then she would disappear. Her take averaged $7 a day.

No Sound, No Sight; Where's Kilroy

Maybe Kilroy was there or perhaps it was two or more other guys. Anyway, managers of some 33 Chicago theatres this week were still trying to solve the mystery of the screen without sound, or why pictures in some houses appeared out of focus.

It all started last Friday (1) when 33 Chicago houses, including the B & K Chicago, United Artists, Roosevelt, Oriental, Woods and the Warner neighborhood theatres found themselves running sound films on a silent basis for periods ranging from 15 to 30 minutes.

Attempts to find the cause or causes only heightened the mystery. Nothing was wrong with the power lines. Projectionists when queried, said they were trying to find the source of the trouble. A puzzling atmosphere of confusion prevailed. Many patrons, assuming that since they paid to see talking pictures the pictures should talk, asked for their money back and got it. Others just sat through the silence and wondered, along with the managers, what was happening.

The following day some houses had periods when the pictures were out of focus.

Gene Atkinson, business agent of the projectionists' union, which is fathering a union of front house employes having a bit of trouble with management, declared the mystery puzzled him as much as the managers. One manager tried to connect the difficulties with the front house employes' strained relations with their employers.

However, Clarence Jalas, secretary-treasurer of the projectionists' union, denied any such connection or that there was sabotage in what happened. The projectionists, he declared, knew nothing of any sabotage plot. It was possible, he intimated, that old equipment was to blame for the sound breakdowns. It was also true that he had heard that theatres had released many ushers and candy salesgirls who might have been union members. But that, he sought to make it understood, had no connection with the breakdowns.

Some Competition

Exhibitors in Columbus this week were looking askance at the increasing types of opposition which faced them.

These ranged all the way from "Holiday on Ice" which took in a total of approximately $100,000 on a nine day run, to de luxe bowling alleys, one night stands by name bands such as Xavier Cugat, football games, and—dances following the "pop concerts" given by the Columbus Philharmonic orchestra.

New York Film Truck Drivers May Join AFL

Strong indications that New York film delivery truck drivers would attempt to affiliate with one of the American Federation of Labor's unions was seen this week in the wake of a brief work stoppage which lasted for over an hour on film row last week.

The stoppage occurred in protest when a relative of one of the company owners, who had been away for awhile, returned to his old job. It failed to make its point but apparently brought the question of AFL affiliation, which had been frequently discussed lately, to the fore again.

AFL affiliation would presumably give the drivers the support of shippers and other AFL employes. The present truck drivers' contract expires in January.

Command Performance Causes Casualities

London went Hollywood all the way last week as shoving, pushing mobs turned out to witness the first command performance ever ordered for a motion picture, and as first aid stations were kept busy with injured.

The performance, ordered for "Stairway to Heaven" by King George and Queen Elizabeth, was held in a blaze of light and excitement, during which over 100 persons received emergency treatment for injuries and several more had to be hospitalized. The proceeds went to charity.

$125,000 Cash Paid By Warner Clubs in '46

Cash benefits of approximately $125,000 have been paid to 3,045 members of the Warner Clubs, Inc., employe welfare unit of the Warner organization, President Stuart H. Aarons reported this week. These consist of $86,000 sick benefits, $23,000 marriage gratuities, $15,000 birth gratuities, $7,500 to indigent members, $4,200 Christmas gifts for armed service members and $14,000 for medical and emergency payments.

National Pensions On

National Theatres Amusement Company's pension plan went into effect this week, with 11 of the company's employes receiving pension checks, President Charles Skouras announced. These employes included a district manager, three theatre managers, poster artists and office employes in such National subsidiaries as Fox West Coast, Evergreen Amusement Company, Fox Intermountain and Fox Midwest. The plan is said to be the first such started in the amusement industry.

Picture People

Samuel Goldwyn is back in New York this week to attend the premiere of "The Best Years of Our Lives," and to huddle with the New York executives over the world wide distribution of the drama.

William E. Danziger has been appointed advertising and publicity director for the J. Arthur Rank division in Universal Pictures. Danziger, a former columnist, has worked with Paramount and RKO.

Louise M. Stecher, editorial secretary at PRC's Hollywood studios, said "I Do" to Malcolm C. McKenzie, projectionist at Eagle-Lion last Saturday.

PRC's Lloyd L. Lind and Arnold Stoltz are back in New York after attending that company's booker convention in Chicago. The meet was said to be the first of its kind and in line with the PRC policy of encouraging bookers to think of themselves also as salesmen.

Irving Kahn, radio manager for 20th-Fox is out on the coast to prepare for a broadcast of "The Razor's Edge" on "We The People."

Loyal Heigh has been named assistant manager of the candy sales department of Paramount Theatres Service Corp., succeeding Raymond Schosberg, resigned.

Irving Paul Lazar, executive assistant to Bryan Foy of Eagle Lion, is doing Gotham for a short time and to look over talent lined up by Benn Jacobson, eastern studio representative.

Michael Powell, British producer-director who made "Stairway to Heaven" will arrive in the United States Sunday (Nov. 10) on his way to Peru.

William K. Way this week was appointed RKO's manager for the Straits Settlement and Siam, replacing H. L. Chow who resumes his duties in the RKO office at Singapore.

Lionel Toll, former trade paper editor, has formed Principal Pictures, Inc., to produce for release through PRC. First scheduled is "Night Before Dawn," an original.

Joe Alvin, formerly with the Associated Press as Chicago bureau city editor and chief correspondent in Springfield, Ill., as well as news and special events western manager for NBC, has joined the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers as assistant to President Donald M. Nelson. Among his duties will be public relations.

There's Always Turnstiles!

Shortage of pulp is affecting mills turning out ticket paper, with the result that there will be smaller supplies of tickets for the printers, J. S. Argus, president of the Argus Ticket Company in Chicago said this week. Argus said that added to this shortage of paper, the supply of stock for tickets was being further reduced by diverting it to paper specialties.

'Goldbergs', 'Nick Carter' In Allied Film Plans

First pictures to be produced for Allied in return for guaranteed playing time by its members are planned to be based on "Nick Carter," the radio serial "The Goldbergs" and a race track film called the "Hambletonian," it was said this week in Columbus as Pete Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, announced that his unit had a substantial number of signed contracts from Ohio exhibitors to support the Allied production program.

The terms on these pictures will be based on terms which the agreeing exhibitors paid for MGM's "Maisie," Paramount's "Hold That Blonde" and United Artists' "Abilene Town." This system of figuring rentals was said to have been determined by National Allied's Board.

"If," Wood declared to exhibitors, "you played these pictures on percentage, either enter the percentage terms or use the average cost as a flat rental price."

In soliciting the support of Ohio exhibitors, it was pointed out that the original commitment was for only four pictures from program planned to consist of 12. If the full 12 are made the exhibitor will have the right to cancel eight, should he desire.

Canadian Pair Seek Vancouver Production

Despite the recent refusal of a British Company to release its Seas Island war plant at Boegin and the refusals of the British Treasury Department to transfer funds from England for the purpose, Canadian movie men have not given up the idea of starting motion picture production in Vancouver, it was said in that city this week.

David Siegel, Canadian born importer of Hollywood product says he is still seeking space to film a racio-political picture. In addition William Rowland, an independent producer here, reportedly has authorized Siegel to act for him to form a Canadian production company which would work with British National Films, Ltd. Siegel is now in Los Angeles where he reportedly is seeking capital.

Liaison in Industry Aim of SMPE Head

Establishment of a liaison between the studios as manufacturers of entertainment and those who manufacture equipment for use in the studios will be part of the program of the policy guiding him as president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers Loren L. Ryder declared in Hollywood this week.

Ryder, who is the first studio engineer to be elected president of the SMPE, will also seek closer coordination of the Society's activities with those of the Academy Research Council.

Cleveland Vendors Raise Candy Prices

At least one Cleveland candy company serving theatres in that city raised prices last week when the Berlo Company advanced the five cent items one cent and the 10 cent items, two cents. Showmen considered it was too early to decide whether the increase had any effect on sales.

Gruenberg Named Head Of Ned Depinet Drive

Rocky Mountain District Manager Len Gruenberg has been appointed 1947 Captain for the Ned Depinet Drive which opens on Dec. 20 and runs for a 20 week period ending May 8, Bob Mochrie, vice-president and general sales manager announced in New York Tuesday.

The first rallies for the drive will be staged late in November and the field squad will start its tour on Nov. 25 with initial meetings scheduled for the western exchanges. Harry Gittleson, assistant to Western Division RKO's Walter Branson and Frank Drumm, assistant to Eastern Division Sales Manager Nat Levy, will assist Gittleson.

Republic Signs 4 Major Circuits in South, West

Republic this week closed product deals with four major circuits in the south-southwest, Executive Vice-President and General Sales Manager James R. Grainger announced upon his return to New York after visits to the New Orleans, Dallas and Chicago branches.

Grainger himself negotiated deals with Paramount-Richards and Interstate Circuit of Texas, while Vice-President and Assistant General Sales Manager closed with Wilby-Kincey in Charlotte and Southwest District Manager N. J. Colquhoun signed Griffith Oklahoma and Texas theatres.

Columbus Houses Raise Night Prices 5 Cents

Columbus, Ohio's, first runs increased their weekday admission at night five cents, bringing the total up to the Saturday and Sunday rate of 65 cents. This is the first increase in more than a year and will not be carried to the Saturday and Sunday rates. Neighborhood houses, which raised prices five cents last spring, have announced no plans for a raise at this time.

Rules Against Goldman In 69th Street Case

William Goldman, owner of a number of independent motion picture theatres in the Philadelphia area, this week had lost a court decision which will deprive him of the 68th Street Theatre and its buildings, located in suburban Philadelphia.

According to a ruling made by Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick, Goldman, who is president of William Goldman Theatres, Inc., must surrender title to the property to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blum, also of Philadelphia.

Goldman bought the property on Jan. 8 for $678,500, but the court upheld the Blums' contention that they had a prior right to purchase the theatre together with its apartments and stores, from the estate of the late Patrick J. Lawler. The Blums claimed that the Lawler estate had agreed to sell to them for $603,500 but broke the agreement when Goldman offered $75,000 more.

They further charged that Goldman bought the property solely to bring pressure against Warner Bros., with whom Goldman has been at odds. Goldman's dispute with Warners arose from his charge that the theatre chain and motion picture companies had conspired to prevent him from getting feature films for first-run theatres in competition with the Stanley-Warner houses.

Judge Kirkpatrick directed that judgment be entered for the Blums but did not specify the amount of damages Goldman would pay. The Blums asked for $100,000.

Loew's Sets Latin American Expansion

Expansion of Loew's International holdings in the Latin American field through construction of four theatres and remodeling of three more recently acquired was announced in New York this week by First Vice-President Morton A. Spring.

Construction of houses in Valparaiso, Chile; Recife, Brazil; Rosario and Buenos Aires, Argentina. Those to be remodeled are at Barraquilla, Colombia; and two in Bogota, Colombia.

Called for Conferences

Ben Katz, Universal-International midwest publicity and exploitation representative, has been called to New York from his headquarters in Chicago, by Maurice A. Bergman, Universal eastern advertising and publicity head, for a series of conferences on the company's product to be released during the next three months, including "Swell Guy," "Wicked Lady," "Smash Up," "Stairway to Heaven" and "Magnificent Doll."

3 Midwest Houses in Fraud Suit

Four separate suits charging fraud in connection with returns against percentage pictures were filed by 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, Universal and Loew's (MGM) Tuesday in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana at Indianapolis against William Rosenthal and Betsy Rosenthal, who operate three theatres.

Each complaint asserts a conspiracy to furnish false grosses to get lower rental or to procure lower terms on future licenses. Ordinary and punitive damages are asked.

The Rosenthals operate the Indianapolis Irving, the Danville Royal and the St. Mathews, Ky., Vogue.

'Margie' Reno Premiere Gets Top Exploitation

Nevada's Governor Vail Pitman, the Reno Chamber of Commerce and a committee of prominent Reno citizens gave unstinted cooperation to 20th Century-Fox's exploiteers in the western premiere of "Margie" at the Majestic Theatre. A street parade, personal appearances of two of the film's featured players and a dinner given by the Chamber of Commerce and the president of the University of Nevada, were highlights of the campaign. Reno was chosen for the western premiere because most of the picture was filmed there and on the University campus.

Glenn Langan and Barbara Lawrence, featured in "Margie," arrived in Reno on opening day and took part in the parade through the city's gaily decorated downtown business district. The parade, led by the University of Nevada's band, ended at the Majestic Theatre, followed immediately by the premiere at which the two players made their appearances. The Chamber of Commerce dinner followed the premiere.

A window decorating contest was sponsored by the Retail Merchants Association with at least 25 leading stores devoting their display space to the picture. Radio station KATO also cooperated with spot announcements about "Margie" several days in advance.

The day after the Reno premiere the 20th-Fox players journeyed to Carson City to appear at the annual Admission Day parade, at the request of the Governor and the Nevada Booster Committee. The film, incidentally, opened in Carson City the same day.

'Nocturne' Ad Media Echo Mystery Theme

Full page "mystery theme" ads in second-cover position on RKO Radio's "Nocturne" will appear in the Thrilling Fiction Group which includes such publications as Everyday Astrology, Popular Crossword Puzzles, Exciting Sports and Popular Love in addition to other detective, mystery and men's magazines such as Shadow, True Detective, Inside Detective and Official Detective.

Reasoning that readers of these magazines would be attracted by the murder mystery theme of the George Raft feature, a large portion of the budget was allocated to them.

Life, Look, Saturday Evening Post and other leading national magazines also will carry full-page ads on "Nocturne" which will also be featured in Sunday newspaper comic sections. S. Barrett McCormick, director of advertising and publicity who prepared the schedule, states that circulation will exceed 54 million.

Contest for 'Three Girls'

Radio contests on "Three Little Girls in Blue" were set by Manager Lou Cohen of Loew's Poli and his assistant Sam Horowitz on several Hartford stations by which recordings from the film were played with listeners asked to guess the titles. Guest tickets went to winners. Man-in-the-Street broadcasts also featured the picture.—HFD.

Small Town Promotion

Showmanship is just as important in the small towns as in the big cities, reasoned Manager Forrest E. Carmichael of the Grand Theatre, Ellsworth, Me. So when he played MGM's "Boys' Ranch" he went to work to get merchant cooperation. And he did. The result was a cooperative ad in the American, local newspaper, with 15 merchants sharing costs. Besides the theatre and merchant ads, page also included a publicity story about the picture. James H. Moore, assistant manager, aided in the promotion.

60 Theatres in Area Premiere of 'Kenny'

A gala area premiere for RKO's "Sister Kenny" was held last week in Minneapolis and St. Paul, with Sister Elizabeth Kenny appearing in person at the two principal openings.

Over 60 theatres participated in the area premiere, which was arranged by Terry Turner, exploitation manager under S. Barret McCormick. Also State, Eau Claire; Beacon, Superior; Bay, Ashland; Rivoli, La Crosse Falls, Chippewa Falls; Orpheum, Rice Lake, all Wisconsin.

Ads on 'Best Years' Have New Approach

A new approach in national advertising is the unusual style of layout conceived by RKO Radio's advertising department for Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives."

A two-page layout was prepared consisting of a half-page ad on each of the two facing pages, with editorial matter between. The editorial matter was styled along the typographical design of the particular magazine in which the ad appears.

The ads have already apeared in several national magazines and are scheduled again for November 15, The schedule so far outlined embraces a gross circulation of 102,741,130 copies.

Plans Set for Atlanta Premiere of Disney Film

Atlanta, Ga., home of the original "Uncle Remus" as conceived by Joel Chandler Harris, will be the setting for the world premiere of Walt Disney's "Song of the South," based on the legendary figure and his tales of Brer Rabbit. With the event scheduled to take place November 12, a staff of RKO Radio exploitation men have been in Atlanta for weeks making advance preparations.

Walt Disney and leading officials from his organization, as well as prominent RKO executives, will attend. The latter contingent will be headed by Ned E. Depinet, RKO executive vice-president, and will include Robert Mochrie, RKO vice-president and general sales manager; Nat Levy, eastern division sales manager; Sol Schwartz, vice-president of RKO Theatres, and Harold Mirisch, chief film buyer and booker for RKO Theatres, besides Terry Turner, RKO exploitation manager under S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity. Disney executives will include William Levy, general sales manager; Leo Samuels, foreign sales manager; Charles Levy, eastern publicity director, and Vern Caldwell and Joseph Reddy, representing the Disney studio publicity staff.

News editors from 35 leading southern newspapers will be on hand for the premiere which will be preceded by a mammoth street parade on Armistice Day, with Admiral Arthur Woodard as Marshal of the Day, assisted by his aide, Captain Thomas Briggs. The Army, Navy, Air Corps, American Legion and other military and veterans' organizations will participate with planes, floats, bands, airborne battalions, artillery, Georgia State Guards, units from the county high schools, colleges and ROTC units. City officials and leading military personnel will be prominent in the proceedings. Streets in the line of march will be decorated. The parade will be followed by a special radio forum, as well as an elaborate press reception with Disney as host.

Among the unusual features of the campaign was the bringing on a crew of Walt Disney voices and animators from Hollywood who set up a miniature studio which was visited in relays by groups of school children. Local promotions created by Harry Reiners, RKO exploiteer and his staff, include window displays and cooperative newspaper ads plus extensive publicity by means of both press and radio. As a further tribute to Disney, the Atlanta Junior League is holding a large fashion show and dance to romote the picture, with proceeds from the opening going to local charity. The entire seating capacity of the Fox Theatre (4600) has been sold out well in advance of the premiere.

Radio Program Set On 'The Razor's Edge'

A behind-the-scenes story of how Darryl Zanuck's "The Razor's Edge" was filmed will be featured on the full 30-minute period of "We, the People" on November 10. The program will be broadcast over the nationwide network of the Columbia Broadcasting System from 10:30 to 11 p.m., E.S.T.

In the news—on the air—in trade talk—in showmen's plans . . . every minute 'til Christmas, there'll be

Nothing but "BLUE SKIES" from now on

PARAMOUNT brings you IRVING BERLIN, In Person —to take you on a personally conducted tour of the sky-high marquee values in the biggest musical this company has ever made . . .

"'BLUE SKIES' HAS SOME OF MY BEST SONGS. CERTAINLY NONE IN MY CATALOGUE CAN TOP 'A PRETTY GIRL IS LIKE A MELODY,' 'WHITE CHRISTMAS,' 'HEAT WAVE' or 'HOW DEEP IS THE OCEAN'!"

Right, Mr. Berlin! In fact, there are 32 of your wonderful songs—7 of them in big-scale production numbers. And 3 of them brand new—including the current Hit Parade favorite, "You Keep Coming Back Like A Song"!

"BING CROSBY SINGS 16 OF MY SONGS IN 'BLUE SKIES' DON'T TAKE MY WORD FOR IT—ASK ANY SONG WRITER; NO ONE CAN BRING TO A SONG WHAT HE DOES!"

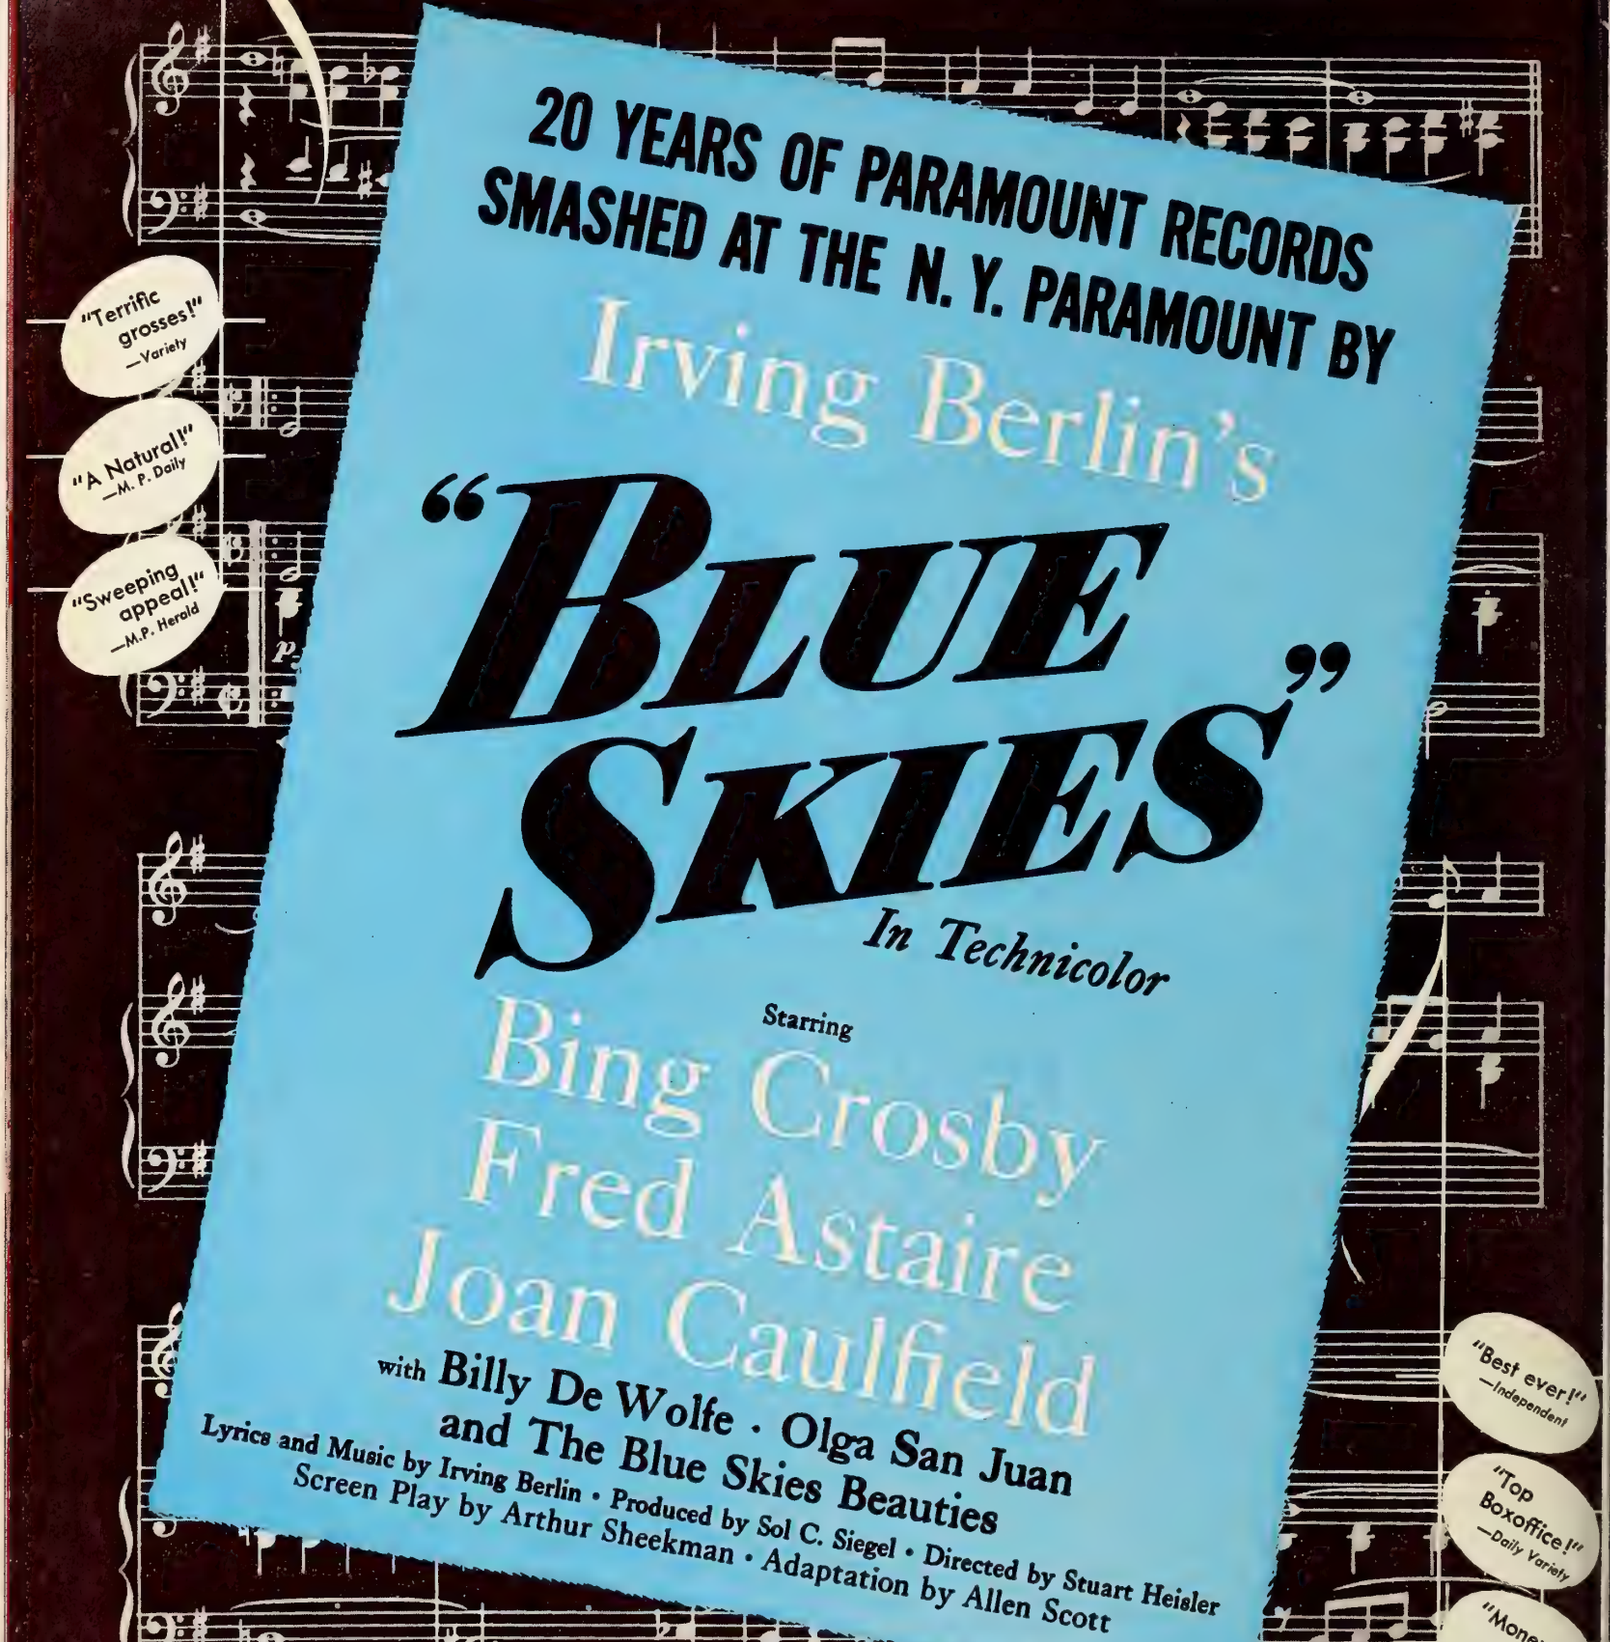
Yes, sir—and every one of the 16 times Bing sings, it's all in Technicolor and all terrific . . . a record treat for Bing's fans! And there'll be another treat for them too, when they see Bing dance!

"FRED ASTAIRE HAS DANCED TO MY MUSIC IN OTHER HIT PICTURES—BUT NEVER, IN MY OPINION, HAS HE BEEN AS WONDERFUL AS IN 'BLUE SKIES'!"

Mr. Berlin, millions will agree—especially when they see the amazing "Puttin' On the Ritz" Multiple Tap which Life raves about. It's Fred's greatest dancing—in his farewell dancing role on the screen!

"I WROTE 'A PRETTY GIRL IS LIKE A MELODY' IN 1919. IF JOAN CAULFIELD HAD BEEN ACTING THEN, THE WORLD WOULD HAVE SUNG IT TO HER. YOU'LL SEE HOW BEAUTIFUL SHE IS IN 'BLUE SKIES'."

May we add a word, Mr. Berlin? Joan's lovelier than lovely in Technicolor—singing and dancing in a romance-filled script. Successive leads with two top Paramount stars—Hope and now Bing—give her big marquee importance!



"IN 'BLUE SKIES,' BILLY DE WOLFE IS ONE OF THE BEST COMEDIANS I'VE EVER SEEN. I HOPE I'M LUCKY ENOUGH TO HAVE HIM IN THE NEXT PICTURE I DO!"

And all the critics call him tops, Mr. Berlin! "He's a knock-out!" says Film Daily. "A talented new joker!" raves Life. "Will roll audiences in the aisles!" predicts Showmen's Trade Review. Smart showmen will put his name right up in lights!

"OF THE NEW-COMERS, NO ONE I'VE SEEN SHOWS AS MUCH PROMISE AS OLGA SAN JUAN. SHE'S SWELL IN 'BLUE SKIES' "

Mr. Berlin, Olga's as sultry as your wonderful "Heat Wave" song! She's a sensation as Astaire's latest—and last—screen dancing partner! And there are hundreds of Blue Skies Beauties with them in this torrid, rhythmic Caribbean number!

PARAMOUNT'S BIGGEST SEASON has started... with the 2 Biggest Hits on Broadway—"Blue Skies" at the Paramount—"Two Years Before the Mast" at the Rivoli!

Theatres Under Friedl Set to Lick December

Minnesota Amusement Co. Presents Detailed Plans To K.O. Yuletide Bugaboo

The problem of thousands of theatremen around this time of year is how to combat that pre-Christmas slump. Determined that "this year we will lick December," John J. Friedl, head of the Minnesota Amusement Company, has sent a comprehensive manual of plans for that purpose to all managers of the circuit. At the June convention of the company, Friedl asked full cooperation in preventing the pre-Christmas bugaboo. Plans were discussed weekly, some added and some eliminated, until at last (the middle of October, to be specific) all the suggestions were compiled and printed as a showman's manual..

Perhaps the most important, or at least most impressive of the several plans contained in the manual, which was prepared under the editorship of Charles Winchell, has to do with a tieup between Minneapolis' Radio City Theatre and the Daily Times, which has been in process of formulation since last July. It is a Christmas Caroling Contest directed toward Girl Scout and Camp Fire Girl organizations in particular but open to any group of girls seven years of age or older.

The Daily Times broke a full-page announcement about its co-sponsorship of the event, which is now reaching proportions of a civic landslide! The conservative newspaper went all the way when it headed its full page, "We Proudly Announce the Daily Times-Radio City Christmas Caroling Contest." (See illustration).

The idea has caught on in Minneapolis, with educators expressing vehement approval, music teachers volunteering as enthusiastic judges and several merchants vieing for the privilege of broadcasting the public performances at the theatre at their own expense!

The newspaper is behind the contest 100 per cent, even to the extent of assigning a feature writer exclusively to maintain public interest at fever heat.

Another plan, designed especially for the circuit's B theatres, has to do with a Friday and Saturday cartoon carnival. The manual gives details of experiments with a two-hour program of sorts at its State Theatre, Watertown, in bitter cold weather. Results were excellent but it might have been a one-time shot. Then, last Spring the idea was repeated at the State Theatre, Fargo, two days in mid-week, and officials found out that more adults than kids attended. Just recently, to make sure, they tried it again at the Paramount, Grand Forks, on a Friday-Saturday booking and results were so good that nobody is in doubt! Details of the experimental bookings are set forth in the manual to prove it can be done. Then the announcement states that all B theatres will have a Friday-Saturday show, containing about nine cartoons, two or three good seasonal shorts and a newsreel during December as part of the circuit's "Lick December" campaign.

Other plans are explained in considerable detail, and then the manual devotes some pages to what it calls "Circuit-Wide Suggestions." These suggestions, in many instances, can and should be duplicated by other theatremen:

Friday, December 13th . . . Spook shows? Horror Shows? Consult your tickler file on gags for this date . . . talk to the Booking Department for special pictures!

Karl Lindstaedt has demonstrated that a Christmas Eve Midnight show can be successful! Austin turns out every year for this event at the Paramount Theatre. Why can't you stage a similar idea?

This is a reproduction of the full-page display in which the Minneapolis Daily Times announced its co-sponsorship of a Christmas Caroling Contest with Minnesota Amusements' Radio City Theatre. Just in case no magnifying glass is at hand, details of the sing-fest state that any group of girls, may enter the contest; gives dates when finals will be held and reveals plans for three classes of competition, ranging in age from 7 to 9 years, from 10 through 14 and for girls 15 years and older. The city was to be divided into four districts, as shown on the map (lower left), with preliminaries to be held in each age group in each district, with the 15-year-old group to be a city-wide proposition. It also states that the $500 in prizes will be divided among the five groups as follows: a first prize of $25 and a 2nd prize of $15 to the winners in each class in the five districts and $50 as grand prize to the final winners. The winner also will receive a trophy, and money prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will go to others.

GOODWILL ACTIVITIES

Hold special Kiddie Matinees, admission to be by canned goods. Canned goods to be given to Salvation Army or other relief agencies.

Hold special Kiddie Matinees, admission to be by a usable toy. Arrangements to be made with manual training department of local high school, firemen, policemen, etc., to repair and paint toys where necessary. Toys to be distributed via Salvation Army or other relief agencies.

Free matinees for orphanages.

Free matinee for kids December 24th morning to be identified as 10th, 11th, etc., Annual Free Kiddie Show if this is a regular annual event at your theatre.

Free theatre tickets for the best exterior Christmas home decorations. Tie-ups have been effected with local newspaper and power light company.

Something for the G.I. Let's show them we haven't forgotten the service they rendered. Possibly permit persons wearing a service discharge pin to enter free upon payment of tax on one or two nights immediately preceding Christmas. From a selfish standpoint, most of these men would probably bring in one or more paying admissions. Consider experimenting with this in at least one or a few towns, and, if it is successful, possibly make it an annual event.

Check parcels for patrons. Publicize in newspapers in cooperation with merchants on campaign to encourage early Christmas shopping.

Many theatres throughout the country had tie-ups with local post offices and department stores for free package wrapping booths in the theatres. Many of the post office trucks carrried banners reading "Shop Early," and made reference to the special package wrapping booth in the theatre. Wrappers were frequently furnished by the post office and wrapping supplies were donated by the department stores.

A number of theatres reported that they were able to make tie-ups with wholesale grocery companies or coffee and tea companies, whereby donated coffee or tea and wafers were furnished to tired shoppers.

GIVEAWAYS

Worthwhile donated gifts to be given away on certain nights before Christmas. Cooperating merchants to distribute special coupons for every dollar's worth of merchandise purchased. Donating merchants to be given full credit on screen and elsewhere.

Turkey giveaways to adults.

SPONSORED PRE-CHRISTMAS SHOWS

A number of theatres throughout the country report considerable success in having "Sponsored" kiddie matinee or morning shows.

In certain situations, large local concerns have been sold the idea of putting on a special show for the children of their employes or shows for entire families of company employes, the employer distributing candy, inexpensive toys, etc. The selling point is that for an average cost of 20 cents or 25 cents a person, the employer can play Santa Claus to his employes families.

Some theatres were able to make arrangements with big department stores to have their toy department either sponsor a special show for kiddies—the department store paying a flat price for a special show and distributing tickets of admission to parents making purchases in that department—or else by having the toy departments issue special tickets admitting children to any

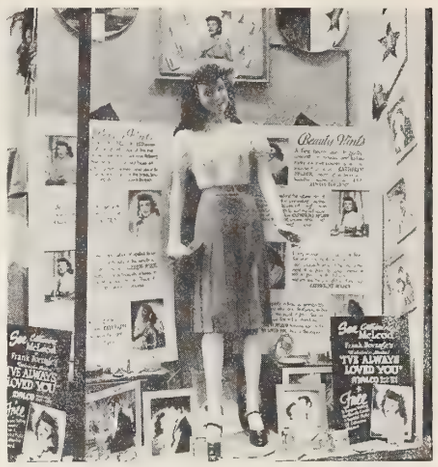
Ace Campaigns on 'Loved You' Mark Showings in Key Cities

Extensive exploitation featured by the proclamation of "Classical Music Appreciation Week" by Mayor James G. Stewart of Cincinnati; a national tie-up with RCA-Victor which included special dealer promotion, national advertising, and local co-op ads; and guest appearances of Catherine McLeod, star of Republic's "I've Always Loved You," ushered in key city openings of the Technicolor production. Other highlights were a "How to be Happily Married" contest stressing the picture's romantic theme; "What Do You Know About Love?" and "Guess the Record" contests, which attracted many entries when aired over WHBQ in Memphis, and the presentation of individual Rachmaninoff record albums to local motion picture and music critics.

An extensive national promotion set with RCA-Victor highlighted recordings of Rachmaninoff music by world-famous pianist Artur Rubinstein, who recorded the picture score, and popular versions of the Concerto by other RCA-Victor recording artists. Local Victor dealers co-operated with campaigns in each city featuring striking window and interior displays, which made use of full-color 40x60 and other elaborate display pieces included in a special "dealer's kit."

Music Week Proclaimed

In Cincinnati, Mayor James Garfield Stewart proclaimed the week of October 2nd to 9th "Classical Music Appreciation Week," to tie in with the opening at the Capitol. He was also on hand to greet couples celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a dinner at the Hotel Gibson promoted by the Capitol in conjunction with the Cincinnati Post. These couples were invited to submit five rules on how to be happily married, and later attended the Capitol's 7:30 show. A full page of pictures broke in the Post the next day. Other publicity included a broadcast over WCPO direct from the party, and a rebroadcast over WSAI, via a recording made at the party.



In Memphis Bert Olswanger, the town's best-known concert pianist, gave daily concerts of Rachmaninoff music on a specially built stage in the theatre lobby and he dedicated an entire 15-minute program over WMPS to the picture. A "How to Be Happily Married" contest was featured in the Memphis Press Scimitar. The contest was announced in a two-column story with bonds as prizes—$100 as first prize, $50 for second prize, $25 for third prize, and 25 guest tickets for the rest. A follow-up story broke the day before the opening.

Miss McLeod P.A.'s

Miss McLeod's appearances in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia were the occasion for local and national press and radio breaks.

Most of Chicago top-ranking stores tied-in with the picture opening through effective department displays, window displays, and direct-mail campaigns.

Shots of important members af the cast, biographical material, publicity stories, and listing of the picture's musical selections were sent to each Chicago movie editor in the form of an advertising kit to open the press campaign. A special screening held two weeks before the picture opened enabled them to assimilate "background" for their stories. The Tribune featured a color picture of Catherine McLeod in its Sunday magazine section, and also ran a picture review of "I've Always Loved You" in its Graphic section two Sundays before the opening. Candid shots of Artur Rubinstein giving Miss McLeod piano instruction were run by the Chicago Daily News, and a complete layout appeared in the News Saturday magazine section. Doris Arden of the Times wrote a story about Miss McLeod around the theme: "unknown actress in two million dollar production." Henry T. Murdock, critic for the Sun, wrote a lengthy piece about Frank Borzage.

BEAUTY HINTS. This novel window display was built around a series of beauty hint photos of Catherine McLeod, star of Republic's "I've Always Loved You." The display was set in Memphis by field man Arthur Price for the film's showing at the Malco Theatre.

Library Tieup

Numerous additional tie-ups throughout Chicago helped focus the attention of the city's millions on the Apollo opening. The Public Library, as part of a comprehensive tie-in, distributed 30,000 book marks through its 50 branches. Four Chicago night soft ball parks played Rachmaninoff records before games and between double-headers, interspersed by announcements which plugged the Apollo opening.

In Memphis Royal Crown-Cola, which had promoted the picture in a national ad, tied in locally with five-foot square banners on all their trucks which carried Catherine McLeod's photo and playdate.

Many stores featured window and counter displays. Woolworth's, Grant's, Silver's and McLellan's ten-cent stores tied in heavily with displays highlighting sheet music and records, and distributed 5000 off-set photos of Catherine McLeod. Woolworth's also featured a "Lover's Sundae," while Silver's prominently spotted a McLeod beauty layout of special stills in their windows. Twenty-five thousand bags imprinted with theatre credit were used to wrap counter merchandise in these stores.

In a co-op tie-in, RCA-Victor dealers throughout the city mailed 6000 post cards to a select list of record buyers. A $25 bond awarded by the Memphis RCA-Victor distributor for the best dealer windows promoting the picture helped achieve striking use of stills and tie-in material. Approximately 100 other music stores and music sections of department stores used extensive sheet music and record displays. A personal letter was sent to heads of music schools, symphony groups, and similar organizations, enlisting the interest of their groups and inviting them to a special screening.

Extensive Radio

In New York, Catherine McLeod sparked the radio campaign with appearances on the WOR-Mutual network show, "Daily Dilemma"; the Tex McCreary and Jinx Falkenburg WEAF show; and the Pat Barnes ABC network broadcast. She was interviewed by Adrienne Ames on WHN; by Maggi McNellis, NBC network; Paula Stone, WNEW; Dorothy Day, WINS; and Dorothy Grant, WINS. Numerous disk jockeys tied in with airings of theme music.

RCA-Victor dealers throughout the New York metropolitan area tied-in with window and interior displays, using the 40x60 posters and other elaborate display materials contained in the special "dealer's kit."

Dr. George Gartlan, supervisor of the New York Board of Education's Music Department, was guest at a special screening, and his support was enlisted in connection with arrangements for New York schools to hear the Sigmund Spaeth recording prepared for Republic, in which the noted "Tune Detective" discusses Rachmaninoff's music.

In Philadelphia, window displays were set in some of the city's most important stores, including John Wanamaker, Snellenburg, Gimbel's and Bonwit Teller. Approximately 150 Philadelphia Victor dealers used 40x60 posters and other special display material.

Lobby cards were placed in Philadelphia's leading hotels, with playdate and theatre credit prominently featured. Newspaper critics received Rachmaninoff record albums, with individual inscriptions. Two radio contests set with WPEN and WFIL tied in with the picture and netted more than 400 replies.

National Promotions Used

National merchandise promotions set by Republic's home office exploitation staff were slanted effectively for local use to spark the New Orleans opening at the Saenger Theatre. With the cooperation of J. W. Blount, RCA-Victor distributor in New Orleans, window displays featuring picture music were arranged in the city's most important department and music stores, utilizing special posters, stills and other display material contained in the RCA-Victor kits. Maison Blanche, D. H. Holmes, J. & M. Music and Jack Porter Co. ran a co-op ad which appeared in he Times-Picayune, Illustrated Press and Orleans State. A national Royal Crown-Cola tie-up was angled locally when a co-op ad was placed on the sports page of New Orleans newspapers, and radio breaks on the same basis were effected on Crown-Cola's air time over stations WSMB and WWL.

You" was set for music dealers, managers of record departments, display managers, advertising managers, and newspaper record editors of three Cincinnati newspapers as part of the campaign for the Capitol Theatre opening. As a result, all three editors gave the Capitol opening prominent mention in their papers. Leading downtown music and record stores featured "I've Always Loved You" windows. The Ohio Appliances Company presented newspaper record and music editors with a gratis album of Artur Rubinstein recordings, highlighting the selections he plays in "I've Always Loved You." Willis Music House made a direct mailing of 2,500 post cards to their customers, and Rollman's Department Stores record department followed suit with a mailing to more than 1,000 customers.

Drs. Lark and Biddle of the Cincinnati school system were among those invited to a special screening, and this resulted in the use of the special Sigmund Spaeth recordings in music classes, high schools and upper grade schools. About 10,000 special students' tickets were printed and distributed in 63 upper grade schools, and six high and vocational high schools, entitling the students to see "I've Always Loved You" for a nominal fee on weekdays up to 6 p.m.

An effective tie-in with Dow's Drug Stores —a 30 store chain—resulted in a full-page co-op ad in the Cincinnati Times-Star. Dow's also distributed 6,000 8x10 stills of Catherine McLeod, and featured 100 14x22 cards in their windows and on cosmetic counters announcing the giveaway. Drivers and salesmen of the local Royal Crown-Cola bottler distributed five hundred 14x22 two--color co-op cards.

Special Republic field men worked with circuit publicity directors and theatre men on handling the key city engagements. In Chicago, William Hollander, advertising and publicity director of Balaban and Katz, and Hal Butchin, field man, handled the campaign for the picture's world premiere at the Apollo. Malco Theatre publicity director Elliott Johnson and A. Arthur Price worked on the Malco opening in Memphis. In New York, publicity director Jerry Sager of Loew's Criterion worked with Paul Blaufox and Fred Stengel on arrangements for the opening at the Broadway house. Everett Callow and Irving Blumberg of the Warner Bros. Circuit, working with Max Miller, handled the Aldine opening in Philadelphia. In New Orleans, Maurice Barr, publicity director of the Paramount-Richards Circuit, and Royce Colon handled the Saenger Theatre campaign. Arrangements for the RKO Capitol opening in Cincinnati were made by J. E. Jones, manager of the Capitol, and field man Arthur Price.

National promotions slanted for effective local use in each campaign were set by Beatrice Ross, Republic exploitation manager at the New York home office under Steve Edwards, Republic's ad-publicity chief.

School, Library Tieins

Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, Hartford, manager, and Sam Horowitz, his assistant, had public school and library tieins in addition to 5,000 heralds for "Three Wise Fools."—HFD.

Could Happen to You!

Just every once in a while a manager comes up with a gag line that newspapers go for and it was one of these that got front page space for Manager Jim McCarthy of the Strand in Hartford, Conn.

During McCarthy's showing of "Canyon Passage" a Hartford woman reported that she had lost a large sum of money. McCarthy immediately suggested to his editor friends that "perhaps she lost the money in 'Canyon Passage'." And believe it or not, they printed it!

State Dep't Distributes Warner-ALA Bibliography

Copies of "The Motion Picture: A Selected Booklist," bibliography compiled by Warner Bros. in cooperation with the American Library Association as one of the activities in connection with the Twentieth Anniversary of Talking Pictures, are being sent overseas by the State Department for worldwide distribution to Information Libraries and Cultural Institutes.

Mailing of the brochure, which has a foreword by Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., is being handled by the Division of Libraries and Institutes of the State Department.

Stars at Premiere of 'Lady Luck' in Duluth

RKO Radio's "Lady Luck" had its gala world premiere at S. J. Blackmore's Granada Theatre in Duluth, Minn., recently, with Barbara Hale, co-star on hand for a personal appearance along with her husband, Bill Williams, RKO featured player. A record crowd of fans mobbed the theatre.

The opening followed a day of interviews by two newspapers, representatives of nine high schools in the twin port cities of Duluth and Superior, Wis., plus five radio broadcasts over four different stations, spearheaded by Station WEBC and KDAL, topped by a press and radio cocktail party at the Hotel Duluth.

The activities came to a climax at the evening performance when Barbara Hale and Bill Williams were appointed, by "Royal Ducal Decree," Ambassadors Extraordinary of the mythical Duchy of Duluth. The ceremonies were headed by Shirley Eldon, Duchess of Duluth. The two young screen stars were presented with a scroll bearing the royal seal of the Duchy of Duluth and a medallion bearing the coat of arms. The presentation was covered by photographers of the Duluth Herald and News Tribune.

UA Pegs 'Angel' Exploitation On Juvenile Delinquency Angle

The juvenile delinquency angle by which United Artists have been exploiting Charles Rogers' "Angel on My Shoulder" seems to have a popular appeal in various sections of the country. At the Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia, for instance, publicity manager Everett Callow highlighted his campaign with a radio contest via station WIP which awarded guest tickets for the best letters on the question, "How can Philadelphia help juvenile delinquency?"

Philadelphia's Crime Prevention Association actively engaged in promoting the newspaper and radio promotion following Callow's direct contact with the Association's entire membership. He also was in touch with other organizations interested in preventative education of the city's youth, resulting in the curiosity of many of the city's leaders regarding the important message about juvenile delinquency contained in the picture.

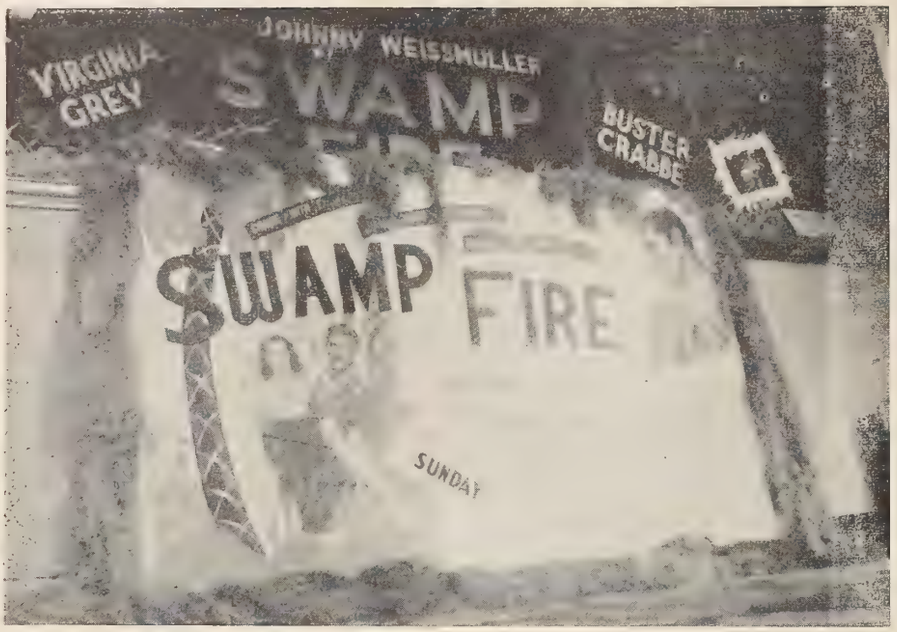
Tie-ups consisted of a 500-line co-op ad on Ann Baxter with Oppenheim & Collins. The ad ran through the run of the picture with theatre and play-date credits. The Bendix distributors in Philadelphia used blow-up art of Anne Baxter for window displays in downtown stores, while Gimbel Brothers plugged the picture with Koret displays of the "Angel" stars. Lobby displays also attracted attention of patrons.

Manager Joe Alexander of the RKO Albee Theatre in Cincinnati, gathered together a group of 12 local models to form "Angels, Inc." This group contacted Cincinnatians in behalf of the local Community Chest Fund on a voluntary basis. Thirteen small silver "angel pins" were worn by the girls and local newspapers carried their picture with the Mayor to launch the charity drive.

In Louisville, Ky., Judge Lawrence Weatherby, Juvenile Court judge, made a statement to the press commending "Angel on My Shoulder" as a picture in the interests of preventing juvenile delinquency following a special screening. Newspapers broke the story the following day. Ministers and other civic figures also heralded the picture after private screenings.

Twenty-five thousand napkins in the Walgreen Drug Stores advertised the "Angel Sundae" and "Angel Soda"—the stunt got extra word-of-mouth publicity in Louisville. Also—5,000 heralds, 50 window cards, 20 11x14's in hotels, 4 8x10 stills on special mounting for the lobby displays.

Herald-Letter Promotion For 'Mr. Ace' in Norfolk



Five thousand cards with the letters from the title of the picture, "Mr. Ace" were distributed by the W. T. Grant department store in Norfolk, Va., in connection with the showing of the United Artists release at Loew's State Theatre. Patrons who gathered enough lettered cards to spell out the film's title received guest tickets.

Seven Royal Crown Cola trucks carried 5' x 3' banners reading "Get That Ace High Feeling" and costume jewelry windows were planted in Kresge's, on Sylvania Sidney, who co-stars with George Raft in the film. Leading hotels carried bulletin board plugs for the theatre, picture title and cast.

Radio played a major part in the campaign with a one-hour broadcast from the theatre by Joe Brown over WRVA. Nylon hose, guest tickets and other prizes were awarded participants from the theatre audience with the program dedicated to "Mr. Ace."

Manager Milton Kaufman handled the campaign.

ATMOSPHERIC. It appears that considerable thought and care went into the design and construction of this lobby display on "Swamp Fire" which was draped with real moss to the extent that the theatre even smelled pleasantly of the moss. F. T. McMeans, advertising manager of the Cannon Theatres, Lake City, Fla., designed it.

Boston, Phila. Preview 'Two Years' In Harbors Aboard Famous Ships

The U. S. Frigate, Constitution, famous as "Old Ironsides" during the War of 1812, was the scene of Boston's introduction to Paramount's screen version of Richard Henry Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast." An audience of important naval personnel and Boston dignitaries were present at the screening of the story which originated in the historic waters of Boston Harbor which floated the Constitution. That the preview was considered locally as an important event was evidenced by the amount of space devoted to it by leading newspapers and New England radio stations. Arnold Van Lear, Paramount field man, handled details of the event.

Festivities began earlier with a dinner in honor of the Dana family at Boston's Dinty Moore's where members of the press met and talked with descendants of the author of the sea classic, including Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, his niece, Diana and other members of the family who traveled many miles to be present at the event.

After the dinner a chartered bus took the party to Charlestown Navy Yard and the berth of the Constitution. The top deck of the historical man-o-war was made into a theatre with an 8-foot screen amidship and 120 seats scattered among the guns and museum relics of the deck. Upon completion of the screening members of the audience were invited to the Base Officers' Club, where the Navy played host at a cocktail party.

The screening climaxed the Boston Navy Day celebration.

As the highlight of the Philadelphia campaign for the film's showing at the Mastbaum Theatre a similar screening was held aboard the Merchant Marine Cadet Training Ship, Keystone State, for officers and men of the vessel as well as members of the Navigation Commission for the Delaware River, executives of leading shipping firms and representatives of the Coast Guard and Maritime Commission.

Captain James Boyd Rutter, USN (Ret.) skipper of the ship, acted as host.

Displays Caricature

Lou Cohen, manager of Loew's Poli, Hartford, and his assistant, Sam Horowitz, contacted a Hartford department store for a window display of a caricature by Michael Vann, a local artist, of Dorothy McGuire and Robert Young. Display plugged 20th-Fox's "Claudia and David."—HFD.

On the Job!

Whoever was responsible for the timely herald distributed in Vancouver to publicize the showing of "The Stranger" at the Capitol Theatre, deserves a pat on the head for being alert and on the job. The herald was made up in the form of a hanger and was headlined, "11 Nazis to Hang in Thirteen Days!" and then in body type explained ". . . one is still at large in Vancouver. . . . He's Franz Kindler. . . . See Him in 'The Stranger'."

The hanger was placed on all cars parked downtown and through other distribution methods reached the majority of homes in the area.—VAN.

MISCELLANEOUS IDEAS

During Christmas week some theatres out-fitted their entire theatre staff with banners reading "Merry Christmas."

Many theatres reported that Christmas Carols were softly payed in the lounges, etc., of theatres during Christmas week, using either phonograph or phonograph radio combinations.

One theatre planned an award to the most popular football player on local high school team. Coupons run in the daily paper for two weeks of voting are brought to the theatre for compilation, and no one is aware of the winner's identity until the stage ceremonies are in progress at end of voting period. On designated night, winner is presented from the stage with gold football properly engraved. The coach, school principal, local sports editor and others join in the stage ceremonies. The gold football is promoted from a local jeweler.

A great number of theatres report considerable success with annual kiddie stage shows handled principally through tie-ups with local dancing schools.

One theatre reported a publicity stunt whereby local newspaper cameraman snaps a picture of art of the crowd in front of various stores in the shopping center. The picture is then published in the newspaper with a section of the crowd ringed off. Those whose heads appear in the circle receive free passes from the merchant in front of whose store the picture was taken. One location a day is covered for a week or so.

Hair Style Show for 'Beaucaire' in Seattle

A hair styling show, staged under the auspices of the Berliner Beauty Supply Co. in the company's auditorium in Seattle, served to whip up a lot of interest in Paramount's Bob Hope picture, "Monsieur Beaucaire," in that city.

The show, at which Leta Harrison, New York hair stylist, demonstrated what was dubbed the "Beaucaire" hairdo, was attended by hairdressers and beauty operators from an area that included the state of Washington and Victoria and Vancouver, Canada.

Following Miss Harrison's demonstration at Berliner's Auditorium, those in attendance were given a special midnight screening of "Monsieur Beaucaire" at the Music Box Theatre.

The posters used outside the theatre for the screening were displayed inside Berliner's Auditorium during the hair style show

AN EPOCHAL EVENT IN SCREEN HISTORY

SONG OF THE SOUTH

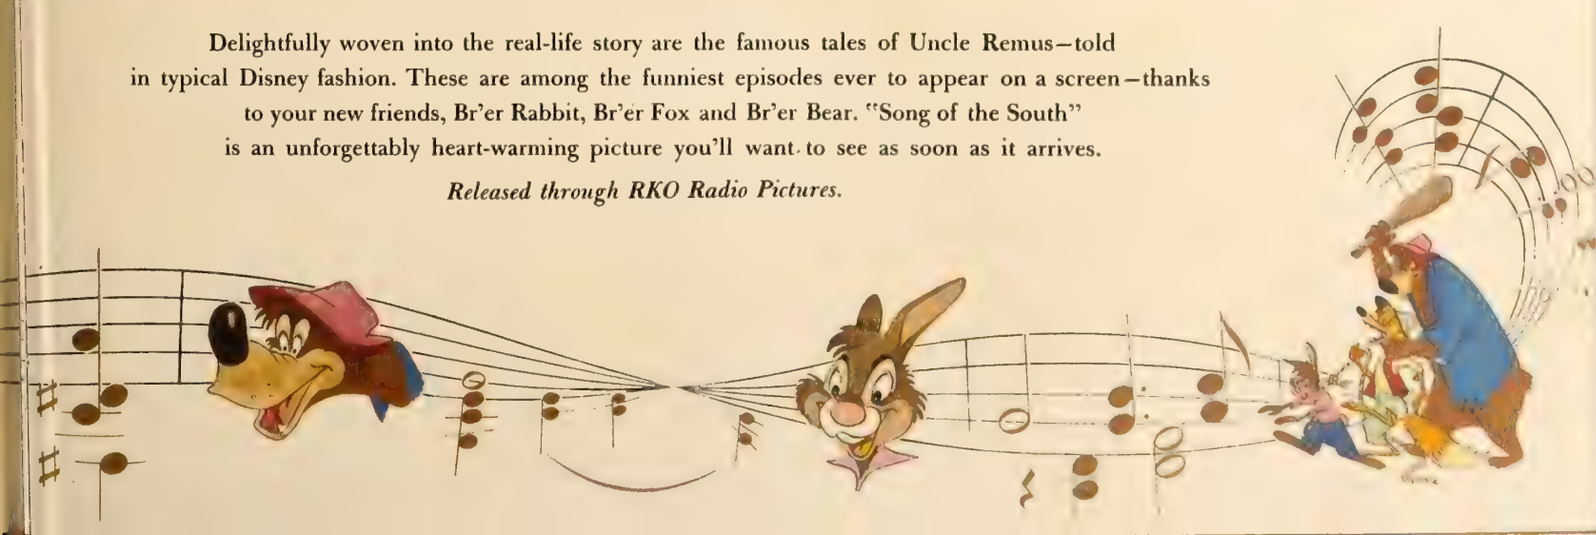
His first live-action feature... a great musical drama in Technicolor including animated tales of

UNCLE REMUS

RUTH WARRICK
LUANA PATTEN
BOBBY DRISCOLL

What this new Disney musical drama is like:

For the first time Walt Disney turns his talents to the creation of a full-length live-action picture. Photographed in Technicolor, it's a wonderfully romantic musical drama of the Old South. You'll meet new stars—Bobby Driscoll, Luana Patten, James Baskett and a host of others—you'll hear 10 new song hits, including "Everybody's Got a Laughing Place."



SPECIAL NOTE:
This spread is a reproduction of a two-page, four-color national magazine ad. See page four of this insert for list of publications.

Delightfully woven into the real-life story are the famous tales of Uncle Remus—told in typical Disney fashion. These are among the funniest episodes ever to appear on a screen—thanks to your new friends, Br'er Rabbit, Br'er Fox and Br'er Bear. "Song of the South" is an unforgettably heart-warming picture you'll want to see as soon as it arrives.

Released through RKO Radio Pictures.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Key Anniversary Fete With 15-Week Drive

Skouras Theatres Corp. is keying a celebration of its 15th Anniversary Celebration with a 15-week showmanship drive ending December 24, for which awards to managers, district and zone managers will run from $500 to $50 based on showings made against each theatre's expectancy. There will be 62 awards and in addition, those theatre managers who reach 100 per cent of their expectancy will receive 15 per cent of all profits earned in excess of their expectancy. Other awards to zone managers will be based on results shown by their zones against expectancy. These will run from $1000 to $450 and in addition they also will share in profits up to 15 per cent above full expectancy obtained.

Quotas have been set for each theatre in the chain for income not connected with the box-office and during the period of the drive each manager who reaches his quota will receive 40 per cent of the quota for himself, and 50 per cent of any income over his quota figure. If he goes below his quota, the percentage of his participation will be reduced proportionately.

To further hypo box-office returns during the drive two Managers Weeks were designated—the week before Election Day (already past) and the week before Christmas, two notoriously poor weeks. Activities on these weeks are judged on the basis, not only of box-office returns but on goodwill created for the theatre, with special prizes to be divided among the employes of the winning houses from the manager to the last usher.

WB Philadelphia Theatres Hold 'Campus Quiz Shows'

Active cooperation of Warner Bros. Philadelphia theatres and radio station WFIL of that city has resulted in the presentation on theatre stages of the station's weekly Campus Quiz show, conducted by Wally Butterworth of Vox Pop fame and Tom Moorehead, sportscaster. The locally-sponsored shows feature contests held between teams representing two high schools each week with the broadcast originating in the Stanley-Warner theatre nearest the high schools.

First four theatres participating in the show series are the 69th Street, Manor, Broadway and Landsdowne.

Check Loose Bolts

A theatre accident in which the claimant alleged that the bottom of a seat fell out causing her to fall to the floor, injuring her spine and back severely, was proved to have been caused by the loosening of nuts and bolts holding the seats. The investigation brought out the fact that although small boys probably had loosened the nuts and bolts their action did not lessen the theatre's liability.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

HOW TO PLUG LEADS IN PROFIT LINE

By Jack Jackson

"It isn't what you make but what you save that counts."

The fellow who first made that assertion contributed the "guts" for every success formula in the books.

As I have inferred, I don't know who originated the pithy phrase but I'm willing to gamble the nothing that is mine against the word of a Chinese Communist that at some time or other the author was in theatre business and that the verbal outburst followed a monthly checkup of operational expense.

I remember Sam Katz of Paramount-Publix Theatres walking, without his usual retinue of associates, through the long lobby of the Saenger in New Orleans after a visit in the theatre, and remarking, apropos of nothing in particular: "You know, this company is needlessly throwing away millions of dollars every year!"

That was back about 1930 and while times have changed and much that is new in equipment and time-saving devices have found their way into the theatre, most of us still are in the same place so far as doing anything concrete about eliminating the leaks that diminish to a mere trickle at the bank-teller's window the potential flood of box-office intake.

It seems that the majority of theatremen operate on the completely disproved theory that expense should be expected to mount in relation to receipts, and today the bankruptcies of the late '20's and early '30's seem to have been forgotten and memberships in the theatre division of the "Easy come—Easy Go Club" are at an all-time high.

Small Items Add Up to Big Losses

Paradoxically the greatest leaks in the theatre's profit bins occur in the rudimentary department details and not in the more complicated maneuvers of operation. Perhaps it would help to plug these dangerous gaps were I to list here some of the items and operational practices that are most prevalent and—because of their seeming harmlessness and low "per unit" cost—most obstructive to maximum financial returns. Here they are:

Leaking water faucets, leaking valves in toilet commodes or urinals, constantly flowing drinking fountains and the many other factors of cleaning sidewalks, lobbies, etc. where water is used and not carefully watched to guard against unwarranted waste, can increase your daily operating expense from 2 to 10 dollars depending on the amount of waste and the size of your operation. Replacing a hose that is badly worn will pay for itself times over in lessening your monthly water bill. Checking the water meter twice a month will give you a lot of information about how the consumption is running and provide the means for prompt correction if there is overconsumption. There is a simple way of determining the efficiency of valves, etc. without resorting to the expensive services of a plumber. Just have the cleaners sprinkle some bluing around the tops of commodes, urinals, etc. and watch to see if it becomes diluted as it moves to the bottom. The slightest water leak will make itself evident and enable you to call it to the attention of the maintenance man or, if serious, the plumber. In case you don't know let me tell you that one leaking commode can waste 5 to 10 thousand gallons of water daily and that's quite an item on the expense sheet.

The size of bulbs used in the lighting fixtures throughout the theatre, the front marquee and upright sign is a determining factor in computing the size of your monthly light bill. Study the lighting needs carefully, supervise the wattage used in the various outlets. Give plenty of light where it is needed but hold down the consumption where subdued effects are desired. Color selection is another factor deserving of careful study that will lead to lessening the monthly tariff. By all means keep the bulbs, shades, etc. clean to make sure that you get the full benefit of the light you pay for. A mixture of water and alcohol will clean off the neon tubing and increase the effectiveness of display immeasurably. The same goes for fluorescent fixtures. Washing the reflecting surfaces will do wonders in improving the overall effect.

Cleaning supplies is another unit of operation that lends itself to waste or efficiency depending on the attention given by the management. Determine what compounds or chemicals will accomplish each task at the least expense, the amount necessary to do the job right and instruct the department head accordingly. As an instance let me tell you of one theatre under my supervision where keeping the bulk supplies under lock and key and having the proper amounts doled out by the manager each night has lessened consumption more than 50 per cent or about $2.50 per day.

Continue Carbon-Saving

The use of carbon-saving devices should not end now that the war is over. It takes but little time to check the discarded ends to see if they have been burned as short as possible. I have seen dozens of carbons in the refuse cans that could easily serve for the exhibition of a single reel. If you find such instruct the staff to thread up a single reel on the current or a coming show and make use of the short discards. Carbons run into a sizable figure every month.

The cleaning and care of uniforms is another source of great waste. There are entirely too many theatres where no attempt is made to arrange for wholesale prices on cleaning and where the returned uniforms are not checked for careless handling, damage and poor workmanship. A definite understanding with the cleaners regarding the time limit for return, the class of service expected and the responsibility for tears, rips, buttons, etc. will materially reduce not only the cleaning bills but the cost of replacements and repairs. I know that you'll say it can't be done now that all cleaners have everything they can handle but I'll tell you we are doing it and that there are plenty of cleaners who are looking ahead to the time when the volume of business a theatre is able to give will mean a lot. Just shop around a bit and you can do the same.

Accessory Waste Huge

The amount of waste in order but unused accessories is usually astounding. I know of theatres where, despite the fact that the lobby and front have been entirely revamped and the display arrangement materially reduced, the accessory order placed with exchanges years ago remains unchanged. The result is a weekly cash loss to the theatre as well as a nuisance cost in handling and shipping. Check over the advertising material you actually use. Quit sending a full set of 20 or 25 stills to the newspapers and start sending four or five well selected scenes. Stop ordering a complete set of mats when your budget permits the use of singles and doubles only. Stop ordering one sheets on news releases unless you make use of them and similarly reduce your posting paper order to what you actually need to cover the front and outside commitments. I would wager that the average theatre can reduce its advertising bills from 5 to 10 dollars a week by the simple process of limiting their orders to what they actually need.

Special trailers offer another possibility of saving by arranging for the ordering of as many frames as possible that will lend themselves to frequent use and then ordering only additional frames for the special occasions. The elimination of dates on trailer strips and the use of "coming soon" and "day" strips will help a lot to reduce special trailer costs.

Discount Bills

Taking advantage of the discounts on bills paid promptly is still another means of saving and adding to the profit. I have found so many instances where bills were allowed to accumulate over a period of time before even coming to the attention of the bookkeeper that a check of the discount lost ran into high figures.

A constant inventory of theatre accessories, trailers on coming attractions, and other theatre needs will do a lot to reduce telephone and telegraph bills. If the manager keeps an accurate tab on his coming programs he will have plenty of time to handle "short" accessories, trailer "missouts" etc. by mail and save his theatre a heap of money every year.

Insisting that a weekly check be kept of the condition of theatre machinery by the department responsible will materially reduce repair and replacement costs as well as mitigate against the possibility of breakdowns. In this same line there is a possibility of tremendous saving by ordering supplies well in advance and knowing each season's prospective demands for fuel, oil, rags, parts, etc.

The daily soaking and destruction of the ticket stubs from yesterday's business will eliminate potential loss of sizable proportions. Whenever the discarded stubs are carelessly handled or allowed to accumulate you are putting temptation before those of poor character development to take advantage of the doorman and present a "found" stub for admission. Watch the handling of "used" tickets as cautiously as you do the "unused" ticket supplies.

The handling of even the ordinary theatre mail presents the possibility of

Kid Shows Flop

Saturday morning special shows for children in Cleveland with admissions fixed at 25 cents are practically out as far as that area is concerned, observers of the local scene report. What started as a success, suddenly sagged and ended in failure as the children failed to show up. Instead of the morning shows, Saturday afternoon programs at the regular children's admission of 10 cents, will be aimed directly for the junior trade. Managers in Cleveland were not certain that the higher price hurt the special morning shows or whether the hour was inconvenient to both children and parents.

Average Ability? Don't Worry

(From Contact, publication of Wometco Theatres, Miami, Fla.)

If your ability is just average, don't worry about it. You can still be more of a success than many a genius. All you have to do is pick a combination for your "average" ability from the list below. Try it.

Average Ability—plus boundless energy.

Average Ability—plus constructive imagination.

Average Ability—plus sound judgment.

Average Ability—plus the desire to learn and the will to pay the price of learning: hard work.

Average Ability—plus the ability to make the best use of it.

Average Ability—plus the ability to create your own opportunities without sitting back and waiting for them to appear.

Average Ability—plus courage, optimism and faith in fellow men.

Average Ability—plus a body kept strong and healthy, a level head and a generous heart.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

That Was No Bull

For the umpteenth time little Mary, usherette and relief cashier of Wometco's Rosetta Theatre, Miami, Fla., waltzed in late. By this time Manager Ed May had had enough of the offender's excuses. He would ask her into his official sanctum and dispense with her services. Being a reasonable fellow, however, he deemed it only fair to hear her side of the story.

Explained Mary: "Mr. May, somebody shot our cow and we was all lookin' to see who done it. That's why I'm late."

At last reports Mary was still on the payroll.

Vacuum Efficient?

Vacuum cleaners are standard equipment in every well-run theatre. They were installed for efficiency in cleaning, and more than make up initial cost and electricity charges. If they have deteriorated with usage, however, you're not getting your money's worth. An overhaul might be worth while.

Clean Under the Mat

If the cleaning crew regularly cleans under the lobby mat, rather than just sweeping dust and debris over it, there will be no mud accumulated on rainy or snowy days.

Change Lighting Schedule

Now that the days are shorter, remind whoever is in charge of switching on outside lights that dusk comes earlier. Set up a time scheduled based on local sunset schedules.

Wyatt's Tom Mix Club Matinees a Model for Successful Operation

The re-establishment of Kiddie Shows by many theatres throughout the country following the summer vacations brings forth some intelligence about probably the most successful of this type of operation yet to come from the field. It is about the Tom Mix Clubs run every Saturday by the McDonald Theatre, Eugene, Oregon, supervised by Manager Harold Wyatt, whose success with the club is a matter of wonder and admiration with not only his opposition theatres but the district, zone and home office executives of Fox West Coast Theatres.

Wyatt's formula is based on a three-way promotion which includes the McDonald Theatre, Radio station KORE and Ralston's Breakfast Food, which still continues its Tom Mix tieup.

In presenting his idea to both co-sponsors Wyatt made it clear that the theatre's cost would involve only operational and program charges. All other promotional expenses were to be paid for by either the station or Ralston, and both agreed to the terms of the idea, which gave Mr. Wyatt plenty of room to expand.

The original contract was for only six weeks but the program has continued long after the expiration date and promises to continue indefinitely. Ever since the club idea was started Ralston has furnished gratis a different favor each week, including Tom Mix's whistling sheriff's badges, buttons, campaign ribbons, rings, etc., and the show has built to such proportions that competitive theatre managers have wracked their brains for ideas to get part of the box-office gravy. But the Tom Mix Club continues to grow bigger and bigger.

Wyatt's conception of the Tom Mix Club has regularly elected and appointed juvenile officials, such as deputies, to keep order, with each youngster member of the club receiving a wallet-sized membership card. Juvenile officials are sworn in on the stage by the "marshal," a regular member of the police department, which, by the way, is an enthusiastic supporter of the organization.

The stage show consists of an amateur program of singing and dancing by the kids themselves, with other amateur and professional acts presented weekly. The show is broadcast on a fifteen-minute program. The screen fare includes a feature, serial and cartoons.

The Tom Mix Club Show is cross-plugged on the screen of the McDonald and other FWC theatres nearby and more than 5,000 heralds are distributed each week at elementary and junior high schools by arrangement with the superintendent of schools. Window cards are furnished by the Ralston Company and are placed in prominent downtown store windows. Newspaper ads about the show appear each week.

Wyatt's enterprise also enables him to promote other gifts from local merchants for giveaways, which highlight each week's show. The success of the enterprise makes the task of promoting this material an easy one.

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK
Maintenance

BUILDINGS — Maintenance II

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

TILE ROOFS

Tile roofs may be either of the flat type, formed by laying tile blocks on concrete or wood decking which has been flooded with hot asphalt—with the joints between the tiles sealed by hot asphalt or other sealing compound; or of the Spanish type, built up of overlapping half-oval tiles which are supported in the center by wood strips.

Tiles are loosened by expansion and contraction during temperature changes. Loose tiles, falling, can cause personal and property damage, with liability to the theatre. Tiles become cracked by freezing of absorbed water. If tiles are either cracked or loose, leakage, and resultant damage, will follow.

Inspections should be frequent, and repairs made promptly.

GENERAL

Keep all roofs clean. Prevent gutter stoppage. Remove extensive snow accumulations promptly. Never erect any temporary structure on a roof.

GUARANTEED ROOFS

When the installing contractor has guaranteed a roof for a specified length of time, and made himself responsible for repairing all leaks that occur during that period, the theatre manager is still responsible for reporting leaks to the contractor before damage occurs to the building interior —for which the contractor is NOT responsible. In the event the contractor proves unwilling or reluctant to live up to his guarantee, it would be unwise and expensive to dispute with him until damage to the interior has taken place. Repairs should be made at once at the theatre's expense; efforts to collect their cost from the contractor can be taken care of afterward.

BONDED ROOFS

Casualty companies will bond a roof against failure during a specified period. Recourse in case of roof failure can then be had against the bonding company as well as against the manufacturer of the material and the contractor who installed it. Further, contractors are commonly more careful when they install a bonded roof. Should repairs become necessary, the instructions in the bond are consulted and followed.

LEASED ROOFS

If the theatre is leased under terms which make the lessee responsible for the upkeep of the interior and the small daily saving that will mount to a sizable figure at the end of the year. Gather as many pieces of mail as possible that are going to the same office and include them in one big envelope. Stop the practice of putting a stamp on an envelope containing a request for a booking date and another on one containing the box-office reports of a picture already played. Put them in the same envelope and send the three cents to the bank.

You'd be surprised at what keeping the theatre and marquee roof clean will do in the way of reducing bills. Accumulation of refuse causes water to collect and rot the metal and roofing paper. In addition there is always the possibility of it leaking into or around electrical contacts and causing short circuits that can bring about all kinds of expensive and embarrassing damage. Have the roofs checked and cleaned at least once a week.

By all means watch the size of your service personnel and regulate their hours to conform to the periods of peak traffic in the theatre. Unless yours is a "class" house where complete dress personnel is important from the opening hour you should arrange openings with a skeleton staff and build the personnel to fit the expected traffic. Having employes on hand to do nothing but entertain each other is not only expensive and profit-destroying but tends to reduce the efficiency of the staff who have so much time to visit with each other that they become reluctant to cease the visiting when a flood of customers start arriving. Staff your house adequately but don't waste your money for unneeded personnel. Endeavor to train all personnel for service in more than one job to protect yourself for replacements in the event of unexpected absences.

Check all orders for supplies and repairs personally to make sure that the actual need exists and in what proportions the order should be placed. In many cases great wads of money are wasted in theatres where excessive ordering of supplies results in spoilage before use.

This article could easily become book size and still leave a lot unsaid about waste in theatre operation. I think that I've set down enough factors to bring a few membership cancellations in the "Easy Come, Easy Go Club" and encourage additions in the "Put-It-Away-While-We-Can" group. That pendulum is liable to swing the other way any day and we'll need a good bank balance to tide us over. Start checking today.

Management Observation

The writer took a busman's holiday last Sunday night and visited a neighborhood third-run independent theatre in Flatbush. He purchased a ticket, traversed a rather long lobby and upon approaching the ticket taker heard the manager softly announcing "standing room only." The manager replied indifferently to "How long" with a laconic "Oh, 'bout an hour or so, I guess."

Upon entering the theatre, which is of the stadium type, the writer came upon an enormous crowd of standees, completely out of control of ill-trained ushers. All three aisles were about one-third filled, with standing patrons blithely enjoying the screen program and keeping one eye open for seats. Immediately when one or two persons were seen rising to leave there was a concerted rush for the vacancies. One usher in the meantime plaintively cried, "Will you people please keep the aisles clear? The fire department doesn't like this!"

Inside the theatre there was no sign of a manager, assistant manager or anyone else in authority.

This is to point out that the theatre was violating the law, was badly managed, the ushers ill trained, and still amusement-seeking patrons jammed the place. We wonder how this theatre will fare when the present boom period starts its recession?

owner responsible for the upkeep of the roof, it would be poor business practice to allow a leak to continue (with consequent risk to the interior structure and fittings) while conducting an argument with the owner about any roof repairs which he may be unwilling or reluctant to make. In such cases, common sense requires that the lessee have the roof repaired promptly if the owner won't and subsequently try to collect the cost from him.

GUTTERS AND DOWNSPOUTS

If the gutters and downspouts fail to carry off water quickly it may rise high enough to flow over the flashing and into the interior of the parapet wall; or it may stand on the roof, producing deterioration. If gutters or downspouts leak, water will flow down the outside wall, staining it and perhaps penetrating into it.

Wire screens must be set over downspout openings and kept clean of leaves, dirt or other refuse. During winter months, any ice forming on such screens should be removed immediately.

The inside surfaces of gutters are the most important and need the most frequent inspection, since they are subjected to dirt and in some cases gravel, in addition to rain. Clean them thoroughly every six months, and repaint as needed. Exterior surfaces should be inspected for sealing paint, and corrosion.

Downspouts made of galvanized iron are inspected for corrosion and loose joints; copper downspouts for condition of soldered joints.

SKYLIGHTS AND PENTHOUSES

Serious roof leaks often occur at the flashing and counter-flashing of skylights and penthouses. Careful and frequent inspection is needed here. Glazing on skylights should be kept watertight; loose or cracked putty replaced. All metal surfaces should be kept well painted; all condensation drains checked and kept open.

Many skylights and penthouses of metal construction are so made that replacement of any part or section which has become defective through corrosion is an expensive undertaking. It is correspondingly important to prevent corrosion by carefully maintaining the efficiency of the protective coating, particularly at all joints or intersections.

STEEL STACKS

Check the flashing, and keep all parts of the stack and its fittings and guywires well painted to prevent rust.

BRICK CHIMNEYS

Improperly maintained chimneys are not only a hazard to persons and property below, but also to the roof, which will probably be damaged if the chimney falls. Coping, mortar joints and brickwork should be carefully checked for cracking. Sealing of seams at proper intervals will prevent development of cracks and general failure.

VENTILATORS

Where possible, the inside as well as the outside of the ventilator should be kept well painted. The main problem in ventilator maintenance is to prevent corrosion. Flashing around ventilators must also be carefully checked, and kept in watertight condition.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

HARTFORD

Sperie Perakos, district manager, and his brother, Johnnie, assistant district manager, Perakos Theatres, located in the vicinity of Hartford, had quite an experience one day last week, when visiting their folks' summer home at Indian Neck, Conn. A light plane crashed into Long Island Sound, off Indian Neck. Johnnie got ahold of Sperie, and the two used a skiff with an outboard motor to rescue the occupants of the plane.

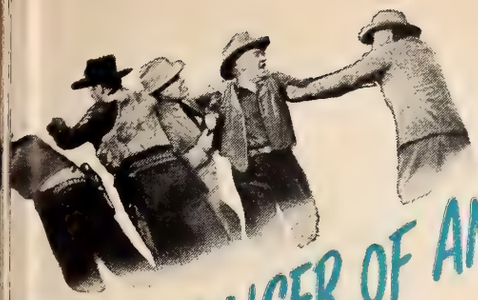
MILWAUKEE CENSORSHIP MOVE DRAWS EDITORIAL FIRE; OPEN ALL NIGHT FOR 2 DAYS



The new Telenews Theatre (Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Corp.) is now taking shape, the brickwork progressing in good shape, on the three-story steel frame structure. No prospective opening date can be given at this time, the management says.

The appointment of a permanent movie censorship committee by the Milwaukee common council is still in the argumentative stage. As censorship stands now, the old committee, after the resignation of its secretary, seems to be inactive so far as passing on any new films is concerned.

Moves to create a new committee with power to enforce its rejection of motion pictures have been in the offing and have met strong opposition from the daily press, one of which has taken an editorial stand on the matter.

The Hebron Theatre, at Hebron, No. Dak., is reported to have been sold by T. J. Roth

At Whitehall, Wis., the management of the Pix Theatre has been taken over by Colonel Larson, after L. J. Johnson, the former manager, resigned that position, explaining he has been appointed manager of the recently completed Middleton Theatre, at Middleton, Wis., near Madison. The latter theatre was scheduled for opening Nov. 6th.

Incorporation papers have been taken out by the Milwaukee Towne Theatre Corp., with a capital stock of 600 shares at no par value. Andrew Spheeris, a Milwaukee merchant, is part owner of the show house.

For the first time in the history of Milwaukee Theatres, so far as can be ascertained, the Riverside (Standard Theatres), kept open all night for two days, in succession. It was for Hand-out Night and Halloween Night, Oct. 30 and 31, and good crowds welcomed the chance to go to a show house during the hours when rowdies and youngsters bothered householders and others. Many cars were left in the garages for safety while crowds walked or took the street cars to the Riverside to spend a few hours in peace. The show was "The Killers," and its popularity may result in keeping it on the screen as first run in this show house for several weeks. This theatre has been particularly fortunate in choosing pictures for longer than the usual week or two. Since the showing of "The Bells of St. Mary," which ran for eight weeks, there was "Notorious," for four weeks, and several for three weeks.

H. D. Hearn, owner of Exhibitor's Service, announced this week that his company was taking over the buying and booking for the Pastime Amusement Company, operators of the Gloria, Riviera, Garden, America, and Majestic Theatres in Charleston, S. C. The five houses are owned by Albert Sottile, veteran exhibitor.

RKO office manager Jules Williamson, announced that his branch was now prepared to distribute all of RKO's major product on 16mm. Mr. Williamson announced that this would make it possible for numerous shut-in institutions and towns too small to support a 35mm theatre to run RKO pictures as early as six months after the Charlotte territorial release date.

Sara Eskridge has replaced Ralph Perry as accountant at Exhibitor's Service; Ernest Johnson is the new utility booker at Universal; Seline Martin, RKO accountant, is back at her desk after a two months leave of absence; Nena Ritch, RKO contract clerk, is recuperating from an operation in the hospital.

Republic branch manager, Cy Dillon, was visited last week by E. L. Walton, assistant sales manager and Merritt Davis, southeastern sales manager.

The local Astor Branch has moved its office from the United Artists Film Building to the National Screen building. R. F. Pinson, Astor Branch manager, states that he feels this will prove more of a convenience to the exhibitors, since the National Screen building houses, not only the National Screen local office, but Screen Guild, Film Classics, and Kay Film Exchanges as well.

Paul Wilson, Fox district manager, was in town this week conferring with J. E. Holston, branch manager.

Sidney Samuelson and Jack Kirsch of National Allied and Leon Bamberger representing RKO are scheduled to speak. All independent exhibitors in the Minneapolis film zone have been invited to attend the meet, but only paid-up NCA members will be allowed to participate in the discussions.

John J. Friedl, president of Minnesota Amusement Co., is back at work, fully recovered from an operation last June. Friedl was in New York and at his orange grove in Texas during part of his period of recuperation. His offices were redecorated during his absence as a surprise.

Ben Meshbesher, formerly salesman at PRC, is now at Warner Bros., while Don Halloran, formerly salesman at Republic, is now at PRC.

New faces on Film Row are Betty Mae Ames, bookkeeper at National Screen Service, Bernice Riggle, assistant cashier at Universal, Calvin Heath, poster clerk, at Republic, and Ellen Holmgren, inspectress at Universal.

Nuptial news is the engagement of Patricia Prehn, receptionist at Universal, to Cornelius

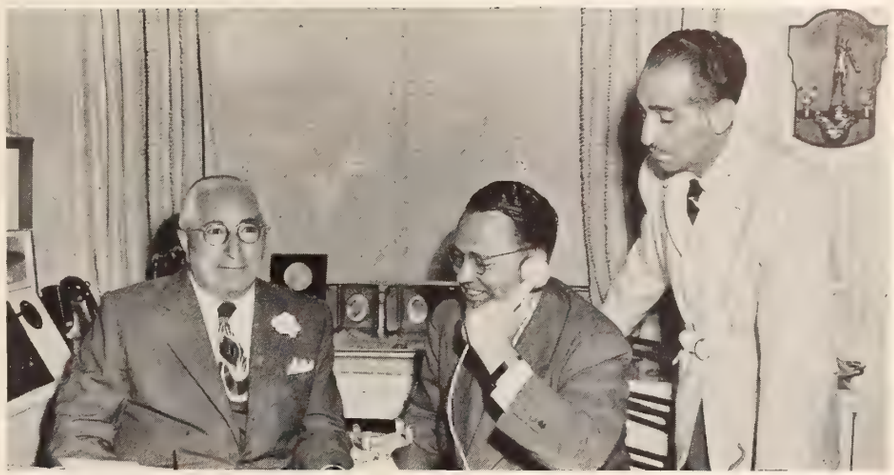
Van Fleet. They will be married next January. Joyce Randall, booker at National Screen Service, has chosen Nov. 15 as the date for her marriage to Orin B. Pierce.

The shortage of theatre equipment is holding up the opening of new theatres in this territory. Chairs especially are in short supply as are drapery materials, carpeting and curtain controls. The shortges are causing a hardship on returned veterans, many of whom have their buildings completed, but can't get the necessary equipment. The one bright spot in the picture is the abundance of popcorn machines.

The office force, strippers and inspectresses at MGM had their annual dinner and theatre party Nov. 6. Dinner was at the Raddison Hotel followed by attendance of "Up in Central Park" at the Lyceum.

W. R. Frank, Minneapolis producer, has left for Hollywood in hopes of getting production started on "Dan Patch."



Recent out-of-town visitors on Film Row were Paul Perrizo of Blue Earth, Minn., Frank Fowler of Forest Lake, Minn., Jack Heywood of New Richmond, Wis., A. C. Mullens of Olivia, Minn., Clint Norene of Frederick, Wis., Dave Hulbert of Augusta, Wis., Dr. Moe of Oakes, N. D., and Don Tracy of Carrington, N. D.

George Miner, head of the Miner circuit in Wisconsin, has purchased the Majestic theatre building in Bloomer, Wis., and has been negotiating for the equipment in the house from George Gassen, operator. R. A. Bockland has purchased the Family Theatre at North Branch, Minn., from Norman Engstrom.

John Anderson, who operates theatres at Plankinton, White Lake, Artesian, and Letcher, S. D., has turned the houses over to his son-in-law, Bud Carroll.

Foundation work has been completed on the new Hoven Theatre at Bowdle, S. D., being built by Vincent Hoven. The house will seat 350 and the second floor will have apartments for veterans.

Jay Turbett has opened the Glenville Theatre at Glenville, Minn., in Woodman Hall. C. E. Gordon has opened the Villa Theatre at Lovilla, Iowa, which had been closed for several years.

WHAT COMES NATURALLY. When Managing Director Guy Eyssell, center, signed up MGM's "The Yearling" for the Radio City Music Hall, New York, it was natural that Sidney Franklin, producer of the film, should be present in the office of Louis B. Mayer, MGM studio chieftain, for the signing of the papers. Franklin, right, holds the record as the producer with the greatest number of his pictures to play the big New York showhouse.

TORONTO

REJECTS SUGGESTIONS TO LIFT ADMISSION CONTROLS; FIRE DESTROYS 62-YEAR SHOW HOUSE

Indirectly replying to spokesmen of the theatre business in Canada in their demand for the immediate revocation of government wartime controls and the return of free enterprise, Hon. Douglas Abbott, member of the Dominion Cabinet, said the removal of price controls would be "fatal". All the benefit which had accrued during the war and in the first year of peace would be lost, he said, if government regulations were suddenly lifted.

Expressing the view of the Canadian film industry, J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players Canadian Corp. and Hon. J. E. Lawson of Odeon Theatres of Canada had previously told the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario at Toronto that wartime control had become obsolete and that the business would progress only as a free enterprise.

Norman S. Robertson, member of the board of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has been elected president of the North American Life Assurance Company, Toronto, in succession to the late D. E. Kilgour.

Still wider attention is being devoted to juveniles in the film and broadcasting fields, following the creation of "movie clubs" at theatres throughout Canada by Odeon Theatres and Famous Players. The Royal Ontario Museum at Toronto has inaugurated a series of commercial film presentations in its theatre for which an admission is charged while the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has announced that four hours will be devoted each week to juvenile programs on the government-controlled networks. In the case of the Royal Ontario Museum, the first screen bill on Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 1 and 2, comprised the feature "Dark Rapture" and short subjects including a colored cartoon. The admission for children is 20 cents.

The Theatre Amusement Co. has moved its head office outside of Toronto proper to a new property at 1295 Bayview Avenue in York County. It was formerly located at 167 Eglinton Avenue East in the city's North End, some four miles from the center of the city. The company, headed by Sam Fingold and Ralph Dale, operates 12 rural theatres in Ontario. The move is in line with a decentralization of business activities in the Toronto area.

Joseph Garbarino, prominent independent neighborhood theatre proprietor of Toronto, has been elected president of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario in succession to Morris Stein, Eastern Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp. Clare J. Appel, division manager of Odeon Theatres of Canada, Toronto, has been elected vice-president. The secretary is H. C. D. Main, proprietor of theatres at Listowel and Sutton, Ont., and the treasurer is E. S. Meehan, owner of the Academy Theatre, Lindsay, The executive secretary, Arch H. Jolley, remains.

A former Toronto independent exhibitor for many years, Tom Walton has organized plans for a community center in the rapidly-growing suburb of Willowdale, outside of Toronto.

First arrangements for Christmas parties among theatre staffs in Toronto have already been made. Suburban managers of Famous Players Canadian Corp. have decided to stage their third annual combined festivities at the Runnymede Theatre where the hosts will be Manager Maurice J. Doyle and his staff organization.

Grant Charter for Tent

The National Variety Club unanimously granted a charter for a tent to the Toledo Variety Club, National Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell announced this week. The charter will be presented at an inaugural dinner to be held in mid-December.

Present officers of the Toledo Tent are: Jack Lykes, Chief Barker; Jack O'Connell, First Assistant; Marvin Harris, Second Assistant; Milt Karloff, Property Master; Burt Schoonmaker, Dough Guy. The six canvasmen are: Jack Armstrong, Jules Robb, Steve Toth, James Dempsey, Paul Heuter and Curly Posen. The National Canvasman will be elected in the immediate future.

INDIANAPOLIS

RENOVATED KEITH'S THEATRE REOPENS; VARIETY CLUB MEETS

One of this city's old theatrical landmarks, Keith's Theatre, re-opened Nov. 9, completely remodeled inside and out. Art Baker has been named manager. Baker was manager of the Circle Theatre here before entering the Army.

The Variety Club of Indianapolis, Tent No. 10, will hold its annual election of officers, Nov. 11 at 8 p.m. in the clubrooms. R. W. Tileston, former assistant manager of the Hotel Washington, has been named club manager.

Peter Rosian, Universal district manager, and Ted Mendelssohn, branch manager, called on Louisville, Ky., exhibitors last week.

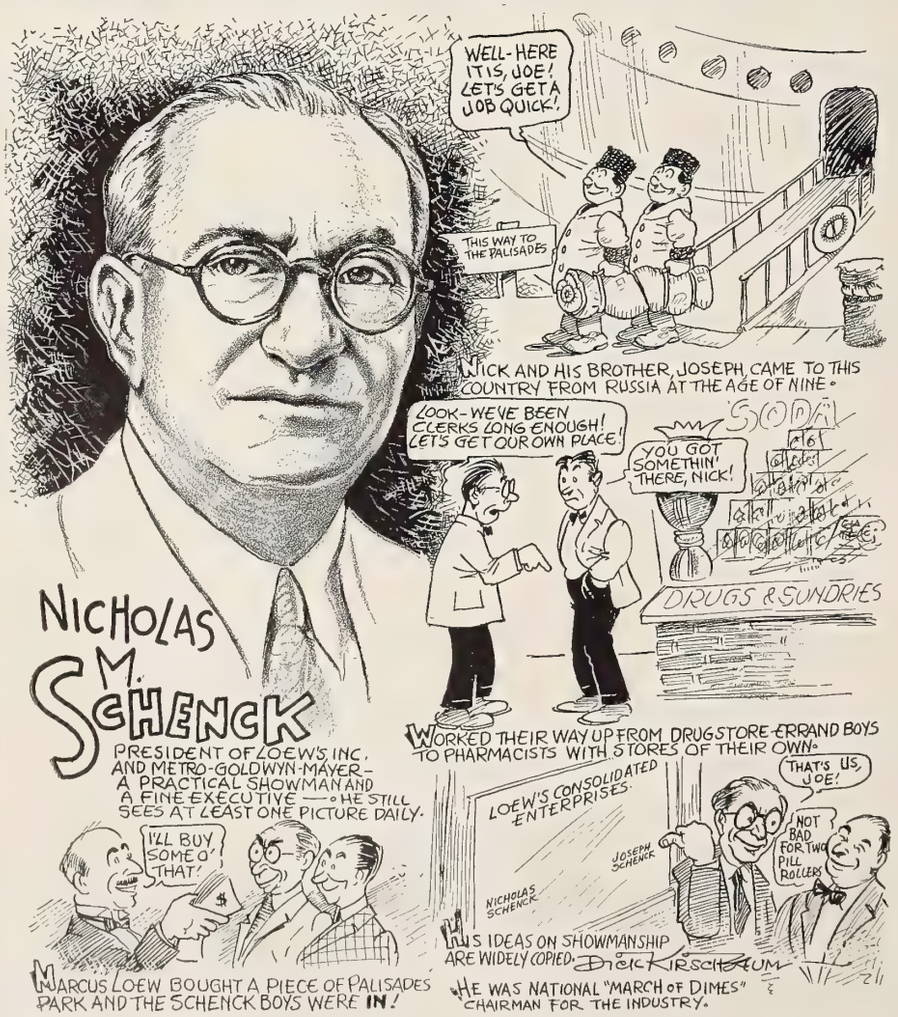
BRIDGEPORT

Murray Kauffman, owner of the Liberty, has announced the appointment of Harry Foster as manager. Foster is no stranger to show business in Bridgeport. For a time he served as manager of the Park City. He returns here from New Canaan, where he has been managing the Playhouse for the Prudential Playhouses, a New York City circuit to further the renovation, redecoration and modernization program which Kauffman has under way for his house.



Ralph Forrester Stitt, exploitation man for 20th Century-Fox in this area, plans to marry Dorothy Parker, a Bridgeporter and former show girl, in New York City this week.

Morris Jacobson, general manager of the Strand Amusement Co., largest independent theatre circuit in this territory, has announced the appointment of "Otto" (Arthur) Esposito as manager of the Capitol. The new manager is deeply interested in the theatre, has a lively flare for exploitation, a level-headed approach to organization and a natural ability for winning and keeping friends. His first job was at the Strand where he worked in the projection booth winding up reels after school. Motor-driven projectors were unheard of then. Much of his training was under direction of Matt L. Saunders, manager of Loew's-Poli, who has a reputation for building his aides into ace managers.

Harold Tabackman, owner of the Bostwick Theatre, and his wife, Evelyn, are receiving congratulations on their wedding anniversary.

James G. Belcher, former manager of the Capitol, Bridgeport, is returning to New Haven to manage the Capitol Theatre there.

HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION!

MOVIE-GOERS come back more often to the theatre, large or small, that has High Intensity Projection! Because they appreciate the brighter screen...the sharper black-and-white images ... the richer color scenes.

This has been the experience of theatre managers throughout the country. In fact, so effective is this type of projection in boosting admissions that no theatre can afford to be without it.

For example, consider what One-Kilowatt High Intensity Projection means to even the smallest theatre! It means prestige ... admissions ... profits. Its cost? Even if it fills but a few extra seats a day, High Intensity Projection will pay for itself.

Start your modernization program with Simplified High Intensity lamps. Get in touch today with your supply house.

Gentlemen:

It is with particular satisfaction that we have just installed a pair of your new Strong projection arc lamps in our East Auditorium Theatre during the time that you are celebrating the production of lamp number 25,000, because one of these new lamps is number 25,000.

In 1925 we purchased the first pair of Strong lamps made. They were installed in our East Auditorium Theatre, where they have continued giving the complete satisfaction which you promised at that time.

Harry Strong told us then that no one could produce lamps that could compare with his, and he was right. Consequently, since that time we have never used any but Strong lamps and rectifiers in any of our theatres. In fact, whenever we took over a theatre with other equipment we immediately replaced it with Strong product.

We congratulate you on the celebration of the production of lamp number 25,000 and wish you continued success in your endeavors.

Yours very truly,

The Theatre Advisory Council Guide To Good Operation

You Will Want to File This Copy of STR! Compendium of All the Council's Advice to Date

For eighteen months the distinguished operating and maintenance chiefs who comprise the membership of STR's Theatre Advisory Council have generously given their experienced opinions on a host of practical theatre problems.

They will continue their invaluable aid to STR's readers; but this month the Council does not meet. It is time to pause and take stock; to assemble in more compact form and to summarize the guidance they have already extended.

That summary, presented below, is in effect a treatise on how to operate theatres efficiently. To the innumerable difficulties of the theatre these Council members bring that intimate knowledge of the building and its furnishings which only specialists can hope to possess. The conclusions they draw from this knowledge they have been good enough to place before the readers of this publication, for the benefit of the industry as a whole. Those conclusions are here compiled in a compendium of supremely expert opinion, such as has never before been available to anyone in all this industry.

The Council meetings have considered these varied subjects, among others:

Chairs
Carpets
Construction
Remodeling
Training of Personnel
Sale of Refreshments
Future Policies Safety
Servicing Aids
Purchase of Supplies Lighting
Screens
Acoustics

Outstanding in discussions covering so vast a field is the fact that in every detail to which they turned their attention the Council members put the patron first. The comfort, safety and enjoyment of people who lay down their half-dollars on the deal plate has continuously outranked and overruled all other considerations; at every turn economy and convenience of operation were granted only second place by these men who run the nation's most successful theatres.

Perhaps that is the secret of success.

Chairs

Audience comfort is held to be the first requirement in theatre seating. The members strongly believe in sacrificing valuable floor area for the sake of wider seats more generously spaced. They favor 20-21 inch chairs, with a trend toward even greater width. Although the law in most situations permits installing rows of chairs only 30 inches apart, the majority of the Council prefer spacing of more than 33 inches.

Prompt repair of any chair faults is a "must" and to make sure faults are fixed promptly frequent inspection is advised; either daily or a quick inspection daily followed by a very thorough one either once or twice each week. Where local upholstery service is not readily available the members favor purchase of at least ten extra chairs. These are installed as replacements whenever necessary and the faulty chairs sent five at a time to a distant upholsterer.

Upholtery of medium thickness is preferred, with very heavy upholstery where acoustic conditions will benefit by it. A large majority of the members want chairs with fabric backs and leatherette covered seats. Foam rubber is favored over conventional padding, with some qualification. Few members care for slip covers, and these only in special areas, such as loges.

Chairs, incidentally, were held to be the one item of theatre furnishings most urgently in need of postwar replacement.

Carpets

Carpets rate second only to chairs as an urgent postwar need. Use of the best quality available, in preference to less expensive grades that will need more frequent replacement, has almost unanimous approval. The low pile type of carpet is preferred, with Velvet the favorite weave and Wilton second. The same weave, grade and pattern should be used in all locations in the theatre. Solid colors are in little favor.

Fluorescent carpeting illuminated by ultra violet light is approved, but most members feel that at present costs its use must necessarily be restricted to de luxe situations.

Provision for recessing the carpet into the floor should be made whenever new floors are laid down. Underpadding is highly desirable; very heavy underpadding wherever acoustic conditions will benefit by it. Sponge rubber for underlay is favored by those members who have had experience with it; provided, however, that the rubber is not exposed to high temperatures, as in locations near radiators or over heating ducts.

Rubber mats should be used, members feel, (at least in those areas that get the heaviest wear) for the protection of the carpet and prolongation of its life; but fabric runners are not well thought of. Council opinion is divided as to the desirability of rubber nosing on stairs.

Carpets must be kept clean by frequent

NEW THEATRES

The Snootiest Theatre on Earth

The snootiest, most snobbish theatre on earth, Walter Reade's new Park Avenue, located on the famous street of that name, outritzes even New York's Metropolitan Opera.

Once inside the sacred portals ladies will find a licensed beautician ready to attend them without charge. They will find on display two glass showcases of Charles of the Ritz cosmetics, any of which, individually wrapped, is theirs for the asking. Bridge tables and cards will be at their disposal in the downstairs lounge, where free coffee and sandwiches will be served; and where if they prefer television to bridge they can watch the largest and most luxurious of Dumont receivers. Objects of art frequently replaced, will be on display throughout.

Gentlemen so inclined may pass on down to the basement, to observe the workings of a 250-ton air conditioning system which has been surrounded with a platform along which patrons may stroll. A uniformed attendant will answer their questions and explain the machinery.

As at New York's Metropolitan Opera, patronage will be largely by annual subscription. Seats not subscribed for are placed on sale two weeks in advance at the box office. The annual subscription entitles those who buy it to attend only on the day and hour allotted to them, and to occupy only those seats which they have rented by the year—except as special concessions may be obtained on occasion by telephoning to Manager David T. Kearney.

"We won't have any trouble filling the subscription lists," the Reade office says. "Americans love that 'exclusive' label."

The theatre is expected to be in operation about the time this issue of Showmen's reaches the hands of its readers; although the opening may be slightly delayed if the New York trucking strike continues.

Policy

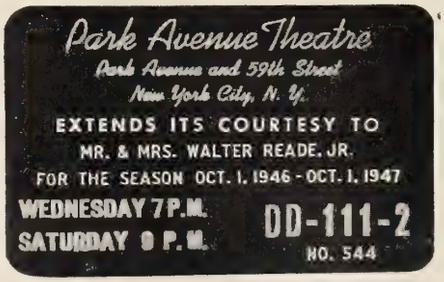
Each subscriber receives a gold-and-black plastic identification card, which he presents to the doorman. These individual admission cards cost $52.00 per seat, plus tax, for those who desire to attend the 7 o'clock performance; and $78.00 a year, plux tax, for those who prefer the 9 o'clock showing. In subscribing each patron specifies the day and hour he will attend. By telephoning the management 12 to 15 hours in advance, he can change his admission time, or cancel his subscription for a specified period of time and receive a proportionate refund.

A booklet mailed to subscribers weekly informs them of coming attractions.

The program will consist of one feature picture, which may run a few weeks after the regularly scheduled Broadway houses, a newsreel, supporting shorts, and one 16-mm. historical or educational film of a type not obtainable on 35-mm. stock.

The Theatre

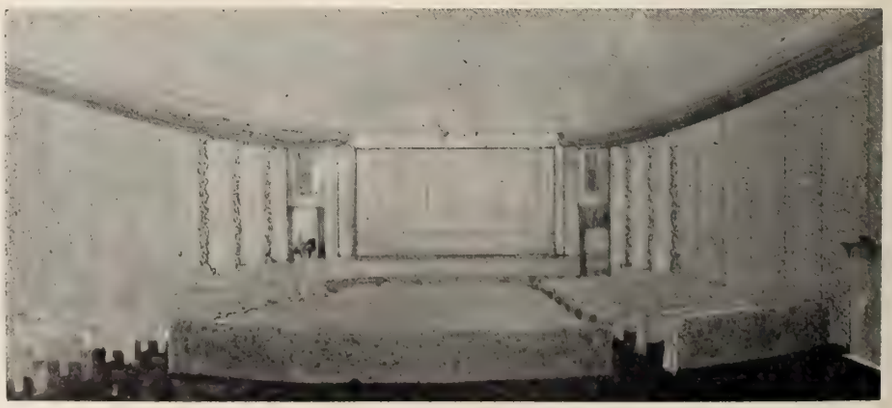
The site is that of the old Anderson Art Galleries, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. Since the art gallery was erected, New York City has passed building ordinances which would require sacrifice of twenty feet of space at both sides if the old structure were razed completely. Therefore its shell was left standing, cleaned, sand-blasted, and the new theatre built inside of it. The total cost is nevertheless well over one million dollars, the Reade office declared.



The Park Avenue has no marquee, no name sign in the usual sense, no attraction boards. Its entrance is protected by a canopy of the hotel or apartment house type, lettered "Park Avenue Theatre." At either side of the entrance are small display frames setting forth the current attraction and the names of its stars; but there is no notice of future attractions, and (since casual passersby are not wanted) no attempt to attract the public.

The facade will, however, display the flags of seven foreign nations whose pictures will be shown from time to time—England, France, China, Holland, Sweden, Mexico and Czecho-Slovakia.

The entrance lobby is separated from the street by a glass wall and transparent glass doors. It is carpeted throughout. There are poster frames located as usual; but they are 8 inches deep and will not display notices of coming pictures, but works of art, replaced every two weeks. There is a small box-office in the entrance lobby, but it is not for subscribers. It sells such reservations as are available, and tickets for matinees or special occasions; the subscriber-patron merely shows his black-and-gold identification to the doorman.



The inner end of the entrance lobby terminates in a row of four doors. The two at the right lead to the auditorium, the two at the left to the upstairs lounge.

The upstairs lounge gives access to small men's and women's rooms (for invalid patrons who would find stairs difficult to negotiate) and also to the manager's office. Its principal structural feature is its great mirrored wall. The auditorium may be entered by way of this lounge, as well as directly from the entrance lobby. Social Center

On his right, as he enters the downstairs lounge, the patron finds a snack bar prepared to serve coffee, tea and light sandwiches. Opposite, along the left wall, are the doors to men's and women's lounges. The two other walls are lined with bridge tables. Cards, chess sets or backgammon sets can be obtained on request at the snack bar. Between the bridge tables that line one wall is a large Dumont television receiver, beside which is posted an accurate television program.

The game tables are glass-topped, and do double duty as display cases for miniatures, rare jewelry, and small pieces of sculpture—all changed every two weeks.

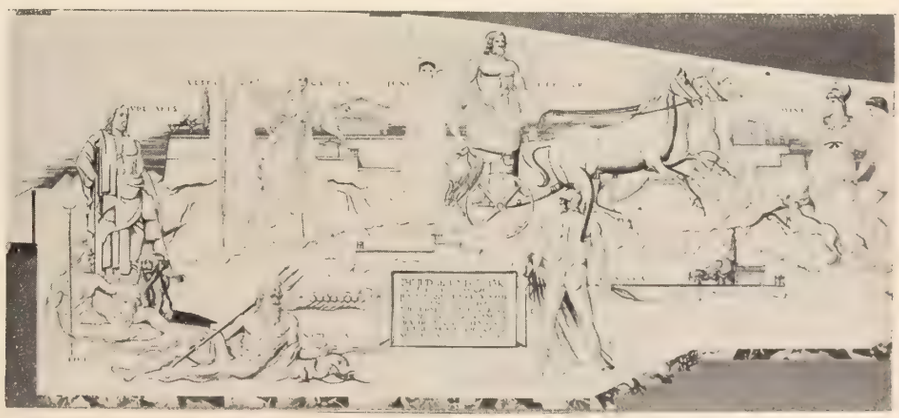
A beautician trained by Charles of the Ritz is on duty in the women's lounge, where also there are two show cases with individually wrapped Charles of the Ritz cosmetics, supplied by that company without charge to patrons, through a tie-in arrangement with Walter Reade. One wall is occupied only by a dressing-table shelf, which will accommodate five patrons.

Whereas the carpet throughout all the rest of the theatre is light brown, that in this women's lounge is light pink. The ceiling is antique gold, the cosmetic show cases antique glass. There are lighting brackets along the walls, and indirect fluorescent lighting is reflected from the ceiling.

Auditorium

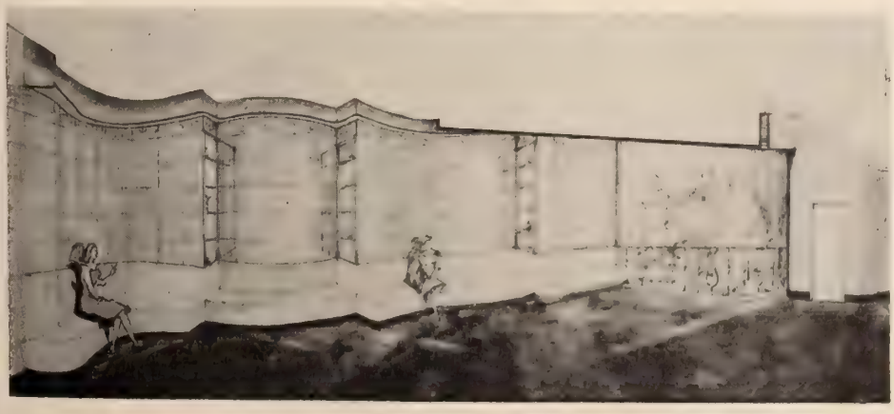
The auditorium is finished in the same light brown and tan color scheme that pervades the whole theatre. It is of the stadium type, with a total of 586 seats, and facilities for wheel chairs in the cross-over aisle. Arrangements are made whereby wheel chairs when brought to the correct position hook into place. A trough running around the rim of the ceiling supplies indirect fluorescent lighting and conditioned air. The screen platform is equipped with stage-type lighting, but there is no actual stage. At the request of subscribers, their seats are wired for hearing aids. A Hammond organ is located at the left front corner of the auditorium; the right front corner has an exit opening on Park Avenue. Carpeting extends throughout, even under the chairs.

Chairs are by Ideal Seating Company, purchased through Joe Hornstein. "Love seats" designed by Lehigh Furniture Company are used throughout the smoking mezzanine.



Equipment

Projection is by Simplex E-7 mechanisms and Magnarc lamps. Arc current is obtained through a Hertner 70-140 ampere generator. Film cabinets are Neumade.



The sound system is a Simplex B-60, with emergency channel, utilizing Altec Voice of the Theatre speakers.

The 16-mm. sound projector is by Bell & Howell; it operates through the Altec speaker system.

Air conditioning is provided through apparatus constructed by Center Air Conditioning Company of New York and comprising U. S. Air Conditioning blowers, Carrier compressors, and Paterson-Kelly water chiller. Fifty Westinghouse Sterilamps have been installed in the air conditioning duct to purify the air.

Maintenance Memos for MANAGERS

NOV. 11

Check sign flashers for cleanliness of points, tightness of connections, and lubrication.

NOV. 12

Clean switchboard, bus board and dimmer banks. Check all contacts for loose connections.

NOV. 13

Test all bolts for marquee and signs as check against weakening thru invisible corrosion.

NOV. 14

Go over weather stripping on windows, doors and vent covers to conserve fuel.

NOV. 15

Check all motors as to lubrication, condition of belts, brushes, bearings and wiring.

NOV. 16

Inspect sidewalks all around theatre for bad breaks caused by frost. Avoid accidents.

NOV. 17

Place signs in the rest rooms urging patrons to conserve paper towels; prevent needless waste.

NOV. 18

Complete preparations for Tranksgiving decorations that will not add to the fire hazard.

NOV. 19

Check with cleaners on out-of-sight areas, as tops of mouldings, for odor-creating dirt.

NOV. 20

Is your ticket supply ample for coming holiday seasons? Order now for early delivery.

NOV. 21

Check fire extinguisher refill dates; make sure all are ready for use at instant's notice.

NOV. 22

Check condition of marquee letters and manner of handling. Are all fonts still complete?

NOV. 23

Save carpet wear, keep grime from being tracked into theatre in bad weather, by using mats.

NOV. 24

Check ceilings and ornamental plaster for loose areas dangerous to patrons or employes.

NOV. 25

Inspect staff uniforms for condition and maintenance needs. Insist on tidy appearance always.

NOV. 26

Go over lamps in shadow boxes and enclosed fixtures. Relamp and clean backing or glass.

NOV. 27

Do you check exit doors thoroughly before opening and after closing as a daily safety measure?

NOV. 28

Inspect door checks for loose anchorage, need of fluid replacement, noisy action. Repair promptly.

NOV. 29

Order Xmas tree and decorations. Check lighting and ornaments, saved since last year.

NOV. 30

Check carpets at tops of aisles for loose sag which starts costly wear and causes accidents.

DEC. 1

Do exposed poster frames and doors need revarnishing? Protect them against winter weather.

DEC. 2

Keep all soap dispensing units filled. Empty ones annoy patrons and reflect lax management.

DEC. 3

Sticky candy tramped in your carpet invites rodent invasion. See that cleaners do thorough job.

DEC. 4

Revise outdoor lighting schedule for early darkness at this season of the year.

DEC. 5

Check throughout auditorium and lounges for winter drafts that may be annoying to patrons.

DEC. 6

Be sure checker raises volume when house fills. Heavy winter clothing absorbs sound.

DEC. 7

Does every employe know EXACTLY what he or she is to do in case of fire or panic?

DEC. 8

Are plans complete for prompt removal of snow from marquee and roof of auditorium?

THEATRE EQUIPMENT IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Toledo Exhibit Focus Attention of Industry on New Models

OSCAR NEU
President
Theatre Equipment Manufacturers Association

RAY G. COLVIN
President
Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association

Success unprecedented in any affair of the kind in this industry is promised for the Toledo convention of the Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturer's Association, to be held November 8th-11th. Last minute reports indicate all exhibit space has been sold. More than 80 manufacturers will be present, some 50 of them exhibiting. More than 350 hotel rooms have been reserved.

The gathering, to be held in association with the annual convention of the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association, is now certain to prove the largest convention and trade show that manufacturers and dealers in this industry ever have had.

Hotel reservations are being secured by Clarice Canelli, Secretary, Toledo Convention and Visitors' Bureau, Toledo 4, Ohio, at the Commodore Perry, Secor, Fort Meigs, Willard and Hillcrest hotels. The Tesma administration office is in the Secor.

Tesma will conduct election of its officers at the convention. Present officers are: Oscar Neu, Neumade Products Corp., President; William A. Gedris, Ideal Seating Company, Vice-President; Roy Boomer, Secretary-Treasurer.

Tedpa president is Ray G. Colvin, Exhibitors Supply Co., St. Louis. Tedpa executive committee is composed of Joe Hornstein, Joe Hornstein, Inc., New York; Will Carroll, Falls City Theatre Equipment Co., Louisville, Ky., and A. E. Thiele, Des Moines Theatre Supply, Des Moines, Iowa.

Following is the scheduled order of business:

Friday, Nov. 8

EQUIPMENT LITERATURE BUREAU

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW will gladly forward requests for free literature pertaining to theatre equipment and the maintenance thereof. Theatremen are urged to use this service to keep themselves informed on new equipment, improved equipment and methods of maintaining the showhouse in an efficient and economical manner. There is absolutely no obligation involved in your request for the booklets described below. Information on items of equipment not listed likewise may be requested and we will endeavor to obtain for all theatremen the desired material. Readers who desire special information on any subject may address such requests to the bureau, where they will receive prompt attention. In requesting literature or other information of this Bureau, please write name, name of theatre, and address plainly. Our only request is that the name of the theatre as well as street address must appear on all blanks or letters.

ACOUSTICAL MATERIAL. With today's sound equipment, acoustics rather than apparatus constitute the greatest single cause of poor sound. Moreover, the theatre that was acoustically satisfactory for the limited-range sound of older systems may not be suited to later, improved sound quality—the absorbing materials of the auditorium may be inadequate at the higher frequencies. Materials for acoustical correction, and for quieting machine noise or street noises, are described and illustrated in detail in a booklet issued by Armstrong Cork Co., yours for the asking. (#1).

AIR CONDITIONING. Varieties of conditioning equipment, ranging from simple blowers, coolers and air washers to complete "package" units that refrigerate, de-humidify and all but manufacture new air, cover an enormous range of mechanical devices and contrivances. Every theatre cannot use the same conditioning apparatus. Location, availability of cold well water, type of patronage and many other factors enter into the problem of intelligent selection and should be matched against the nature and capabilities of equipment available. A number of very different devices for securing desirable air conditioning are described briefly in a folder issued by United States Air Conditioning Corp. Compact and easily read, this folder will give any theatre manager an outline of methods and equipments, to help him choose those best suited to his own circumstances. (#2).

ANCHORING DEVICES. When a two-hundred pound patron drops abruptly into a theatre chair not only the chair but the anchoring devices may take a severe wrench. Expansion bolts have been developed and improved through half a century for just such strains. There is a helpful folder issued by Chicago Expansion Bolt Company which illustrates and describes time-tested anchoring devices. Their use is not confined to theatre chairs alone; there are models adapted to anchoring machinery, handrails, lighting fixtures and in fact about everything that needs to be strongly but simply fastened down to stay (#3).

CURTAIN CONTROLS. Curtain sizes vary from theatre to theatre; the type of drape desired in the curtain varies according to the decorative scheme; therefore curtain control equipment must partake of the nature of a tailor-made proposition, with the length and type of curtain track, size and type of motor, location and nature of controlling switches, all adapted to particular requirements. The flexibility with which standard units can be combined to meet individual needs is well set forth in a pamphlet issued by Automatic Devices Company. If you are planning a new theatre, re-modeling an old one, or merely having trouble with your existing curtain machinery, this pamphlet may help you materially. (#4).

DEODORIZING DEVICE. A mechanical, automatically acting deodorizing device that needs no electrical connections is described in an illustrated bulletin issued by S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corp. Known as "Lavador", it fastens to the top of the rest room door somewhat in the manner of an automatic door-closer. Opening and closing the door operates a small plunger, thus allowing some of the deodorizing gas to escape. The chemical used is a solid, slowly evaporating block of aromatics and perfumes compounded with paradichlorbenzene. A full description is contained in the two-color illustrated folder, which will reach you promptly on request. (#5).

FURNITURE. It all depends on the decorative scheme, but if your lounges and foyers are modern in styling you can't do better than to furnish them with modern chairs and tables. Metal furniture consisting of tubular chrome plated or aluminum frames is the most easily maintained, and the most nearly indestructible, of any furniture ever made. Doehler Metal Furniture Co. has brought out a full color booklet illustrating chairs, chair groups and settees upholstered in natural leather, duPont Fabricoid or the customer's own material. They are pictured in all shades of the rainbow, to aid you in judging for yourself how they will look in your own theatre. (#6).

LIGHTING. The modern theatre lures with light, decorates with light. Two booklets by Westinghouse Electric Corp. cover the subject of theatre lighting exhaustively and from every angle. (They are yours for the asking). In them you will find details of lamps available, and suggested lighting schemes for the theatre front, the marquee, foyer, lobby, rest rooms, auditorium and stage—a number of illustrated suggestions for each. Types of lighting fixtures suited to every location in the theatre and every type of lamp are illustrated in full detail. There is also a very complete discussion of fluorescent lamps, their method of operation and conditions for best life performance. A full page is devoted to germicidal ultra-violet lamps. For all the competently attractive and easy-reading presentation of the material in these booklets it is remarkably detailed. Persons who are well-equipped with lighting knowledge can still leaf through their pages with advantage and benefit; to others they should prove very highly valuable indeed. (#7).

MARQUEE (CHANGEABLE) LETTERS. Most theatres derive a substantial portion of their revenue from mere transients—people who stroll past or near the theatre and decide to go in after they see what's playing. The changeable letters tell them. The letters must be eminently visible. They must be attractive. And immune to weather. You should read a full-color, staple-folder of Wagner Sign Service, Inc., which includes very complete and thoroughly illustrated descriptive material, mounting instructions, lighting instructions, and highly helpful suggestions for preparing attractive and informative "copy." Are you certain you are getting the utmost possible advertising value out of your own changeable letters? (#8).

MOTOR GENERATORS. Century-Roth has brought out an attractive two-color, illustrated folder setting forth the characteristics of their arc supply generators (marketed through RCA). Two-bearing and four-bearing types are listed, including a four-bearing type for low power high intensity lamps which needs no ballast resistor (#9).

MOTOR-GENERATOR. One of the favored methods of providing the projection lamps with the kind of power they need. Illustrated literature of Hertner Electric Co. describes these machines and their associated control equipment. (#10).

POPCORN MACHINES. Sales appeal must be combined with sturdiness and effective operation in popcorn machines for theatre use. An unattractive machine, or one hard to keep in attractive condition, won't sell so much corn. Star Manufacturing Co. has issued a six-page, two-color folder picturing their popcorn devices, explaining their operation with the help of informative detailed pictures and likewise illustrating their installation, disassembly for cleaning, and general maintenance—everything, in fact, a theatreman will want to know about a popcorn machine. STR's Equipment Literature Bureau will be happy to forward your request for this useful bulletin. (#11).

POWER PLANT (FOR EMERGENCIES). If you are certain the utility employes in your location will never go on strike and that power lines will never break under stress of weather in your part of the country, then you will not want the bulletins of the Consolidated Diesel Electric Corp. They detail the kind of mechanical insurance available to you against a day (or a week) of no business owing to power failure. In these bulletins you will find complete ratings, illustrations, specifications and installation requirements for diesel or gasoline-driven eletcric generators ranging in output from 10 to 50 kilowatts, 50 or 60 cycles. (#12).

PROJECTION LAMP. High intensity projection lamps drawing up to 70 amperes at the arc are described in a folder issued by Strong Electric Corp. Four models are discussed, together with rectifiers for supplying them with operating current and reflectors for utilizing their light at the maximum possible efficiency. (#13).

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. The heart of every theatre is the hard-working machine that puts the picture on the screen. It must do a job of very rapid, incessant start-stop action on a tenderly fragile strip of film and still be as nearly immune to breakdown as human ingenuity can contrive. An illustrated pamphlet issued by Century Projector Corp. sets forth many of the details of one recently-designed model; it describes the machine that creates the show. (#14).

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. The new Superior projector, designated model "A", is described in a four-page illustrated folder. All manufacturing rights to the Superior were recently acquired by J. Burgi Contner, president of Blue Seal Cine Devices, Inc. Under his direction the old Model U has been revised and improved into the present Model A, which fits any standard soundhead without need for special attachments. Mechanical and operating features of the new mechanism are described in this two-color, illustrated folder, which STR's Equipment Literature Bureau will gladly arrange to have sent. (#15).

RADIO PARTS useful in the projection room and the theatre generally are listed in an 8-page illustrated flyer issued by Radio-Wire-Television, Inc. Tubes, fluorescent lighting fixtures, test meters, non-synch equipment, headphones and speaker units are included, along with repair parts such as resistors, condensers and transformers. (#16).
